10 CENT "CASCAPETS" IS YOUR LAXITIVE

Get a 10-cent box.

Put aside—just once—the Salts, Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels,—but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage organs, and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.

Keep your "insides" pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken, and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Severe Colds, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

Rumour States That Germany is About to Invade Holland

Reports That Germany and Holland Are Massing Troops

Along the Dutch-Belgian Frontier---Public Opinion in the Netherlands Becoming More Concerned Over German Attacks on Dutch Shipping.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 8.—Wild reports that both Germany and Holland were quickly massing troops along the Dutch-Belgian frontier, coupled with almost incidental rumours that Germany was about to invade Holland, reached London to-day from British sources at The Hague, Amsterdam and other Dutch cities.

For obvious reasons London papers laid great stress upon these reports. In neutral quarters it was said that while public opinion in the Netherlands, undoubtedly, was becoming more concerned over the reported German attacks on Dutch shipping, no situation exists to warrant the belief in any possible open break. It was pointed out that Holland is almost equally incensed over the restrictions laid by the British blockade of Germany.

Several Amsterdam despatches to London News agencies reported that the Germans were mssing Landsturm regiments and cavalry along the Belgian-Dutch border. One despatch reported the Kaiser's troops were entrenching on a line leading northward from Antwerp, and that part of the guns of Antwerp had been dismantled and transported to strategic positions near the frontier of Holland.

From The Hague came other advices from British sources saying that for the past fortnight southern parts near Belgium have been quietly reinforced with men and artillery. The Dutch regular army of 350,000 was reported to be fully armed and prepared for any eventuality.

GERMAN LOSSES 1,300,000 IN FIVE MONTHS OF WAR

The French Army.

Our "seventy-five" guns are as perfect to-day as when war broke out.

Ammunition crisis arose but has passed

Complement of machine guns increased since February 1, by one-third.

The German Army.

Germany's "peace" army was 25 corps. At outset she placed in field 61 corps; by January she had 69 corps (about 2,760,000 men).

Germany's effort attained maximum at battle of Flanders, when 50 army corps fought French and British.

From the moment of defeat in Flanders, Germany has lost the initiative. She had put all her eggs in one basket. She attained a maximum of tension with minimum of results.

German losses to January 15, were 1,900,000 men (1,200,000 net; 260,000 a month).

Most German regiments have had to be completely renewed.

Germany's total men available for war were 5,500,000; net losses to January, 1,200,000; now at front 3,000,000; leaving in reserve 3,300,000.

Of the 3,300,000 reserves, only 2,000,000 can be effective, and their value is doubtful.

As losses have been at least 260,000 a month, it is evident reserves cannot suffice to fill the gaps of war, for 10 months longer.

German heavy artillery is wearing out and is not being replaced, modern rifle supplies are exhausted and munitions are running short.

MEETING OF THE HAVELOCK COUNCIL

Will Sue For Unpaid Taxes—To Equalize Cost of Division Court

HAVELOCK, April 8.—The Council is getting weary at the slow rate the 1914 taxes are being paid and issued instructions to sue for all taxes not paid by the 20th of the month.

A motion was passed confirming the arrangement with the Electric Light Co. whereby the town pays $77.50 a month for the street lights at 110 voltage, and the Clerk was instructed to purchase a voltameter, so that the voltage we are receiving may be accurately determined.

The matter of equalizing the cost of holding Division Court here was discussed and a committee consisting o fthe Reeve, Councillors Coon and Lynch and the Clerk will prepare a statement to be presented to Judge Huycke, asking him to apportion Belmont's share of the expense.

Some accounts were passed and the Council adjourned.

Sees Himself In a Coffin

TORONTO, April 8—Unless a reprieve is received within six days John Ziolko and Tom Cekoski will have to pay the penalty for murdering a fellow countryman in Mount Pleasant Cemetery last December.

The two Poles were both found guilty and the death sentence passed, but a petition was gotten up on behalf of the younger man, Cekoski, to have the death sentence commuted.

After sentence had been passed on the two men Ziolko expressed a wish that his companion should not be hanged, and stating that he was willing to pay the penalty for both.

"Both men are prepared to pay the extreme penalty," said Rev. Joseph Hinzmann, who has been visiting the condemned men almost daily. "Cekoski, however, still has hopes that he will be reprieved.

"Ziolko has drawn a picture of a casket with himself lying in it, and also a picture of himself being hanged. He has made a calendar and marks off the days as they pass and the time comes nearer when he will have to die. He expresses great regret that he was the means of getting Cekoski into the trouble, and says that he is willing to pay the penalty.

He also says that he does not want to be tied or have his eyes covered during his last few minutes on earth. He wants to thank the jail authorities and to shake hands with them for the manner in which he has been treated, and asks that he may be allowed to make a short speech in Polish.

Austro-Italian Situation

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, April 8—(Special Cable)—Contradictory rumours regarding the Austro-Italian situation were received here to-day.

The report that Austria finally had decided to cede Trentino to Italy in return for Italian neutrality, was received. On the other hand British papers printed a despatch, purporting to come from the Italian frontier, asserting this Italian fleet was being concentrated towards the Adriatic.

Eitel Misses Her Chance

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., April 8—The German commerce raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich did not sail from this port last night. Opportunity to leave neutral waters under cover of darkness was afforded by the United States Government, which had denied clearance to merchant ships of Germany's belligerent enemies.

The Russians in Bukowina Escape Austrian Trap

Wide Encircling Manoeuvre to Cut Off Left Flank of the Tsar's Forces Along the River Dniester Ends in Failure

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, via London, April 8.—Despatches from Chotin received here tell of the development and failure of extensive Austrian operations in Bukowina, near the Russian frontier, by which the Austrians hoped to achieve a coup similar to the German feat of cutting off the Russian Army Corps during the last advance into East Prussia.

The Austrians, it is stated, attempted a lightning advance in two directions from Czernowitz, which was used as a base. The first of these, striking northward to Zale Szczyky, to the west of the Russian frontier, attempted an encircling manoeuvre, while the other group proceeded direct to Chotin, across the Russian border.

This exerting pressure from the north and west, the Austrians hoped to catch the Russian left flank along the River Dniester in a vise, cutting them off from their main forces. Three and one half Austrian columns were employed in these manoeuvres.

The preliminary northward movement of the first Australian group was successful in repulsing the Russians occupying Sadegura, a village six miles north of Czernowitz, and then moved in two parallel roads toward the Russian frontier. In the meantime the second group reached a point on the right bank of the Dniester, seven miles from the Russian border. Thence an Austrian brigade of cavalry led an attack upon Chotin, where, according to reports, two columns of Russian cavalry, in smaller numbers than the Austrians, engaged them in a fierce battle, driving the Austrians from the frontier.

Despite the failure of the direct attack upon Chotin, the Austrians continued to develop the encircling movement, attacking the Russian fortifications covering the line on the Dniester, near Zale Szczyky. Although the Austrian offensive in this region is still continuing it is regarded here, in view of the retreat of the other group from Chotin, that the success of the venture is not likely.

LONELY TRAPPER TORN BY BEAR ENDS HIS LIFE

VALDEZ, Alaska, April 8.—First news of a terrible and dramatic tragedy of the hills was brought to this city recently by William Austin, a prospector, who returned from a trip to the vicinity of Seward. He brought with him a scrap of paper upon which King Thurman, a widely known trapper and prospector, had writen a last message after he had been mangled by a bear's claws and before he had ended his sufferings with his revoiver.

Austin and John Wilk, a companion, found the body of Thurman about a hundred feet from his cabin, which is in the vicinity of the point selected by the government for the beginning of the new Alaskan railroad. The trapper had ended his life by shooting himself in the temple. His right side had been torn and chewed from hip to shoulder, and the note which he left had been printed with his left hand, labouriously and apparently when he was suffering torture. The ground was torn up for twenty feet with claws and boots, and a crushed water pail under the body of the trapper showed what brought him from his cabin unarmed, a thing seldom done in this wild section of Alaska.

The note, printed up and down along the edge of a mining claim with a crayon, read:

"Have been torn up by brown bear. No show to get out. Goodby. I am sane, but suffer terrible—want death."

The irregularity with which the last few words of the note were printed showed clearly that Thurman could barely complete them.

A diary found in his cabin had the last entry on July 25, at which time he had written, "Came to-day to my cabin. All well."

The locality is noted for the largest brown bears in the world, and the trappers and prospectors who live within the area are usually armed, even when working about their cabins.

Tninks the Parodi Was Lost at Sea

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, April 8.—The Matin publishes a despatch from its correspondent at Rome, who advances the idea that the Italian steamship Luigi Parodi, said to have been sunk by a German submarine, has been lost at sea. It is improbable, the correspondent says, that she has been the victim of a German sea raider for the reason that these vessels are operating in a zone far removed from the course of the Italian boat.

COLOSSAL STRUGGLE BEING WAGED IN WOEVRE—This map indicates the tremendous effort being made by the French between Metz and Verdun. They have captured Gussainville and positions near Etain and prevented direct communications between Conflan and the German headquarters at Etain.

Killed Two Red Cross Attendants

German Aviator Bombarded a Hospital at Berques

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, April 8.—A German aviator bombarded a hospital at Berques, five miles south of Dunkirk, France, killing two Red Cross attendants and wounding a third, according to despatches received here to-day.

A British soldier and several others near the hospital were injured.

Returning to the German lines a German aeroplane was fired upon and brought down near Steenvoordie.

Both the aviator and his observer were killed.

SIX TURKISH WARSHIPS SUNK

PETROGRAD, April 8.—Six Turkish ships of war and one big transport have been sunk and two of the finest cruisers in the Sultan's navy have been badly damaged in Black Sea operations, according to an official announcement from the Russian Admiralty. The statement, which is a review of operations since December 12th, says:

"Russian mine laying operations off the Bosphorus have given satisfactory results. The Turkish cruiser Tamidieh struck a mine and was badly damaged. A few days later a Turkish gunboat of the Reis type was sunk in the same region. On Jantiary 2 a large transport was sunk. On December 26th the cruiser Sultan Selim (formerly the German cruiser Goeben), was seriously damaged. On January 21st another gunboat of the Reis type was sunk. On February 15th another gunboat was destroyed. A few days later a Turkish torpedo boat destroyer was blown up, and at the same time two other Turkish torpedo boats were lost."

It is officially reported that fighting is in progress between Russian and Turkish land forces on the Black Sea littoral, near Artwin, in Transcaucasia.

Wedged In A Chimney

TORONTO, April 8.—A Toronto lieutenant had a thrilling experience but a sickening one on the battle front. The information comes from the firing line in a letter to friends in the city.

The lieutenant thought he saw something moving at the top of a factory chimney. He watched it for a few minutes. It moved again. "Let me have your rifle there for a minute," he called to one of his men. A moment later the moving object, a German observer, exposed himself, and to the instant fire of the crack shot of the Toronto man. The bullet went true to its mark. The German threw up his hands, and fell down the inside of the chimney.

The act and sight so sickened the Toronto man that he was unable to touch food for three days after.

KILLED TWELVE IN A CHURCH

BOULOGNE, April 8.—During religious service on Sunday afternoon a German aeroplane of the Taube type dropped bombs on the Newkerk church near Ypres.

There was a large congregation present, and besides numerous cases of serious injuries suffered, twelve women were killed outright.

Abbe Reynaert, who was preaching at the time, was hit by flying debris and badly hurt. He died a few hours later.

Death of a Prize Mare

NEW YORK, April 8.—The death of Basliti, one of the most prized brood mares at Harry Payne Whitney's Brookdale (Farm, became known to-day. Basliti was the daughter of Adam, a French stallion.

Mr. Whitney paid $30,000 for the mare at the dispersal sale of the Nekeastle stable at Saratoga Springs in 1910, in the hope of winning the Futurity. She ran second to S. C. Hildreth's Novelty in that race, but later won the filly half of the Matron Stakes. She was ranked as one of the best fillies of her age.

BOOTY FOUND IN PRZEMYSL

PETROGRAD, April 8. — "All the Austrian prisoners from Przemysl have now been sent to the interior of Russia. Altogether they comprised nine Generals, 2,307 officers and 113,980 soldiers. In addition there were 6,800 sick or wounded persons whose condition prevented their transport, and who are still retained in the hospitals at the front.

"The capture includes over 900 guns, of which a large number are in perfect order. Daily we discover new depots of munitions of war. Many guns and rifles with their accessories were thrown into the river by the Austrians. We are taking steps to recover these."

"THE GRELL MYSTERY"

By Frank Froest

"That's the ticket," said Foyle. "I like a man who's got brains." A sovereign changed hands. "Now, if you ever hear anything, perhaps you'll let me know. Drop into my office when you're by and have a chat and a cigar."

"I will that, sir," said the man. "Thank you, sir."

Heldon Foyle was left alone in the room. He sat quite still for a little but his eyes were busy. At last he rose and aimlessly paced the floor once or twice. In the grate a dull fire was burning, and a few fragments of blackened paper lay on the dying coals. Here and there a word stood out in a mouldy grey against a black background. Foyle did not touch the paper till he had read:

". . . both . . minent . . . sufficient money to . . . ade for . . . Petrov . . . guesse . . . . fear . . . timately exposure must come. If . . . open cheque . . . ther . . . gold, and bring . . . God's sake . . . desperate."

Foyle's lips puckered into a whistle as he transferred the words to his pocket-book. He dared not touch the fragments till he had done so, and every moment he feared that some draught might destroy the whole thing. His keen professional instincts were saddened by the impossibility of saving what might be an important piece of evidence. Under favourable circumstances there might have been some chance of retrieving and preserving it by blocking the chimney to prevent a draught and then carefully sticking the burnt fragments with gum on to transparent paper. But that method was impossible. Foyle tried gingerly to rescue the fragments but a burst of flame frustrated him, and a moment later they were destroyed.

An ejaculation of annoyance escaped his lips, and he turned to the dainty little desk at another portion of the room. It was locked, but that was a matter of little consequence. Like most detectives, Foyle carried a bunch of keys rather larger than are to be found in the possession of the ordinary man, and the fourth that he tried fitted.

The neat interior slab of the desk was clear and tidy. One or two letters of no consequence reposed in an inside drawer, and these the superintendent replaced. A footstep outside roused him hurriedly but noiselessly to close the desk and resume his seat, sitting idly with crossed legs. But the interrupter passed, and he returned to the desk. From a recess he drew out a cheque-book and examined the counterfoils of the used cheques with interest. The last counterfoil was blank.

"Ah!" he muttered, with a jerky little nod of satisfaction, and turned his attention to the blotting-pad. A few minutes' close inspection and he drew the top sheet away and, rolling it up, placed it in the breast-pocket of his overcoat. Again he closed the desk and glanced at his watch. A touch at the bell summoned the footman.

"I don't think I'll wait, after all," said Foyle. "Time's getting on, and I've several things to attend to."

"Shall I tell Lady Eileen you called, sir?"

In deep thought Heldon Foyle sauntered away from the house, and Maxwell joined him as they turned a corner. The superintendent said nothing till they reached Piccadilly. Then he tore a sheet of notepaper from his pocketbook and handed it to his companion.

"Cut along up to the Metropolitan and Provincial Bank, Maxwell. A cheque, No. A834,076 for £200, signed Burghley, has been presented this morning. Find out who cashed it and how it was paid. If there were any notes, get their numbers and come straight on to me at the Yard."

The superintendent swung himself on to a passing motor bus and selected a seat on top, with his brain still revolving the events of the morning. Once he took out a pencil and drafted a description of Grell's appearance and dress as Roberts had seen him. As a matter of course, he intended that to be telegraphed and telephoned to his men all over London. It was as well not to neglect any precaution.

He was passing through the little back door which leads to the quarters of the C.I.D. when he came face to face with a young man bearing all the appearance of a clerk who was just passing out. "Hello, Phillips!" he exclaimed. "You've been after Lady Eileen, haven't you? What luck did you have?"

"I've just reported to Mr. Green, sir," was the answer. "She walked to the Metropolitan and Provincial Bank and took a taxi when she came out. I followed in another cab, but my man punctured a tire in the Strand and I missed her."

Foyle frowned and gripped the man's arm. "Come upstairs with me and tell me all about it. What number was her taxi?"

"County Council LD 6132, police 28,233. Mr. Green has got the name of the driver from the Public Carriage Department, and I was just going out to see if I could get hold of him."

"Right; you get along, then. And don't forget that it you miss people like that again, accident or no accident, there'll be trouble."

Green was waiting for his chief. A question elicited the steps he had taken to get hold of the driver of the cab, from whom some account of Lady Eileen's movements might be expected. An all-station message had been flashed out, asking that the cab, wherever it was sighted, should be sent, unless still carrying a passenger, to Scotland Yard. There was little chance of the driver neglecting to obey the summons.

"It's unlucky that our man failed to keep her in sight," said Foyle. "I'll bet a hundred to one that she's arranged to meet Grell somewhere. However, there's nothing to do now but to wait. Just look here, Green. Here is something I picked out of the lady's fire. Help me and we'll see if we can reconstruct the entire message."

He laid his pocket-book containing the string of disconnected words on the desk as he spoke. The two bent over them.

CHAPTER XLIII.

There is no person in London easier to find that a cabdriver whose number is known, for the supervision of the Public Carriage Department is exhaustive. Yet, even so, it was some hours before the man Foyle sought was reported as being on his way to Scotland Yard.

He came at last, wonder and a little alarm in his face as he was brought into the room where the superintendent and Green sat. There are many rules the infringement of which will imperil a license, and he was not quite sure that he might not have broken one.

Foyle motioned for the door to be shut. "So you're the cabdriver we're looking for, are you?" he said. "You're William White."

"Yes, sir," answered the man. "That's my name."

"All right, White. There's nothing to be alarmed about. You picked up a lady outside the Metropolitan and Provincial Bank this morning. Just sit down and tell us where you took her."

"Oh, that is it?" said White, relieved to find that all was merely an inquiry and not at offence that he was called upon to answer for. "Yes, sir. I did pick up a lady there. I took her along to the General Post Office, and waited there while she went in. Then——"

"Wait a minute," interrupted Foyle. "How long was she in there?"

"Ten minutes as near as a touch, according to the way the taximeter jumped while I was waiting. When she came out she asked me if I could take her to Kingston. I said yes. And she told me to stop on the Surrey side of Putney Bridge, because she expected to pick up a friend, sir. Well, he was waiting there for us—"

"What kind of a looking man was he?"

"A tough sort of customer. Dressed like a labouring chap. I thought it was a queer go, but it wasn't none of my business, and ladies take queer fancies at times. She didn't say nothing to him that I could hear, but just leaned out of the window and beckoned. He jumped in and off we went. We stopped at a tailor's shop in Kingston, and the man went in while the lady stayed in the cab."

"What was the name of the shop?"

"I didn't notice. I could show it to anyone, though, if I went there again."

"Very well. Go on," said Foyle curtly.

"Well, in a matter of a couple of minutes out comes the chap again and spoke to the lady. She got out and paid me off. He went back into the shop and she walked away down the street."

White shook his head. "No, sir. I went away and had a bit of grub before coming back. As I passed Kingston railway station, I saw the lady standing by a big motor car, talking to the man seated at the wheel. I thought at first it was the chap I had driven down, but I could see it wasn't when I got a closer look at him. He was better dressed and held himself straighter."

"Ah! Could you describe him? Did you notice the number of the car?"

The driver scratched his head. "A sort of otdinary-looking man, sir. I didn't take much stock of him. The car was A1245—a big brown thing, with an open body."

"Right you are, White," said Foyle with a nod of dismissal. "That will do for now. You go down and wait in the yard with your cab, and we'll get some one to go with you to Kingston. And keep your mouth shut about what you've told us."

When the door closed behind the man, his eyes met those of the chief detective-inspector. "You'll have to go to Kingston, Green. It's a hot scent there. You've got the numbers of the notes that Maxwell got from the bank. Find out if any of them were changed at the tailor's. They've taken precautions to blind the trail. What I think happened is, that she telephoned from the General Post Office to some motor car firm to send a car from London to Kingston railway station, under the impression that it would be less risky. He went into the tailor's place to arrange for a change of clothes, and she dismissed the taxi as a measure of precaution. It was a piece of luck that the man noticed the motor car, but we can't be absolutely certain of the number he gave. He had no particular reason to remember it. Anyway, I'll send it out to the county police, and ask them to keep their eyes open. Meanwhile, I'll set some men to work to see if any of the big garages have sent a car to Kingston, and get the number verified. If you 'phone me when you get down there, I'll let you know how things stand."

CRITICAL TIME OF WOMAN'S LIFE

From 40 to 50 Years of Age. How It May Be Passed in Safety.

So. Wellington, B.C.—"For a year during the Change of Life I was all run down. I was really too weak to walk and was very despondent and thought I was going to die, but after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier my health and strength returned. I am very thankful to you and praise your medicine. I have advised several women who suffered as I did to try your remedies. You may publish this if you wish."—Mrs. DAVID R. MORRIS, South Wellington, Vancouver Island, B. C.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. We know of no other medicine which has such a record of success as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For more than 30 years it has been the standard remedy for woman's ills such as inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and we believe it is unequalled for women during the period of change of life.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

PUT STOMACH IN FINE CONDITION

Says Indigestion Results from an Excess of Hylrochloric Acid.

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that Indigestion is caused by Hyper-acidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescing and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jads Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

Brewers have found that the fermenting power of yeast is increased by brief exposure to ozone.

THE ESCAPE OF A BRITISH AVIATOR FROM A GERMAN PATROL

In one of his recent despatches from the front Field Marshal Sir John French refers to the pre-eminence of the British airman. Although the weather was almost uniformly bad, he writes, and the machines suffered from constant exposure, there have been very few days on which no actual aerial reconnoissance has been effected. The duties of the Flying Corps are, of course, various and many. From General French's despatch it is learned that they include raids on the enemy's bases, bomb dropping on parks and petrol depots, harassing detrainments, attacking enemy aeroplanes, and the customary observation work. Naturally all this work is not done without the greatest danger to aviators, and reports and letters from the front go to show what very narrow escapes are sometimes effected by airmen who have been compelled to descend in enemy territory. The above picture is an illustration of what happened recently to a member of the Royal Flying Corps who had to come down during a flight owing to engine trouble. The officer concerned writes in the course of a letter headed N. E. France:—"During a reconnoissance near Bruges a short while ago my engines failed—spotted, plugs, I found out later on—and although I raced her up as much as possible I saw quite clearly that I'd got to come down and clean them. Well, I did the only thing possible—I made for an open plain as far away from the German troops as possible. Down we came with a bump, and before my machine had stopped running my mechanic was frantically working on the plugs with a spanner. In the distance we could see German troops making for us, and I was busy with an arrangement for setting fire to the machine if we could not get away. Well, to make a long story short, the last plug was fixed when the Germans were within two hundred yards of us. I jumped back into the seat with a rush, my mechanic madly swinging the propellers round. Suddenly, with a roar of the engine and a regular hailstorm of shots from the advancing enemy, the mechanic hanging on like grim death, we were off, right at the heads of the foe. I'll bet there wasn't ten feet to spare as we cleared their helmets and burned off for home, jolly glad to get there, too."

British Clergy Splits on "Dry" Pledge During War

Proposal That They Should Set Example of Abstinence Calls Forth Protests from Pastors, Who Insist They Are the Model Drinkers.

(SPECIAL DISPATCH.)
LONDON, April 3.

Should the clergy of the Church of England quit drinking until after the war? Would a great national cause be served by their signing the pledge?

Strange as it may seem to some Americans, especially those who happen to live in a "dry" state, this is the topic of the moment throughout the length and breadth of the British Isles. Bishops and clergymen of all ranks and denominations have joined in the discussion, which was started by an appeal in the newspapers by Sir Edward Clarke, who contends that the clergy by their abstinence could rise the standard of temperance in the nation.

From the many replies by prominent clergymen it appears that opinion on Sir Edward's proposal is sharply divided. Unqualified indorsement comes from some. Others contend that the clergy should not be subjected to the hardship of swearing off because men in other walks of life sometimes drink not wisely but too well. The idea is advanced that this is making those who know when they have enough pay the penalty for those who do not. From other bits of clerical correspondence on the subject one gathers the impression that it would be more appropriate to decree total abstinence for all those outside the clergy on the ground that the latter, having shown the least temptation to excessive drinking, should be the last to suffer restrictions aimed at excess.

Of course, the whole controversy creates a vastly different impression in the minds of the hundreds of thousands who are following it. I ment Mr. Lafayette Young, formerly United States Senator from Iowa and proprietor of the Des Moines Capital, at the Cecil Hotel early this week and found that with him it had absorbed all other subjects, even news of the war. He said it was the best kind of "copy" imaginable for his newspaper, especially as Iowa has gone "dry" and the preachers of Des Moines are temperance advocates of the first order.

Last Saturday's newspapers contained the first reinforcements for Sir Edward Clarke's suggestion. Among these was a letter written at the Deanery, in Manchester, by the Rev. J. E. C. Welldon.

"Sir Edward's appeal will, I hope and think," he says, "win a general response from the clergy to whom it is addressed. There is reason to fear that the government has as yet done less than needs to be done in the present crisis of the national life by practically leaving the restriction upon the sale of alcoholic drinks to the discretion of one man, the chief constable in every great city. But voluntary effort and sacrifice are worth more than compulsion; and if the clergy by their abstinence from alcoholic drinks during the war can help to raise the standard of temperance in the nation as a whole they will render a conspicuous service to the Church and to the country."

"Allow me to support the appeal which Sir Edward Clarke makes to-day in your columns to the Church of England. He is altogether right in thinking that if the whole body of the clergy of the national church were, as a great united act of patriotic self-denial, to pledge themselves to total abstinence during the continuance of the war the effect on the nation would be incalculable. After more than forty years of experience in temperance work, mainly in connection with the Church of England Temperance Society, I testify to the influence which the personal example of the clergy has in such a cause, and also to the sad and bitter need which still exists for persistent work in order to stamp out an evil which has sullied the fair name of England for so long a time, and which has been repeatedly and officially recognized as the most prolific source of poverty, distress and crime.

"There is, indeed, a great opportunity before us, and the call to a great national act of amendment and contrition is clear."

But the Very Rev. John A. Sharrock, writing from the Holy Trinity vicarage, in Worcester, says:—

"May I raise my voice as a priest of the Church against Sir Edward Clarke's letter on this subject? We are faced with the incalculable evils of drunkenness, loss of money and war material, physical unfitness for work, &c., and yet we have not the courage to tackle it like the Russians and French, and so, forsooth, we must take a little soothing syrup to keep the national conscience quiet! Instead of our leaders adopting the strong measures which Mr. Lloyd-George tells us the government hold in their hands we ask that class which in the whole country is least addicted to drunkenness—the bishops and clergy—to sign the pledge for the duration of the war."

Tuesday brings support for Mr. Sharrock's views that the clergy should not be asked to sign the pledge in view of the fact that it is less addicted to excess in drink than others. Mr. W. Bramwell Booth, writing from the Salvation Army International Headquarters, takes opportunity to say that he has long since abolished strong drink from his household, and that he never touches a drop.

A letter appearing on Wednesday and signed "A Non-Paid Attruis" brings up a new idea when it states:—

"Without questioning the influence that clergy and ministers of all denominations would exercise on the question of drink by taking the pledge there is always a lurking feeling among the masses that they are paid to lead godly, righteous and sober lives. Would it not take the country more startlingly by surprise and with far greater force if all the members of the government, all members of Parliament and all government officials whose election has turned on the question of the welfare of the masses were to sign the pledge?"

With Ideals Largely Oriental and Mystical, He Has No Feeling of Enmity Toward His Foe and Thinks War Will End if Opponents Can Be Brought to "Repent" of Their "Sins."

(SPECIAL DISPATCH.)
WARSAW, via LONDON, April 3.

After inspecting numerous camps to the east of this city, I managed to get nearer the front and to see the peasant soldiers who have been fighting or are expecting to fight. Before that I had spoken mostly to wounded men. The wounded have their own characteristic attitude to war or to life; they are enormously more interested in the war than are the unwounded. They have a certain introspectivity; they want to go back; they are generally, as Russians say, more "conscious" than the soldier who has gone unscathed. Wounds knock out of the man some of the peasant nature. The soldiers I have seen nearer the front are essentially peasants. They are excellent fighters. But peasant is written all over them, especially in their ways of speech and expression and in their circumscribed spheres of thought.

In his relation to war and battle the soldier is religious. I do not think that he has any religious or philosophical conception of war, though there is a colored cartoon showing the Kaiser as Antichrist, and the slaying of Antichrist is an immemorial Russian notion. The peasant soldier, however, has a clear conception of a higher Power regulating his individual fate. At the railway station of Osharow, a few miles from here, I had a long talk with peasants about remarkable losses and escapes. These men were all anxious to return home in safety. The phrase on all lips was "Bog dast" ("God grant," "God will save") and so on. A soldier showed me the stock of his rifle, in which a bullet was imbedded. He said with tremendous emphasis, "God chose the wood, not the flesh," and pointed to his forehead.

Russians Guard Their Health.

These soldiers are solemn, serious men. Their ideal man is somewhat Oriental. He should be grown-up, solemn, somewhat grave. It is not a soldier's business to bark or to expose himself out of bravado. Young soldiers who do that are called "ducklings." Soldiers who have wives and children mention the fact in every conversation. In spite of their excellent physique and tremendous courage they think much of their health. Men who have spent weeks—as many did during the Lodz battles—in the same wet trench show themselves when no battle is going on to be as sensitive as women about draughts, wet feet and other minor discomforts, and men who are destined to spend perhaps years without a roof over their heads exclude fresh air from their railway vans as jealously as they would exclude the enemy's bullets.

I travelled more than four hundred miles in a troop train of tweny carriages, each holding forty men, or, as the inscription says, "eight horses or forty men." These vans have no windows and no ventilation except a sliding door. On the floor is straw, on which the men sleep, and across are roughly hewn seats; the seats were nailed in only after war was declared. During this journey the temperature was high and rain fell. But the van doors were opened only when the soldiers wanted hot water with which to make tea. This habit comes from home conditions, for in winter the cabin doors are seldom opened, and the aged members of the family sleep above a very hot stove. The Russian of all classes is an indoors man, except in summer. Then half the peasants sleep in barns or in the fields.

Feel No Race Enmity.

As a rule, when soldiers are asked how they felt in battle, how they faced particular dangers, how they felt toward their enemies, their answers, as a rule, are vague, showing no "conscious" attitude. But there are many soldiers who think and can express their thoughts. A big, ugly and elderly non-commissioned officer said that neither here nor in the Manchurian war had he any fear of death. He said:—

"No man among us is afraid to be killed, but many are afraid to be maimed. They are afraid they will not be able to work. We are all getting wounds in the hands, and that is bad. Better lose an eye than a hand. We are workman."

This same soldier told me that when he was wounded he began to think of intimate things, in particular of unsigned papers relating to his land and of a village law action over timber cutting rights. He said:—"We are near people." The meaning was that the peasant soldier cares for immediate interests. Such men seldom feel political, religious or race enmity. They have the sentiment of injured innocence in that they think the bullet which strikes them ought to have hit somebody else "because in our platoon we have already left five men," or because a shell splinter ricochetted from a tree before inflicting the wound and therefore "was not originally meant for me." As all simple people, the moujik soldiers look on war as a matter of "fairness."

The worst complaint I have heard against the enemy was that on a particular position he employed too many guns for "fairness." When the soldier hears any tales of ill-treatment of comrades by the enemy his usual remark is a pitying "God be with them," or "God will punish them." (Bog nakashet ikh). He has no notion of human retribution, much less of vengeance. Just as in peace time the peasant calls the robber or murderer an "unfortunate," so in war time he holds that enemies are men.

Superstition and Prejudice.

I heard a story in this spirit, though the hero was a peasant woman, and not a soldier. Driven out of her mind by material losses she wandered over battlefields, examined the dead men's hands, and if she found the hands warted and hard, paid the victim some attention, such as putting moss under his head. Her explanation of this action was that "he too was a ploughman." I heard soldiers, plainly peasants, arguing that German "peasant" soldiers were "good" men, in opposition to townsmen, who were "bad."

There is a sort of broad humanity behind these superstitions and prejudices, which explains why the moujik warrior treats his prisoners well. I have seen many hundred prisoners passing through Warsaw and at smaller railway stations, and I have never seen any ill-treatment, or heard even a gibe. There is wild curiosity to see the mysterious "Niemetz" (tall-way officials, the non-soldiering peasants and the educated show the same curiosity and the same Christian spirit.

Mr. Trappert, an aged journalist, who has seen may wars, has just written that the Russian peasant soldier has no joy in battle. There is strong patriotism. But fighting and even winning battles are not considered ends in themselves. That is why all wish for a speedy end to the war, on condition that it is a satisfactory end. It is only Russians who could adumbrate a satisfactory end to the war without fighting it out. I talked to a peasant who developed the notion that this was possible. The enemy, he said, was a great sinner; but, who knows? he might repent. The soldier who said this was a reservist of about thirty, with distinct mystical ideas. To draw him I said:—"Why should he repent?" The answer was:—"Two prisoners, young men, came through here yesterday, and they were crying. Perhaps they are sorry. Only God knows what is in a man's mind."

Germans' Bitter Hate for British Told by Officer

Bavarian Charges That Only Poorer Men Are Sent to Fight the Teutons, and Denounces Mixture of Races in the Allied Ranks.

(SPECIAL DISPATCH.)
LONDON, April 2.

Sympathy and admiration for France and Belgium, but only bitter hatred for the English, such are the feelings of the Germans, according to a letter which a Bavarian officer, once a physician in Munich, writes from the trenches to a friend in England. An interesting insight into the feelings which govern the movements of the Germans is given in the letter, published recently in the London Times. In part, the writer says:—

"I have fought in Alsace-Lorraine, in Belgium, before Antwerp, in Flanders and now I am in France. It is dreadful. The villages and towns burned and destroyed, the harvest spoiled in the fields. I hope that you and your husband, who know a bit of Germany, have never believed this stupid French theatre rubbish, that we burn all on purpose, kill women and children and steal all.

"My word, I have never seen anything of the kind. I have seen in Belgium the people coming for food and for the physician. Of course, as soon as any one who was not a soldier shot at us, and that happened especially the first weeks, when the spirit was still on fire, then the punishment is known. The men were shot and the village burned. The blood of our worst soldier has a greater value for us than a whole town in Belgium.

"In the second month things like that did not happen any more. Now everything is quiet. The people in Belgium are content to work and live in peace, and the French people are so friendly that I am astonished very much. Only—and this is the point I wish to aim at—with English people things are quite different.

"Let me tell you our feelings against the different nations. For Belgium and France, sympathy and admiration for their soldiers. They are brave fellows, and every prisoner is treated as well as possible, like one of our own men. Russia, Servia, Montenegro and all the other lot of fighters for civilization I despise. One has to fight against them like one fights against a disgusting animal.

"For England—hate and disgust. A hate I have never believed to be possible. I have this hate, too. Not against —, nor against you nor any other English acquaintance. But let me tell you. When I was in Belgium I told my soldiers, 'Five francs for a Belgian prisoner, but five days' prison for an English prisoner.' I have not given any pardon to an Englishman and I would not take any from him.

"You ask me why? Let me tell you an incident which has happened. A comrade is killed. I ask, is he married? Yes, he is the owner of a big mill and the father of five children. Who killed him? An animal, one of those Indians. A human? No; a kind of human that lives the life of an animal, a dangerous animal at home, and which is employed at present to fight for civilization.

"He is hired to kill our men, and every one of us has a position at home—teachers, university professors, wealthy farmers, all kinds of men, wealthy and poor, high and common. Do you understand of Belgium and France. The war, where why we treat those creatures like dangerous animals? And those who let them fight for themselves? That is the worst. They are ignorant, they don't know what they do—like animals. But your government knows what a highly civilized land Germany is; they know what we have done in arts and science—and in trade!

"At the beginning of this war there was nobody in Germany who was against it. In a fortnight we had 2,000,000 volunteers. Big lists with names in, everybody could see that the numbers were right. We know that it was different in England; that there were many who did not want this war, and that at present you must try all means to get soldiers.

"Your young men, educated and learned men, stay at home, and poor fellows who cannot find any other work must give their blood. That the English nation does not fight for itself, that the poorer of the land must fight, that they bring against use all the dirty and cruel and dangerous animals they can find on earth, that they sit shameless at home themselves—that's why we hate them so.

"Your English soldiers are very brave and fight very well, but they have no feeling for 'fair play.' Attack them and they throw down their rifles. When you have passed they shoot you in the back. They let you come in a distance of three or four yards, shoot like fools, and when you stand by them they throw down their rifles and expect you to give them quarter.

"Friendship and weapon brotherships—they are in our eyes the highest things a man can give to another. And England's brothers of weapons! Yellows, negroes, Indians, redskins, Russians — weapon brothers in the fight for civilization. We have proofs that this war was prepared against us for a long time. King Edward's war, it is.

"The English-French alliance, the French-English naval treaties, the entrevus in Cronstad and Carlsbad are the proofs. It is, in our eyes—if right or wrong, this is not the place to discuss—an Anglo-German war. France and Russia and the other lot do not fight for themselves, they fight for England. Because our feelings are so sharp I do not want——to go to England. I am sure the war will come over to your island and I want her to be far away from it.

"You do not hear the truth about things on the Continent. The whole French report from November 15 to January 15 is a lie. Since this time I have been in two places where Joffre pretends to have made progress. Not a word is true. Those poor French soldiers have fought with a wonderful courage—but they cannot succeed. They have had terrible losses.

"Near the Perthes and Beauxjour and Souchain, places where Joffre has attacked since the middle of December, they have not won a metre. Their success is only in the newspapers. With very few soldiers and still fewer losses we keep our position until we finish with Russia and that will be soon.

"Do you know that we have more than 90,000 prisoners? And our own dead, wounded and prisoners, proved name by name, and date and place in official lists, is not yet 750,000. That you do not hear the truth, another example:—[illegible] the French lost 5,300 prisoners, thirty-five guns and we buried 5,000 French soldiers. Joffre does not mention it.

"I will only say that our position is excellent, and that it is far more probable that France, England and Russia will be fought down than that they drive us out of Belgium and France. The war, where it shall reach England, will be terrible. There is a hate in our soldiers such that I do not want any of my people near this catastrophe. Instead of saying 'Good day' to each other, they say, 'May God punish England.'"

ACTRESS TELLS SECRET

A Well Known Actress Tells How She Darkened Her Gray Hair and Promoted Its Growth With a Simple Home Made Mixture.

Miss Blanche Rose, a well-known actress, who darkened her gray hair with a simple preparation which she mixed at home, in a recent interview at Chicago, Ill., made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray hair and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Orlex Compound and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the required shade. This will make a gray haired person look 20 years younger. It is also fine to promote the growth of hair, relieves itching and scalp humors and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair."

SEIZED WITH PARALYSIS COULD NOT WALK

Most Extraordinary Cure Effected by the Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

To have the nervous system paralyzed, to be unable to walk and scarcely able to talk, and then to be completely cured, is not a usual experience, but Mr. Hyatt tells in this letter what he passed through. Doctors told him that his case was hopeless, and when they gave up he turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and obtained complete cure.

Mr. Avery Hyatt, blacksmith, St. Anns, Lincoln Co., Ont., writes: "I am a blacksmith by trade and ten years ago became afflicted with paralysis. I could not walk or read or write, and could talk with difficulty, so that it was a hard matter to understand anything that I would say. Being only a young man I was nearly discouraged. Two doctors told me it was brought on by overwork, and that my case was hopeless.

"One day my father read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and advised me to try it. I bought 12 boxes, and when the fifth was used I saw that I was getting better. By the time the 12 boxes were used I was cured. I am well and strong and working every day, thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Elmon J. Hodgkins, J.P.

No ailment is more dreaded than paralysis. And yet how few people realize that paralysis of the nerves is only the natural result of neglected nervous troubles.

At first you do not sleep well, have nervous headaches or indigestion, find yourself easily irritated and annoyed, can hear noises which in good health you would never notice. You do not consider yourself sick, and yet you lack the usual energy and vigour and feel out of sorts.

Restore the nerves by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT.

Timely Comments and Comparison of Prices

Eggs and butter were quite plentiful on the market last Saturday, and remained at about the same price as last week. Butter was firm at 34 and 35 cents, while eggs (now that Easter is over we may expect a drop) brought 18 and 19 cents.

Chickens sold for 50, 60 and 65 cents a piece, according to size. Most of them were in fair shape, but several had been prepared for market in a very sloppy manner, and did not present a very inviting appearance, especially to a buyer.

Maple syrup was not so plentiful as last week, when it made its first appearance, but sold at the same prices of 40 to 45 cents a quart. There was a very high wind blowing Saturday, and the air was thick with dust and flying particles of dirt, which seemed to sweep in clouds into the open cans containing the syrup. Those vendors who had closed cans and a regulating tap at the bottom (like a cream can) had a great advantage over those with the ordinary large open milk cans.

Two loads of hay were offered at $24 a ton.

Grains, Hay.

|---|---|
| Wheat, per bushel | $1.40 |
| Barley | .70 to .80 |
| Oats | .60 to .65 |
| Peas | $2.15 |
| Flour, cwt. | $4.25 |
| Shorts, ton | $29.00 |
| Bran | $28.00 |
| Baled hay | $20 to $22 |
| Loose hay | $24.00 |
| Straw | $13.00 |

Wheat has taken another advance. Ottawa reports that Chili has just harvested a wheat crop of 23 million bushels, or nearly double that of last year. Argentine's crop is 190 million bushels, which is 80 million in excess of last year. The acreage in India is greatly in excess of that of last year. If the Allied fleets succeed in opening the Dardanelles, thus releasing the Russian surplus, the drop in prices may be as sensational as the recent advance.

Dairy and Poultry.

|---|---|
| Butter, dairy, per lb. | .34 to .35 |
| Butter, creamery | .37c |
| Cheese | .20 to .22 |
| Eggs, new laid, doz. | .18 to .19 |
| Turkeys, lb. | 25c |
| Geese | 16c |
| Chickens, per pair | $1.00 to $1.30 |
| Ducks, lb. | 20c |
| Live hens, each | $1.00 |

Tastes differ. If you do not believe me ask any woman who sells butter on the market. Last Saturday I watched several city folks judging butter. One long, lanky man grabbed a toothpick, jabbed it into a print, and scraped it off with his teeth. They were evidently false teeth, for he failed to get the taste, and he decided to make another test. Instead of getting a fresh toothpick, he used the one he had in his mouth, and helped himself to a liberal shaving of butter. He smacked his lips, sucked his teeth, rolled his tongue around in his mouth, and revolved his eyeballs in their sockets. Several women were watching the performance, some with evident feelings of disgust. It was really funny to see that man try to look wise. The butter-woman turned her head to hide her features, which were none too pleasant, and gave a suspicious cough. The man gave a grunt, walked away, and the crowd scattered.

Passing on I came to a young woman, recently married, who had some butter to sell. "How is it going?" said I. "Not very well," she replied, "and this is my first attempt at marketing, and it's not all it's cracked up to be, either."

With the scene, just related, in my mind, I thought: "How very true."

Presently I met a city woman who thinks she is a good judge of butter. Seeing a pasteboard box under her arm, I pointed to it and queried: "Chicken?" "No, butter; and it's the best butter on the market," was her quick reply. "Prove it," joined in a couple of ladies who heard her remark.

She removed the lid and we all looked in.

If a bomb had been exploded in the building, it would not have created any more surprise than the sight of that butter. Four pair of eyes were lifted from the box and shot questioning glances around the bunch. Not a word was spoken. After a lapse of a few moments I sought to break the painful silence by remarking: "Aha, here is a woman trying to practice economy." Recovering from her shock the city woman sighed: "Well, I can't understand her doing that; I have bought butter from that woman for years, and it never happened before."

It appears the butter-maker had run short of the printed oiled sheets of butter-paper, and had used plain sheets, upon which she had written the words "Dairy Butter."

If she had used an ordinary pencil there would have been no trouble, but she unfortunately wrote the inscription with an indellible pencil, and the ink from this soaked far into the butter. Quite a chunk of butter would have to be taken off each print before the rest would be safe to use, as an indellible pencil is rank poison.

Fruit and Vegetables.

|---|---|
| Apples, per bbl. | $2.50 to $3.50 |

| White beans, qt. | 10c. |
| Carrots, peck | 15c. |
| Turnips | 10c |
| Parsnips, peck | 15c. |
| Beets, peck | 15c. |
| Celery, head | 10c |

| Lamb | 23c. |
| Veal | 20c-22c |
| Rib roast | 18c-20c |
| Sirloin steak | 22c |
| Round steak | 22c |
| Beef, dressed | (None offered) |
| Live hogs, cwt. | $8.50 |
| Small pigs, cwt. | $8.00 |

Several lots of little pigs were offered on Saturday at $7.00 a pair, but did not meet a very quick sale at that price.

Wool and Hides.

| | |
|---|---|
| Wool (market next week) | |
| Sheep skins, each | $1.75 |
| Calf skins, lb. | 16c. |
| Beef skins, lb. | 11 to 12c |

Beef hides and calf skins (on the outside markets) have taken a big drop during the past month. Previously these had been pushed up, until the prices paid were nearly double those of a few years ago, because of the great demand on account of war, but latterly large quantities of South American and foreign hides were dumped on the American market, causing a decided slump.

General.

|---|---|
| No. 1 Granulated sugar, cwt. | $7.10 |
| Honey, lb. | 15c. |
| Wood, cord | $4.00 to $6.00 |

Seed Grain.

| | |
|---|---|
| Red Clover, bush. | $13 to $14 |
| Alsyke | $13 to $14 |
| Alfalfa | $15 |
| Timothy | $4.50 to $5.50 |

Toronto dealers in seeds anticipate a heavy demand for seed this year to replace the winter wheat which has been killed out. They are of the opinion that the open weather this month has seriously affected the fall wheat crop.

Great Struggle Between the Meuse and the Moselle Continues ---Almost All News of the Fighting is Being Witheld--- French Objective is to Cut Off Supplies From Germans at St. Mihiel.

VIOLENT CANNONADING ALONG LINE

(Special Cable to The Examiner.)

PARIS, France, April 8.—French official communique.—French guns are again raining shells at long range upon St. Mihiel, while a great battle is raging north and south of the German salient.

Paris is filled with rumours of most important developments, but the war office to-day withheld almost news of the fighting.

"We have maintained all gains between the Meuse and the Moselle, with some further progress," was the substance of this afternoon's official communique.

"Despatches received here indicate that the most serious efforts against the German wedge are being made east of St. Mihiel and northwest of Pont-a-Mousson."

In the latter region the objective of the French is the railway that forms practically the only effective means of transporting supplies to the Germans holding the important St. Mihiel wedge.

A rainy spell that has interefered with the operations near the sea coast, has passed away.

Violent cannonading all along the line from Rheims to the seacoast, was reported in unofficial despatches to Paris this afternoon.

A TEMPORARY HALT

PETROGRAD, April 8.—German reinforcements have temporarily halted the Russian forward movement near Lupkow Pass, it was semi-officially admitted to-day, but the Slav forces southeast of Smolnik continue a successful offensive toward the Uszok Pass.

The Russian forces are being redistributed to meet the strengthened armies of the enemy near Vidrony.

FLED IN DISORDER

HAVRE, March 8th. — The German detachments which were driven out of Drei Grachten, fled across the Yser in disorder, abandoning machine guns and ammunition, according to the statement given out by the Belgian war office to-day. The western side of the Yser is now completely cleared of the Germans.

CAIRO, April 8.—A small body of Turkish cavalry exchanged shots with the British troops a few miles north east of Elkantara, 28 miles south of Port Said, on the Suez Canal, yesterday, according to the official despatches to-day. The British suffered no losses. English airmen reported that the cavalry evidently was a reconnoitring detachment and was unsupported by other troops.

A THRILLING DUEL

BERLIN, via wireless, April 8.—Budapest reports received here to-day told of a thrilling air battle in which three Russian aviators were dashed to pieces. The three Russians attacked an Austrian aviator, who sped to a height of nearly two thousand feet. One of the Russians followed while his fellows manoeuvred lower to cut off the Austrian's descent. A bomb from the Austrian struck the pursuing Russian whose aeroplane plunged toward the groend. In its fall it dashed down between the two other Russian aviators whose planes were caught by the rush of air and capsized.

FALABA CARRIED NO GUNS

LONDON, April 8.—The admiralty to day issued an official statement regarding the torpedoing of the liner Falaba, with loss of 112 lives, to refute the statement issued by the German embassy at Washington.

The admiralty denied that the Falaba carried any guns. The five minutes intervening between the submarine's warning signal and the explosion of the torpedo was insufficient to permit the passengers and crew to escape. Furthermore it was stated that the submarine shot the torpedo at short range knowing that great loss of life must result. The statement praised the conduct of the Falaba's crew and passengers and stated there was no delay in getting out the boats.

GERMAN SAILORS GLOOMY

NEWPORT NEWS, April 8.—On board the interned Prinz Eitel, which up to the last minute before her time limit expired, had appeared to be ready for a dash to the sea, Captain Thierichens and his men seemed to be gloomy. The captain declared to-day that he was heartbroken because he had been forced to intern, and said he had not intened doing so had it not been absolutely necessary.

FOUR CANDIDATES WERE NOMINATED FOR ALDERMEN

To Contest the Aldermanic Vacancy Created by the Retirement of Ex.-Ald. Johnston in the North Ward

VOTE NEXT WEEK

At a meeting of the electors held in the North Ward to-day at noon, four candidates were nominated for the office of alderman. They are, namely, William Langford, Jr., W. S. Dodd, Dr. W. T. Holloway and G. O. Cameron. There is reason to believe that the field will narrow down to two, and may eventually go by acclamation in favour of ex-alderman Langford.

The meeting, which was held in Mrs. William Lee's house, 710 George Street, was designated an "electors' meeting." At one stage of the proceedings there was scarcely enough electors to endorse the quartette of nominations.

The Line-up.

Ex-Alderman Langford was the first to enter the ring. His nomination was proposed by Mr. J. F. Thornton and seconded by ex-Ald. W. J. Johnston.

A few minutes later Mr. R. J. Kidd arrived on the scene and proposed Dr. W. T. Holloway. This nomination remained open for nearly the entire nomination hour or until W. S. Dodd's nomination was proposed by Mr. James Kendry and seconded by Mr. A. E. Coulthard.

This move dissipated all hopes of an election by acclamation, with the result that a seconder was quickly found for Dr. Holloway's nomination in the person of Mr. G. O. Cameron.

The latter had no sooner left the building than he, himself, was proposed by Mr. D. H. Kerneghan and seconded by Mr. J. T. Braund.

The candidates have until 9 o'clock to-morrow evening in which to qualify.

One week from to-day a vote will be taken at the following polling subdivisions:

No. 15—Mrs. Wm. Lee's house, 710 George Street.
No. 16 — J. J. Cocks' store, 153 Dublin Street.
No. 17—J. Doody's shop, 531 Park Street.
No. 18—Tel H. Hooper's shop, 601 George street.
No. 19—J. T. Braund's Store, 720 George Street.

Gladys Seward Recital

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—May I appeal, through your paper, to the people of Peterborough to attend, in large numbers, the recital of Gladys Seward to-morrow evening. Peterborough may well be proud of this native-born artist who has already made a name for herself in some of the largest cities of Europe.

All those who are interested in art, and all who are loyal enough to be proud of a talent which has been developed to a wonderful degree should not miss this treat.

Yours truly,
Music Lover.

DR. W. T. HOLLOWAY,

SERGT-MAJOR FRED HOWARTH, of A Company, 2nd Battalion, First Canadian Contingent. Major Bennett mentions him as his right hand man. He was Col.-Sergt. of C Company of the 57th Regiment before enlisting. He was through the South African war, and in times of peace, too, has been an enthusiastic soldier and ranks high for proficiency in the 57th.

PRIVATE SAM MILLS, a young friend of Sergt-Major Howarth. His home is in Bury, Eng., where Sergt. Howarth knew his parents. He has been in Canada three years, first working on a farm near Linsay, and spending most of the time in Peterborough. When war broke out he was in a fever to enlist, and, after joining wrote home to his mother as follows: Dear Mother— I have volunteered. Your son, Sam. Private Mills has been mentioned as having received a slight flesh wound ever one eye about six weeks ago.

FIGHTING OUTBREAK

Bacterialogists Have Arrived at Belleville to Assist in Stamping Out Cerebro-Spinal Meningitis

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

BELLEVILLE, April 7.— Captain Dr. Amyot, Provincial Bacteriologist, and Drs. Palmer, Fraser and Hodge of the 2nd Division ,arrived in this city to-day to conduct an investigation into the cerebro-spinal meningitis outbreak in the 39th Battalion, as a result of which there have occurred two deaths. There are two cases of meningitis in the hospital, but they appear not serious. One soldier suspected of having the disease was put apart in the detention hospital. Drs. Palmer, Fraser and Hodge will to-morrow begin bacteriological work among about one hundred men, who may have come in contact with the germs.

It was stated by Dr. Amyot that there was nothing to cause alarm here, although perhaps the disease had gained a somewhat stronger footing than in the Toronto camp. Some objection has been made by the Belleville General Hospital to receiving cases of meningitis, but the authorities have been notified that in case of refusal measures will be taken to enforce acceptance. Dr. Amyot returns to Toronto to-morrow morning. He is satisfied with the treatment given the sick soldiers, and with barracks conditions in general.

The Examiner was informed by a Belleville correspondent this morning that there has been a third death from cerebro spinal meningitis, Private Norman of the Lindsay detachment having passed away, it was stated. He was critically ill on Sunday last.

39th Battery News.

KINGSTON, April 8.— Sergt.-Major Fraser of McGill University, who took the last course of the R.S.A., has been made Battery Sergt.-Major of the 39th Battery. Every sergeant in the battery, with a single exception, Sergt. Hetherington of Peterborough, is a university man, and has come here well equipped for his duties.

A squad of the 39th Battery are given riding lessons every day and the men are taking well to their horses. As soon as the battery takes charge of the Dormitories at artillery park, and have place for horses and guns nearer their drill grounds, the battery will get down to real artillery work.

The Battery now has its full establishment of officers, non-commissioned officers and men.

The appointment of Acting Sergt. Ed. Greer and Acting Pioneer Sergt. West Edwards are confirmed by regimental orders issued at Belleville yesterday.

FIVE YEARS IS SENTENCE

Thieves Who Broke Into Zacks Bros' Store Last Week Will Be Sent to Kingston Penitentiary

HAVE LONG RECORDS

Frederick Mitchell, alias Morrison, and David Rousselle, alias McCarthy, who were remanded a week ago on charges of breaking, entering and theft, pleaded guilty in Police Court this morning and were sentenced by Magistrate Dumble to five years in Kingston Penitentiary.

Mitchell and Rousselle have long criminal records, and though they have formerly been treated leniently by the courts it has not done much good.

Mitchell in 1911 escaped from Central Prison, and in March, 1915, escaped from the Ontario Reformatory, where he was a "trusty." His nature was such that he made himself liked in the Reformatory, and when intercession was being made for his parole, he made a daring and novel escape. Rousselle had a record from the Province of Quebec as well as Ontario. He served in the South African war, and had a decoration.

Pleaded Guilty.

On April 1, the prisoners appeared before Magistrate Dumble in connection with the breaking, entering and theft at Zacks Bros. store. Mr. Zacks claimed a loss of goods to the value of $321.00, and the amount was embodied in the charge. Only two suits of clothes and two raincoats were recovered. As the prosecution was not prepared to go on with the case, the accused men asked for the week to consider their plea, which was granted.

When asked how they wanted to be tried this morning they both said by His Worship, Magistrate Dumble. They wished to plead guilty, but only to stealing one suit and one raincoat each. They emphatically declared that this was all that they took. On a charge of theft from the Peterborough Liquor store they both also pleaded guilty. They took four bottles of whiskey and one of creme-de-menthe.

Liquor Again.

In pleading guilty Rousselle wanted to make a statement and his request was granted. He said he would plead guilty and give the court no trouble. Liquor was the cause of his downfall. He might as well have been in the "blues" when he committed the deed. He had done some good in his life as well as bad, having been through the South African war and got his decoration. He asked the court to be as lenient as possible. "I am going to cut that liquor out in future. If it had not been for the Chief and his men I would have been dead from drink now."

Rousselle did not like to answer any question of Crown Attorney Hatton at first, and it was only on being assured that it was the proper thing to do in view of his plea for leniency that he consented to answer the questions truthfully. He admitted the previous criminal record that was

MAJOR BENNETT'S NARROW ESCAPE

A HOT FIVE MINUTES

Here is another most interesting letter from Major Geo. W. Bennett of the 57th Regiment, officer commanding No. 1 Company of the 2nd Battalion of the First Canadian contingent. Writing on March 3rd to a local friend Major Bennett says:

We have again returned to billet from the trenches for our usual rest up, and I may say it's fine, superfine, to get a bath and clean-up with fresh underclothing. My lads all got a bath and new suit of underclothes to-day and they are like colts. We are in a state of readiness to-night, by order of the G. O. C. I have been out for two hours, reconnoitring for the position allotted to me, in case of alarm. I have about 1 3-4 miles to march, but I can make it whether it is dark or not. The fine weather has set in at last and we have sent in all our fur coats, etc.

First Sad Duty.

I am sorry to say that my first real sad duty was performed in the trenches last Thursday night, when I buried, in the middle of the night, my first real casualty. On the morning of Thursday, about 6.45 o'clock, we were treated to a perfect hail of fire from trenches away off to our right. It was simply hell and in five minutes I had three men on their backs. One shot dead, the other two badly wounded. It happened not twenty feet from me, in fact J. Bills was hit almost beside me. Jimmy was hit in both thighs and will soon be better. Mildery was hit in the shoulder and he also will not be long away, but poor Denike was hit in the throat and came running to me, when I was dressing up Bills, and fell in my arms. Bills comes from the 57th, Mildery from the 9th Horse, Toronto, and Denike from the 16th, at Picton.

Some Narrow Escapes.

Sergt. Stevens and several others had mighty close shaves. One chap had his rifle shot to pieces in his hand; another had his kit bag perforated four times, and so it goes on. I was observing for one of "my" snipers when bang came a bullet and knocked the telescope slap out of my hand and nearly put out my eye with dirt.

I got very busy Thursday night and my lads worked like Trojans. We put up traverses, etc., so that the "Allemands" cannot get in. I have about three hundred letters to censor to-night. The boys all want to write immediately they get back from the trenches.

The rumour to-day is that we are to go to Neuve Chapelle to-morrow, and help the boys out there. It is about six miles southeast of here. Our lads on the left, the North Staffords, got the very devil at La Epinette the other day. They were our chums when we were at Armentieres, and I knew the officers well who were killed. The Cobourg battery was beside us at our last billet at Bois Grenier. They are supporting our brigade.

The German Soldiers.

I appreciate very fully your reasoning as to the duration of the war, and from the outside it is good logic, as the financial strain must be enormous, but don't you believe that the German troops are ill fed, etc. They are fitted out in the most elaborate fashion and our troops are not yet in the game as they are. It is simply beyond all comprehension how perfect are their system and control and the acts they employ. They seem to have missed nothing nor spared anything to do up the whole universe in this war. Of course an effective block ade will count against them.

GOVERNMENT BILL KILLED BY THE SENATE

Amendment to Supreme Court Act Is Given a Six Months' Hoist on a Vote of 26 to 14

ELECTION APPEALS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, April 8.—The Senate this morning killed the government bill to amend the Supreme Court Act by providing for appeals from the provincial election cases to the Supreme Court as provided for by the Manitoba Legislature.

Hon. Mr. Bostock, the opposition leader, moved a six months' hoist, as it could not be properly discussed. Hon. Mr. Lougheed said the right of a province to have its election cases passed upon by the Supreme Court should not be refused. On a vote, the six months' hoist was carried by 26 to 14.

The Way the Ford Car "Gets There"

It is said that "there is only one car that can beat a Ford up a hill—another Ford." Although there is no formal motor show on in Peterborough, the Ford must be doing considerable "climbing" this week. The local energetic dealer, Jos. J. Duffus, has made a stir in local car circles by his originality in holding a demonstration, my moving picture films of "The Making of a Ford." The features of the evening consist of the developing of the entire process of making a Ford car, from the time the raw material is brought into the factory until the finished motor is ready for shipment on the railway train. The effect is strikingly interesting and has attracted "bumper houses" each evening. See it to-night, all ye auto owners.

"The Making of a Ford" is as virile and true-to-life drama as any which has ever been put on the screen. The whole photo play is filled with action and "striking" incident, and should have a powerful influence on prospective car buyers.

Bankers' Dance This Evening

The Bankers' dance, which is being held to-night at the Conservatory Hall is for the purpose of raising funds for that very praiseworthy organization, the King's Daughters. The past winter has been an especially trying one for the King's Daughters as there have been demands made upon them owing to present industrial conditions. It is hoped there will be a large number attend this dance and thus indirectly help along a good work. Huycke's orchestra will furnish the music, and a good time is assured for all.

SIMPLIFIED SPELLING.

At the Convention of the Provincial Teachers in Toronto, the matter of simplified spelling of the English language was brought up. The most interesting part of the report on the subject was that the British Spelling Society is petitioning Premier Asquith to appoint a Royal Commission to report upon the needs and practical means of simplifying English spelling. This is beginning at the beginning—with some recognized authority behind the simplification of spelling. It is something far different from individual "reformers" in newspapers and books, "dashing with untempered mortar," by adopting arbitrary and bizarre simplification that makes a passage of print of this grotesque spelling look like an extract from "Josh Billings," the Yankee proto-apostle of reformed spelling. Individual steps in spelling reform are mischievous. Simplified spelling of the English language to be anything more than a farce and an orthigraphic and etymologic outrage, must have the backing of authority, the only possibility of uniformity. It is held that English orthigraphy is difficult to learn; so is mathematics. Yet the latter is studied and "mastered," more for the mental training involved than for its practical use in after life—in most cases. Learning English spelling, hard as it is, is a good sort of mental training, especially if due regard is paid to its etymological origin, involving the history of the English race and its progenors and congenors. In simplifying English spelling, the loss as well as the gain, should be considered. It is all very well to make the spelling of English so simple that the wayfaring man though a fool may spell, but when in the process its historical character, and its etymological raison d'etre is destroyed, that, as Shakspere says, is "a horse of another colour."

GRUESOME WASTE.

We paid mighty high for those binocular "spy glasses," but unfortunately we can see the graft and looting without their use. We don't need them to discover that we bought surgical dressings and hospital supplies at three or four prices; we don't need them to show that the grafting was automatic in the purchase of transport trucks. We don't need them to see that thousands were squandered on thousands of defective boots, for our soldiers to wear out before they got set to the foot. We don't need binoculars to see the knacker's procession of spavined, knee-sprung, wind-broken, thirty-year-old horses bought for the Government in King's County, Nova Scotia, by A. Dewitt Foster, Conservative M.P., and W. F. MacKay, secretary to John Stanfield, Chief Whip of the House of Commons, of the Government party. The story of the Nova Scotia sale of horses to the Government is perhaps the most sorry and sordid, and cynical bit of graft ever perpetrated in Canada. If it was a crime and a scandday to sell such horses, a heavier responsibility rests upon the buyers. That fact that a member of Parliament, permitted, if he did not assist, such crimes in his own constituency; that they were done with the knowledge or ignorance of the Minister of Militia—one would be as bad as the other—brings the responsibility uncomfortably close to the Government and the premier, and demands prompt repudiation as well as prompt punishment of the guilty. Think of the crime of trusting the life of a despatch rider to a horse, that was rejected at the time of the South African war—in 1900—on the ground that it was too old, being sold in 1915 to the present Government for the rough and tumble life of actual warfare, or entrusting knee-sprung and broken-winded horses with similar service. In the interests of our soldiers in the field; in the interests of the people who will have to pay the $60 or more millions spent, or rather largely wasted; in the good name of Canada, whose soldiers are fighting the battle of national honour and honesty, a swift end should be put to this grastly looting, and the only substitute made—a return to, or, rather, adoption of, honest methods of purchase—the elimination of the middleman and the parliamentary grafter, the smashing of the patronage list with all its possibilities of robbery and corruption and crookedness. According to reports a leaf should be taken out of Hon. Adam Beck's way of buying horses for the Government in Ontario—direct purchase without the toll of the middleman and the grafter.

CONDONING WRONG-DOING.

The dishonesty and inefficiency revealed in the Public Accounts Committee at Ottawa in the matter of war supplies are bad enough per se; but the worst feature in connection with them is the disposition of the Government, government officials, and press supporting the Government, to excuse and in some cases even justify the wrong-doing. Where the lives of soldiers are concerned, it seems a little raw to try to make venial offences of the wrong-doing, instead of honestly striving to get the naked truth. If we leave the work of investigation incomplete—if the full facts are not brought out—if some things are concealed—there is ground for suspicion that worse remains behind; whereas, thorough investigation, without palliative suggestions, might reveal the fact that things were not so bad, as if suspicion and imagination are allowed to run riot. Since the Borden Government came into office, there has been a disposition and practice to repel responsibility for wrong-doing, by the tu quoque argument—"the Liberals did as badly, if not worse, when they were in office"—the weakest possible defence. Our local contemporary makes a great point of the fact, that some of the officials connected more or less directly with the looting operations, were appointees of the late Liberal government. That fact does not excuse them, though it perhaps illustrates the truth of the old-copy book headline—"Evil communications corrupt good manners." These men are now officials of the Borden Government, and the Borden Government must accept the full responsibility for their actions, right or wrong. They were acting for a Conservative government, and must have done the wrongs, laid to their charge, with the knowledge of the Governme. : if the Government was ignorant of their actions, so much the worse, for there we have a proof of criminal incompetence and lack of proper administrative organization. In regard to the action of the officials mentioned, our contemporary naively asks, "Who is to blame? Those who left them there, or those who put them there?" Unquestionably, "those who left them there," and provided, or permitted, the conditions that enabled officials to cheat the Government, that is cheat the country. Evasion of responsibility for wrong-doing is cowardly, as excusing or justifying wrong-doing is criminal. We are all working together to end this war, to help Canada do her duty. We are spending money freely with the full and free consent of Parliament and the whole people. If we spend 100 millions we demand value for 100 millions. We are sure our soldiers will give full value in gallant service, for all they cost. They will give far better service, if they are not crippled and hampered by the fact of the money intended for their proper equipment being wasted in loot—say, eighty million dollars of value received and twenty millions stealings or equivalent waste.

OLD TRICKS.

A glance through that portion of Plutarch's lives dealing with Caesar makes one wonder how far back the original Hohensollerns or others of their kind must have held sway over the German people. For instance, the first significant passage reads:

His (Caesar's) second war was in defence of the Gauls against the Germans, though some time before he had made Ariovistus, their king, recognized at Rome as an ally. But THEY WERE VERY INSUFFERABLE NEIGHBOURS to those under his government; and it was probable, when occasion offered, THEY WOULD RENOUNCE THE PRESENT ARRANGEMENTS AND MARCH ON TO OCCUPY GAUL.

And a few pages further on in the same book, this early history is revealed:

Of the war with this people (the Germans), Caesar himself has given this account in his commentaries, that the barbarians, having sent ambassadors to treat with him DLD, DURING THE TREATY, SET UPON HEM IN HIS MARCH, by which means, with eight hundred men, they routed five thousand of his horse, who did not suspect their coming; that afterwards they sent other ambassadors to renew the same fraudulent practices, whom he kept in custody, and led on his army against the barbarians as judging it were simplicity TO KEEP FAITH WITH THOSE WHO HAD SO FAITHLESSLY BROKEN THE TERMS THEY HAD AGREED TO.

Even history reveals the stigma of treaty-breaking on the part of German rulers. There must have been a few Hohensollerns, Bernhardis, Bethman-Hollwegs and Bernstorffs, even in Caesar's day. And who knows but these passages will yet be quoted in apology of hereditary characteristics. It is to be regretted that the other nations could not have read up on Caesar before signing "the scrap of paper" with the Prussians.—London Advertiser.

CALL OF THE RED CROSS FOR OUR SICK AND WOUNDED SOLDIERS

TORONTO, April 8.— There are in Canada today many absent sons whose fathers and mothers look anxiously for their return. They are fighting for Canada and the empire and some of them have already fallen on the field of honour. Some will never return, but their memory will live in the thoughts of their country for all time. Others will be stricken with sickness or suffer wounds and they will need all the attention and comfort that human agency can give them. The duty of looking after these sick and wounded soldiers devolves upon the Red Cross Society and it is only by the assistance and support of the people of Canada that this work can be carried on speedily and with efficiency.

Wonderfully are the people of Canada responding to the call for service. Even the little children are doing their duty and old people who are past the allotted span of life are working with a magnificent spirit of love and self-sacrifice for the cause of humanity. When the history of this titanic struggle is written not the least splendid chapter will be that dealing with the work of the men, women and children of the empire on behalf of those who have held its honour high among the nations of the world. But the work cannot lag or stop for one instant. As the war progresses, as new contingents leave Canada for the seat of war, the demand will in proportion be greater than ever. The society appeals more than ever to the people of this country to work and strive in the great cause and it is confident that the appeal will be answered as nobly as it has been in the past and as it is being answered at the present time.

In no spirit of self-congratulation, but gravely, as those who have performed a duty lying to their hands, the people of Canada may take stock of the work which they have been the means of accomplishing. They may do this the more readily because they have not yet achieved the end of their self-sacrifice and because the need to which they have ministered grows rather than diminishes. Recruits are necessary in this sphere as in others and recruits are won by making known the exigencies of the situation.

With the main objects and purposes of the society the nation is sufficiently familiar. The nation knows also that motor ambulances have been provided for the transport of the wounded from battlefield to base hospital and have been kept in sufficient running order through these difficult winter days. It knows that vast quantities of stores have been shipped to England and thence to France to be applied in the nursing and care of the soldiers, that special apparatus has been purchased, that comforts, otherwise impossible to obtain, have been secured. These benefits have been made practicable because the means of providing them was ready to hand.

But these benefits represent, after all, only the material and positive side of what has become one of the greatest works of mercy in the world. To measure the Red Cross Society justly it is necessary to put lists of material things out of mind and to reckon, not in terms of goods supplied, but in terms of pain and suffering obviated and alleviated. It is necessary to think that, had this society not existed, the burden of sorrow and anguish which the war has laid upon our soldiers would have been increased many fold.

The medical correspondent of the London Times said recently: "I have followed the work of our sick and wounded since the outbreak of the war. I have seen the work of the society develop from what were rough and ready beginnings to its present perfection of organization. Day by Day the lot of the wounded man has been rendered more and more easy, detail after detail of his personal comfort has been considered and provided for, and finally, to comfort luxury—in a medical sense has been added."

To listen to the expressions of gratitude—expressions which put even Irish generosity to shame—is to feel that no sacrifice can be too great when our soldiers are thus restored to health. The restoration of a single one of our heroes to health would be reward enough for almost any self-denial. But this work measures its results, not in units but in thousands. Save for this great work hundreds of lives which have been saved would have been lost and a whole world of suffering added to the grim total of the war.

If there is anyone in Canaa who is not bearing some share of the burden of a wide world war, in which the very life and fabric o our empire and dominion are at stake, he is not worthy of the name he bears or of the country of which he is a citizen. There must be few in Canada who are not doing something, but there are some who could do more. The cries of the wounded and suffering men cry out to us in the darkness and call upon us to help. Can we turn a deaf ear to them in their hour of vitory and death? We must deny ourselves everything if necessary, in order that our country may be victorious. All of us cannot fight, all cannot bear the actual brunt of war, but all can do something, however little it may be, for the cause of mercy and humanity.

The Red Cross Society appeals to every Canadian, rich or poor, young or old, to assist in the great work. All donations, medical supplies, comforts for the sick and wounded soldiers, tobacco and all kinds of luxuries, should be sent to the provincial headquarters in the different provinces or to the head office at 77 King Street, East, Toronto. Wherever possible, supplies should be sent to the provincial offices.

Too Rich to Let Pass

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The discussion in Parliament on the advisability of the Government taking over part of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and operating it in connection with the Intercolonial, as it appears in big print in the editorial columns of last Tuesday's Review, is really too rich to let pass, especially the latter part of the article which is as follows:

Mr. Burnham: May I ask the hon. gentleman why it is that this idea of his was not carried out before?

Mr. Graham: My hon. friend and I were not in the House at the time or we might have had all these things provided for. Unfortunately, the Dominion was without our services and Parliament seemed to take another view.

Stormy Path For The Mayor

VANCOUVER, April 8—It looks very much as if in a few days Mayor Taylor of Vancouver would be fighting for two public offices at the same time. Last evening occurred the first issue of "Taylor's Bulletin," which is to be the mouthpiece of the Mayor since he was "locked out," as he puts it, of the World Office. In his first issue the Mayor announces that he will be an independent candidate for the Legislature at the coming provincial election. The paper was hardly on the street when Joseph Martin served Taylor with a writ of proceedings to unseat him for mayor. Taylor was elected in January against a field of three, one of whom was Martin. He had qualified admittedly on a borrowed lot and five citizens were successful in February in unseating him. In the bye-election Taylor again won his seat. Joe Martin warned the electors at that time that Taylor could be easily unseated again on a technicality, and his action to-day follows.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

FIRE'S GOOD WORK

How a Great Forest Conflagration Proved a Blessing in Disguise.

BY JAMES HARRISON.

In the southwest, where men are quick to avenge insult, Watson dwelled unharmed, mouthing imprecations against Elmer, holding him up to the scorn of the township. No one was braver than Watson when chatting with his cronies in front of the Westwood hotel and boasting what he would do when he next met Elmer face to face. But Elmer only laughed at Watson's threats.

The men were neighbors. Elmer owned five hundred acres and herded his cattle upon the government ranges. Watson was a sheep man, and that would have been enough to cause a quarrel, had not the long feud been settled by a line drawn clear across the state, separating the spheres of the two antagonists. Elmer, on his arrival at Westwood, had gone to call upon his neighbor to talk over their boundaries. But he found Watson in a drink stupor and a sad-eyed girl of twenty-two cooking upon the cheap oil stove in the wretched cabin.

"Mrs. Watson?" asked Elmer, doffing his hat. "I am Elmer; I have taken the neighboring range. I came to talk over—" Then he paused in embarrassment and saw the wounded pride on her face.

"Mr. Watson shall see you tomorrow," said the girl quietly, and Elmer withdrew, wondering and dismayed that such a girl should be bound to such a man.

He halted at the back of the cabin to fix his boot. Watson, thinking that he had gone, sat up on the couch.

"You—" he yelled, uttering a vile oath, "I've trapped you at last. You thought I was sleeping, didn't you, and that you could bring that man into my home! I know that you've been meeting him while I was tending sheep on the range. I'll—I'll—" He staggered across the cabin toward the girl. Elmer heard the cheap tinware clatter upon the stove and strode back into the cabin. Watson was standing over his wife in an attitude of impending assault. Elmer took him by the shoulders and ran him back across the room.

"I don't believe in interfering between a man and his wife—ordinarily," he said. "But if you ever lay a finger upon this lady I'll shake your teeth down your rum-soaked throat, you hound. Savvee?"

Watson fell back with a groan and Elmer, releasing him, departed with sudden realization of the folly of his exiotic action. It would go hard with Mrs. Watson now. He dared not look at her as he passed out of the door.

The next time he met her was when his cattle had strayed near Watson's boundary. She was seated upon the ground in the lush grasses, almost hidden by them. Elmer's keen ears had heard her sobs before he saw her.

He dismounted from his horse and went toward her awkwardly, and stood looking down at her. She sprang to her feet and faced him; her face was scarlet and the tears were still upon her cheeks.

Elmer stretched out his hands and grasped hers closely. "Mrs. Watson—forgive me," he said. "It just makes my blood boil. If ever I can help you—"

"No, you cannot help me," she said, turning her face away.

"But you are only a girl," he exclaimed. "You cannot have been married long. You have all your life before you; you cannot endure to be linked in this hideous way for years. You—"

"You must not say any more," Mr. Elmer, she answered coldly. "My troubles are of my own creating. I must bear them alone. I—"

She paused and her face blanched. She looked round and Elmer's eyes followed hers. Ten yards distant Watson was lying in the grass, regarding them, a sneer on his face. Elmer hesitated a moment, and then strode away.

He learned something of her story a few days later from some of the townspeople. Emmeline Watson had been married to her husband six months before they moved west from St. Louis. She was the orphan daughter of a famous architect who had killed himself in shame at his impending bankruptcy. Ignorant of the world, she had fallen a victim to the coarse, good-looking traveling man who had told her he loved her. They were married; six weeks later she learned that Watson was a drunkard and an ex-convict. She had prevailed on him to go west, to make a new start. For a time he had tried to reform, but his evil nature had proved dominant and he had shamefully abused and ill-treated her. Yet she seemed to cling to him all the more because of it.

Watson spread the story of his wife's encounter with Elmer through Westwood. Some day, he boasted, he would kill him. But when the men met Watson skulked past, or turned down a side street, pretending not to have seen him. Meanwhile Elmer was deliberating. If he interfered again he would take some irrevocable step. But he knew that Watson's infatuations were true; he loved Emmeline Watson, and in the few short encounters which they had had he had discerned in her own heart an answering inclination toward him. But he knew, also, that so long as Watson lived she would be true to him.

He had controlled his rising passion though it went hard with him. At night, lying in his lonely cabin, the thought of Emmeline's beautiful face and clear eyes, the knowledge of her truth and honor maddened him. She was the one woman for him; so long as he lived his love for her would be an integral part of his being. His passion drove him forth to mount his horse and gallop furiously across the ranges under the stars, returning exhausted, his horse sweating and foaming, when the sun appeared over the eastern hills.

On one such night he had had a harder battle than ever before. Evil thoughts came to him. He would kill Watson. Everyone knew that Watson had threatened to take his life; he could not be convicted, or even tried. Why should he not relieve her from this fearful chain she wore? Perhaps she was suffering now; perhaps Watson was abusing her, striking her, even. He turned his horse toward Watson's cabin and then, irresolute, reined in upon the top of an acclivity.

In the south a thin column of smoke was rising. It was the first onset of a forest fire. The sight banished his thoughts from Elmer's mind. He galloped hastily toward the place.

The sun rose as he rode, and long before he reached the spot the smoke had become a boil of flame. The trees, dried by a two months' drought, were roaring columns of fire.

The flames were spreading all round the clearing which Watson held, along the stretch of national forest which ringed the ranges and thence stretched away north and west as far as the eye could see. They would rush through the long, dry pastures like the wind and consume the cabin, sheep, everything in their path. Already the tree-tops were leaping wires of flame when Elmer drew bridle at Watson's home.

It was empty. Elmer shouted with joy. Doubtless the fugitives had been warned in time. They must have fled north along the open range toward

A Thin Column of Smoke Was Rising. Westwood: And by this path, if he should hasten, he could still escape also. He turned his tired nag's head and spurred him relentlessly.

The animal sniffed the breeze, laden with smoke and flying sparks, and galloped madly for safety. Horse and rider were as one now in their desire. But presently a cloud of smoke rolled down on them; a banner of flame drifted across their path. The road was blocked. They were trapped, ringed about with flame.

Then out of the blind smoke came a cry—such a crying as he had heard that day in the long grasses of the range. It was Emmeline's voice. It seemed to come out of the smoke wrack like the cry of a child that seeks its mother—desperate, hopeless, and weary. He shouted.

"Emmeline! Emmeline!"

The low cry wailed, but not in answer. She seemed to be overcome with some impersonal grief which recked nothing of her own safety. Elmer broke through the stinging smoke mist, plunging madly among the low shrubs that fringed the burning forests, calling to her. And instinct had guided him aright, for, though she did not call in answer, he found her.

She was bending over a flame-blackened thing that lay in a little hollow among the pastures. Elmer saw at once that Watson was dead. He learned afterward that as he ran for safety, oblivious of his wife, a veering gust had sent the flames toward him and encircled him with fire before the conflagration resumed its unopposed march through the trees again.

"My husband is dead," she said slowly. "It is judgment. He tried to set fire to your cabin last night and burn you to death. He fired the cabin and the forests. But God saved you."

Suddenly the smoke wrack lifted. A changing wind held back the flames. Now, before him, Elmer could see a narrow path, as yet uncrossed, that led to the safety of the open range.

He ran back for his horse and led it to where Emmeline stood. He swung her to the horse's withers and mounted behind her. A few minutes later and they had left the flames behind them. Elmer bent over Emmeline.

"We are safe now," he said. "Emmeline!——"

That when you put a salve onto your child's skin, it passes through the pores and enters the blood, just as surely as if you put it into the child's stomach?

You would not put a coarse mass of animal fat, colored by various mineral poisons (such as many crude salves are) into your child's blood by way of the stomach? Then why do so by way of the pores?

Take no risk. Use always the pure herbal essences provided in Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk contains no trace of any animal oil or fat, and no poisonous mineral coloring matter. From start to finish it is purely herbal.

It will heal sores, ulcers, abscesses, eruptions, varicose ulcers, cuts, burns and bruises more quickly than any other known preparation. It is antiseptic, quickly stops the smarting of a sore or cut, cures piles, inflamed sores and blood-poisoning. It is a combination of healing power and scientific purity. Ask those who have proved it.

HIGH MORTALITY AMONG THE FISH

Hundred of Dead Fish Line the Shores of Scugog River

LINDSAY, April 8—The presence of a large number of gulls on the upper stretch of the Scugog is accounted for by the fact that hundreds of dead fish can be seen along the shores. The mortality among the members of the finny tribe during the winter months has been very great and it has been suggested that a sample be procured by the member of the Provincial House and forwarded to Toronto for examination in order that the exact cause of death might be ascertined.

FALLING HAIR MEANS DANDRUFF IS ACTIVE

Save your hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now

Thin, brittle, colourless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which, if not remedied, causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die —then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine to-night—now—anytime— will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

Cologne Gazette Is Sore.

AMSTERDAM, April 8. — Commenting on the published summary of the American note to Great Britain The Cologne Gazette says:

"It appears to be a note against Germany rather than against England, and it is so framed that England may leave it unnoticed without having reason to fear any serious steps from the American Government."

More Successes For Botha.

CAPE TOWN, Union of South Africa, April 8.—It was announced officially here yesterday that troops of the Union have occupied without opposition the railway stations at Kalkfontein and Kanus, German Southwest Africa. This follows the capture of Warmbad, 20 miles north of the Orange river, which was announced yesterday.

British Cavalry Does Not Relish Trench Warfare

Big Earth Gashes Across Battle Front Prevent Mounted Fighting

British Headquarters in France, via London, April 1—No question regarding the future is answered with so much hesitation as that concerning the work of the cavalry. The drawing of a great ditch across two countries has produced a condition of affairs to which it is quite difficult at first to become mentally accustomed. You have but to walk away from it in any direction on your own side to be in perfect safety. Never was there such a state of affairs in war before. No ambushes, no awkward patrols, not even a lost scout or a stray sniper. All your enemies are on one side and all your friends are on the other.

In a crisis of such simplicity what can the cavalry do? It takes its turn in the trenches, and is as admirable in the trenhes as it is elsewhere, but cavalry in a trench is a wasteful thing; wasteful because the training of a cavalryman runs into a considerable sum of money for which only a small return can be obtained from a trench; wasteful because when only one man from a section can be left to look after the horses they cannot be adequately groomed or exercised, so that while the ranks are being reduced by the wrong sort of work the horses are getting out of condition owing to lack of the right sort.

The British cavalry bore the brunt of some of the most exacting fighting in Flanders, when every man had to be made use of, wastefully or otherwise, and splendidly as they acquitted themselves, indeed, just because they did so splendidly, the work told upon their proper efficiency, which they have only recently been able to retrieve.

Before very long, however, there again will be a fine cavalry force at Sir John French's disposal, and interest is concerned in the use to which it may be put. Called upon to undertake the most exacting work from the very moment it detrained at the front, and at a season when it was some way from having arrived at its hardest condition, it responded to every test with which it could have been tried.

View of German Cavalry.

Very noticeable in that connection, too, is the different regard which the various arms extend to their opponents. The airman, though he has established a superiority on which every onlooker has commented, says very little about it himself. Indeed, he even deprecates too hasty deductions from what has happened hitherto. He thinks the German is probably a fine-weather flier and expects him to do better when the winds lighten.

The gunner speaks with respect of the enemy's artillery. He speaks, indeed, enviously of what it was when he was called up to face every calibre of weapon with his 18-pounder, and though conditions happily have changed since then he maintains his respect for the foe's cunning and marksmanship. The infantryman also is not in the least inclined to undervalue his opponent's pluck, persistency and adroit devices.

"He is so good a soldier one might easily get to like him if he wasn't such a villain," said one field officer, regretfully.

But the cavalryman's attitude is different altogether. Though all his fighting, in the saddle and out of it, has been done with the odds, and often with unreasonable odds, against him, he has been entirely unimpressed with the enemy's ability. From scores of cavalry officers not a single favourable opinion could be gleaned of the German horseman, as a man or as a soldier. In those early days when the German millions were sweeping Belgium empty of opposition it would be supposed that an outlet might have been found for any dash that cavalry had in them, but the evidence seems conclusive that it never was safe to expect German cavalry to stand unless the odds were at least three to one in their favour, and even at that they were invariably beaten.

They appeared to have no confidence in themselves, in their horses, in their arms or in their leaders. At anything like even numbers they never waited to dispute a point if they could avoid it by withdrawing.

"With a squadron and a half we went through one of their regiments" said a subaltern, "and came back again before they could make up their minds to take us on," and from every side came confirmation of this curious disinclination to assume the particular offensive which was about all one did expect from German cavalry Horsemen one doubted them to be, horse masters one knew they were not; on foot their performances were not worth considering.

British Tactics Win.

Though on the retreat from Mons they had in front of them what they were good enough to regard not only as a shaken but as a beaten enemy, they found that modern actions do not favour the maintenance of masses of cavalry at a convenient distance to await the moment of victory. After thrusting their nose on several occasions painfully and most unwittingly into the fire of the foe, they adopted measures of less drastic concentration, and from that moment apparently they were lost. They were facing men who could fight in any fashion, but with a prediction for fighting if possible on their horses. The hesitating German offered to such inclination the very target it desired. Nothing is so pleasant in cavalry work as to charge something that had its doubts about charging you. Before the war was many days old British cavalry practice had crystallized into the simplest of formulae: "Go for them!"

Whatever the discrepancy in numbers or the disadvantage in position, down came the lances or out flashed the swords, and the trot became a gallop before the enemy knew he was upon him. So easily and well did the thing work that many a pulled off by sheer effrontery which the text books would, right have looked askance—that affair the squadron and a half, for in which ended, after its vivacious lude, with a pretty piece of which drew the outraged enemy up to a dismounted line of which put the finishing touch to discomfiture.

in chief by Mr. Kyte mond, N.S.), Harvey tes- he sold one horse the heaves, was sprung d legs and was of n age.

Under cross-examination by Mr. Rhodes (Con., Cumberland), witness said that when he found that the Government buyers were so easy and observed the kind of horses that were being purchased from others, he determined to make a little more money. He bought horse after horse, fell into line and sold them at a fairly good profit. One of them was over 20 years old, and all of them had spavins, ring bones and heaves. One horse, however, did not get by the "Doc," as in addition to spavins on both hind legs, he had a huge swelling on the right foreleg.

This last named animal Harvey said he traded for another which he sold to the Government. This horse, he said, had been offered for sale to the Government at the time of the South African war, but was rejected upon the ground that it had at that time already passed the age limit.

Somewhere about 1905, he declared, it had been sold for $15, and subsequently for $10. The man from whom witness got it had traded for it one drake and pair of ducks. The Government took it from him for $80.

S. S. Selfridge of King's County corroborated Harvey to a considerable extent. He declared that the majority of the horses offered for sale and purchased at Berwick and Kingston were old, broken-winded, and with visible blemishes. He personally had heard of the sale and drove to Berwick with a fine team of horses, which he sold for $350. A neighbor of his took down quite a fine horse and was unable to do any business. He, therefore, telephoned home to send down the "old mare." The old mare, aged 17, was sold without difficulty.

J. W. Selfridge gave testimony along the same line as the preceding witnesses.

The investigation into the boots supplied the Canadian soldiers is concluded, and the work of preparing the report of the committee is in progress. There will be a debate on it in the House. It is possible that there will be a minority report, but there is no certainty.

THIERICHENS GIVES UP

Commander of Prince Eitel Interns at Last Moment

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. April 8.—Commander Max Thierichens of the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich asked the United States Government through port authorities here last night to intern his ship and crew for the war. Up to the last moment the German skipper kept up the appearance of being ready for a dash to sea and, when the time for decision finally came, he explained that failure of "expected relief" to arrive had made it necessary to intern rather than "deliver crew and ship to fruitless and certain destruction by British and French warships waiting off the Virginia capes."

To-day the commerce raider will make her last cruise of the war. She will be taken to the Norfolk navy yard, across Hampton Roads from the shipyard here, where she has been laid up since limping into port on March 10, after the remarkable commerce destroying voyage from the Orient, during which she sent the American ship William P. Frye to the bottom.

Collector of Customs Hamilton boarded the Eitel shortly after 7 o'clock last night with an imperative notice from the Washington Government that the time for his stay in this port would expire at midnight last night, and that he must leave American waters by 4 o'clock on the morning of April 8. Before the customs collector could deliver the message, Commander Thierichens handed to him the written announcement of his decision.

Commander Thierichens himself declared that the actio he had been forced to take made him sick; that he was heartbroken to be compelled to resort to such a step. Unofficially, he stated that he had never intended to intern if it were possible to prevent it, that he had hoped for the arrival of German forces to do battle with the British and French warships off the American coast, and thus clear the way for his return to the open sea.

WAS IN THE RETREAT FROM MONS THE FLIGHT FROM ANTWERP AND SAW FOURTEEN BATTLES

Stanley N. Dancey, Canadian Newspaper Man, Formerly of Guelph, Vancouver and Belleville, in City Accompanied by Belgian Fiancee and Her Mother—Some of the Experiences He Shared.

SAYS AUDACIOUS IS SUNK

A real live war correspondent, Stanley N. Dancey, who will relate some of his experiences in the European war zone on Friday and Saturday nights in Victoria Hall, gave an Examiner reporter a foretaste of his lecture in an interview at the Empress Hotel last night. He landed at Boulogne, France on August 21, hot on the trail of the regiments which composed the first British expeditionary force. followed them until he met them returning near Charleroi and was an eyewitness of most of the now famous retreat from Mons. Backed up practically to the defences of Paris Mr. Dancey, decided to get on the inside and look out. He saw a thrilling aerial engagement in which a German taube was brought down. Later he journeyed up and down the French lines; was with the Belgians in the flight from Antwerp; passed into Germany, where he visited many towns and almost reached Berlin; dined and motored with German officers and secret service men; journeyed through Liege, Namur and other Belgian centres, finally reaching Brussels, where he joined his fiancee, Madamoiselle Yvonne Tenaerts and her mother, Madame L. Tenaerts, who saw the pompous entry of the Huns into the Belgian capital and lived over three months under their administration. In the early part of February, Mr. Dancey, his fiancee and her mother succeeded in reaching England. They are accompanying him on his Canadian tour, which he expects to complete in four weeks and return again to Europe.

Interesting Details.

Mr. Dancy has seen much of the worst and best features of the war. He has been behind and through the lines that scarred and shackled Belgium; he has travelled extensively through the countries now at war in Western Europe and his statements to the Examiner were in almost every case corroboratory of the war news published from month to month. Of course, the citizens who hear him will be informed of many interesting details which he personally observed, and the lecture will be illustrated by stereopticon pictures, some taken by Mr. Dancy, some obtained from German officers, many of whom are kodak enthusiasts, and the pen pictures of Frederick Villiers. Mr. Dancy was unable to secure any "close-up" pictures of engagements, nor did he take any notes. Either of these found on him would have been incriminating prima facie evidence against him, and it is impossible to tell how serious might have been the consequences to him. He remarked that the struggle to avoid sentries and kindred difficulties on the field, especially behind the Allies' lines was trying and strenuous. Thumbs were down for the newspaper men, but in spite of the regulations and the authorities, Mr. Dancey saw a world of events. He possesses 22 identification papers and passports, one of them from Brand Whitlock. Mr. Dancey had another which passed him into the German lines as an American citizen. It was "vised" by German officers and proved decidedly helpful until he met an exceptionally inquisitive officer and had to get the Whitlock paper to satisfy him.

Saw German Massed Attacks.

Mr. Dancey said it was only too true that British regiments were all but annihilated from Mons down to the Marne, especially in the Charleroi district. They were vastly outnumbered. They were separated from the French. A thin line of Britishers, they fought every foot of the way, going through hell all day and retiring to new positions at night. Mr. Dancey emphasized that the deeds of this first army in those terrible early days will be accorded a place with the greatest glories of British arms. The Munsters, the Dorsets, the Shropshires, the Coldstreams, these and other regiments were sadly decimated and broken up. He saw soldiers in the retreat, and he said there were thousands of them, who had become separated from their regiments, with their feet bleeding from the forced marches, their uniforms in shreds, but undaunted and indomnitable. Many of them had been lost three days and were trying to find their regiments.

Enemy at Their Heels.

Mr. Dancey states that at Roubaix, north of Lille, he himself was only fifteen minutes ahead of the Germans. Like a swarm of locusts or like the tide, they were pressing toward Paris. With powerful field glasses and at comparatively close vantage points Mr. Dancey saw the enemy in their close formation attacks. He observed some of these "massacres" as he termed them, in the first retirement, and again at the fall of Antwerp, when the Kaiser drove his hosts towards Calais, in the vain hope of menacing England from the French coast. Altogether, Mr. Dancy saw fourteen battles.

A Few Incidents.

In the evening of his first day at Boulogne he was on his way to the Governor's residence. He was quietly walking along when suddenly a voice at his side said, "Qui vive la" (who goes there) and a bayonet, a long one, too, was almost touching his chest. He satisfied the sentry, received his first reminder of military precautions and likewise dreamed on different occasions of that bayonet.

"Give the devil his due, he was a good one," Mr. Dancey remarked in reference to an air fight he saw over Paris. It was while the enemy was close to the city. For two days this machine had dropped bombs, and emboldened by the ease of approach he returned on the third. Suddenly from one side of the city appeared a French machine, driving straight toward the taube, and a moment later another Frenchman was seen winging from a different direction.

'The German had hockey beaten for dodging," Mr. Dancy said, "but they got him and dropped him."

Alsatian Sentiment.

In a Brussels cafe one day, Mr. Dancey, who speaks French quite fluently, noticed an Alsatian soldier. Ordered to the front he himself had cut his wrist and wore a bandage about his arm. He said he had eight bullets left, five for the stars and three for German officers. The soldier's attention was directed to a group of officers nearby. Apparently they too were from Alsace. The soldier shouted in French, "To h—— with the Kaiser," and no one rebuked him.

Soldiers Opposed to War.

"Nine out of every ten German soldiers are opposed to the war," Mr. Dancey said, and he saw thousands of them as prisoners and among their fellows

The Prussians and especially their officers wanted the war, and back in the Fatherland just now the people, reading only of victories, cannot understand why more advance has not been made. And they cannot recondile the long trains of wounded with the spirit of enthusiasm the Government endeavours to maintain and foster.

Has Noticed the Change.

In their first rush through Belgium and France, the German soldiers showed no respect for either the laws of God or man. According to Mr. Dancey the worst reports are true. Apart from the bayoneting of the wounded, attacking the non-combatants, and generally destroying and terrorizing the country, Mr. Dancey said he had seen towns and villages, situated twenty-five miles from the firing lines completely razed. They entered Belgium arrogant, confident, blinded to everything but their own ruthless power. To-day you notice the difference in their demeanour. There is a feeling of serious doubt in their minds as to the outcome of the war. At times it appears to be almost fear. And it is generally understood that the officers admit they cannot win. Socialists are becoming restless, and there are many of them in the army. Mr. Dancey is of the opinion that revolution or some trouble of that kind may yet embarass the enemy. He says that not a few officers have been shot in the back, and he knows of three German generals who have committed suicide.

Young Officers Worst.

The general charges made against the Germans, Mr. Dancey declares, are only too well founded. He saw enough to convince him. The occupation of Brussels has been accompanied by a tacit policy of worrying the Belgian populace by petty persecutions, apparently planned to provoke them to retaliation. In this, as in most of the worst work, the young German officers are far worse than the older and more experienced men. Mr. Dancey saw an incident one day in Brussels illustrating the point. Two Belgian police were performing a particular duty when a young officer interfered. Mr. Dancey states that the latter was entirely in the wrong. An argument ensued and the upshot of it was that the two Belgians were arrested for lese majeste or something of that kind, were sentenced to years' imprisonment, and the city was fined five million marks.

Again, the Germans have been known to cut the telegraph wires outside the city, ascribe the work to civilions, and gather another fine from the municipality. Parading Belgian prisoners through Brussels was another form of studied insult. One day 20 Belgian soldiers, guarded by 20 Germans were paraded through the streets. On the Bourse there was a crowd of thousands of Belgians who closed around them. There were three prisoners remaining in the hands of the Germans when order was restored. Mr. Dancey states that many Belgians appeared coatless and hatless in the crowd, an indication of how the prisoners were rescued.

Getting the London "Times."

Copies of the London Times smuggled into Brussels sold in some cases for hundreds of francs. The overlords forbade its circulation, but the people passed copies from one to another by most secretive methods. On one occasion girls were apparently selling pictures of M. Max, the burgomaster of Brussels. As they would hold them up for sale they would say, "C'est le Times de Londres, monsieur." Spies had been active, however, and shortly after several cars flashed up to a boulevard where there was some unusual commotion. The secret service men simply said, "Take that one, and that and that," and so on as they indicated the girls who had been selling the papers. They were hustled into the cars and whisked away.

Retreat from Antwerp.

Mr. Dancey states that the flight of thousands of Belgians from Antwerp was one of the most pathetic scenes imaginable. Thousands and thousands of them filled the roads leading south. The Germans were not far behind them. When news reached them that the English had arrived, Mr. Dancey saw many shed tears of joy at the expectation of succour. Not long after, British cavalry and artillery swept by. They arrested the Germans long enough to allow the refugees reach Ostend and cross to England. Words were unavailing, Mr. Dancey said, to describe those days after Antwerp.

Used Raw Recruits.

Mr. Dancey states that the Landstrums were told that they would have only sentry duty to do in Belgium and France. When these older men arrived however, they were sent to the firing line. Numbers of them revolted, and Mr. Dancey said 4,000 were arrested on this charge. School boys with only 24 and 48 hours' training were also used at the front. Mr. Dancey considers that the German war machine has depreciated to 45 per cent. of its original efficiency. He expects to see the conclusion of the war by September. The capturing of a reinforced concrete trench to-day may be regarded as great a victory as Waterloo.

Fifty per cent. of the sum received for articles sold for charity in Brussels goes to the Government.

Mr. Dancey met Irvin Cobb in Aix la Chapelle interviewing refugees in one of the hotels.

He declares that the stories of sniping on the part of Belgian civilians is absolutely false. Only in one little town did he find a trace of it, and the German tales that the houses of Liege were loop-holed, he says is entirely false. The burgomasters issued proclamations and saw to it that arms were collected before the Germans came. He also made particular enquiries and states that there were no French soldiers in Namur before the Germans crossed the Belgian frontier. German stories to the contrary he declares are absolutely false.

However, this is stealing enough of Mr. Dancey's thunder. But he has plenty in reserve with the pictures for Friday and Saturday night's lectures.

WORK FOR THE UNEMPLOYED

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The employment bureau of this city, 352½ Water St., has not only "attempted," but succeeded in securing work for 490 unemployed the past few months, 120 of these hired by farmers.

This city has achieved greater success than any other community in the Province of Ontario in dealing with this problem.

Five hundred application cards for work were forwarded to Toronto from here, but not one secured a day's work from that source.

The three days' mission now in progress at the Bank of Commerce Chambers will undoubtedly solve this question of so vital importance.

Yours respectfully,
EDWARD LANGLEY, Sec.

Louis Houedry's Statement Respecting Worn Out Guns

Corroborated by the French Offical Review of the War—Many of the Projectiles Fail to Burst—Number of Shots Allowed to the Batteries For Each Action is Strictly United

Mr. Louis Houedry returned to Peterborough last Saturday, after spending eight months in the service of his country, acting in the capacity of French interpreter to the British army, he laid particular emphasis upon the apparent worn out condition of the enemy's guns. It is interesting to note that the eighth instalment of the French official review of the war deals with the wastage of guns, projectiles and "the moral condition of the German army."

Regarding the wastage of guns, it appears is easy to ascertain the losses in artillery. On Dec. 16th Regiment of Artillery left Courtrai for Germany, of which 18 were used up. This is extremely high for a regiment.

Similar facts have been ascertained regards heavy artillery. On the 21st and 22nd, 77 guns of heavy calibre which were no longer serviceable were sent to Cologne. These are guns which are not isolated cases show ill the German artillery resisted the ordeal of the battle.

GUNS WORN OUT.

The proofs, moreover, are decisive. For some weeks we have noticed a very peculiar aspect of the rifling on the bands of a great number of shells of the 77 gun. When these things are compared with those of shells fired three months ago, plain beyond all question that the tubes are worn and that they will soon require to be replaced. The wear in guns is aggravated by the defective which has arisen of drawing the original army corps for the guns assigned to the recently-formed corps or those in course of formation. Several regiments of field artillery have in fact had to give up two batteries.

"These two phenomena — wearing out of material and drafts upon batteries—will inevitably result either in the reduction of batteries from six to four guns, a reduction of the number of batteries in the army corps, or the partial substitution for 77 guns of 9 centimetre cannon of the old pattern, the presence of which has been many times perceived at the front.

LACK MUNITIONS ALSO.

"Furthermore, the German artillery lacks and has lacked for a very long time, munitions. It has been obliged to reduce its consumption of shells in a notable degree. No doubt is possible in this respect. The statements of prisoners since the battle of the Marne and still more since the battle of the Yser, make it clear that the number of shots allowed to the batteries for each action is strictly limited. We have found on officers killed or taken prisoners, the actual orders prescribing positively a strict economy of munitions.

BAD QUALITY.

"For the last three months, too, we notice that the quality of the projectiles is mediocre. Many of them do not burst. On January 7 in the course of a bombardment of Laventie scarcely any of the German shells burst. The proportion of non-bursts were estimated at two-fifths by the British on December 14; two-thirds by the Belgians at Furnes in January; and at two-thirds by ourselves in the same month. On January 3rd at Bourg-Et-Comin, and at other places since then, shrapnel fell, the explosion of which scarcely broke the envelope and the bullets were projected without any force. About the same time our 14th army corps was fired at with shrapnel loaded with fragments of glass, and on several points of our front shell casings of very bad quality have been found, denoting hasty manufacture and the use of materials taken at hazard.

A CITY VOCALIST HIGHLY PRAISED

The Toronto Courier, speaking of the short vocal recital which Miss Dorothy Allan, gave by invitation, in the Arts and Letters Club of that city to a critical audience of over two hundred people, says:

"A singing artiste, new to Toronto, is Miss Dorothy Allan. She has a mezzo voice, a soprano range and an essentially lyric style.

The voice is of luscious quality, in the mezzo range, golden and lovely, in the soprano, clear and white as the notes of a thrush. She has the almost irresistible temptation of most mezzos with soprano range to carry the mezzo further than it should go. In fact, there is an edge to Miss Allan's voice which is almost pure contralto, and it is this surprising range and variety of tone-colour that make her voice so very effective, her repertoire so extensive, and her style so popular.

She studied recently with Clerici, the famous Italian coach; previous to which her only tutor was her father, who is an organist and Professor of Music in Peterborough."

A French wood preservation method consists of forcing a solution of ten per cent borax and five per cent rosin into timber by electricity.

LIKES THE EXPERIENCE

Mrs. Angus McIntosh, Cedar street, has received the following card from her son, Corporal Wilbert McIntosh, who enlisted with the 91st Highlanders of Hamilton, and is now with the first contingent in France. He writes fro mthe trenches:

Dear Mother,—Have been in the trenches three times since I wrote last, and like it better each time that I am in. I was in twenty-four hours the first time, 36 hours the next time, and four days the next time, and now we are out for a few days' rest, and to get eased up for the next time. We are very close to the German trenches, between 120 and 160 yards, and that is not far. We talk to each other at night, when all is quiet, although we like to do some sniping at that.

I am in the best of health and enjoying the experience under fire. It is rather noisy, but we are all in good spirits, and hope to have victory in a few days.

FIGHTING OUTBREK

Kingston Standard: The little yellow dog belonging to the 21st battalion which was taken to Montreal by the 22nd battery on February 16th and tramped all the way back to the battalion in Kingston, was taken to Brockville three weeks ago and was left behind. The boys of the battalion thought their pet was gone, but this morning he was at artillery park, just a little stiff, but able to walk around after tramping from Brockville. Col. Hughes felt sure all along that the little fellow would find his way back.

Military notes

Belleville Notes.

BELLEVILLE, April 7.—(Special to the Examiner).—The funeral of Private Driver of the Lindsay detachment of the 39th Battalion took place here to-day, with full military honours.

Pte. Matthew H. Sergeant of the Peterborough detachment was admitted to the hospital to-day.

Everything has been quiet since Saturday and the sanitary conditions are improving.

Your correspondent is not surprised that your representative found everything so rosy looking. Admittedly they look better from the parlour of the Quinte than they do from a top bunk overlooking the lavatories in the "dog-geries." As to the cuisine being equal to the Quinte you are all right, if the Quinte does not sue you for libel.

The Y.M.C.A. marquee is now opened and is much appreciated. It is possible now to get a comfortable smoke and to write letters.

The dry canteen is also going. Nothing elaborate, but we must not expect too much to start with. Everything points to a desire to make our lot a comfortable one. The agitation has done no harm.

THE ITALIAN KING'S PLIGHT

LONDON, April 8.—The King of Italy, says a story circulating in Germany, once owned $25,000,000 worth of United States Steel stock. The Emperor of Germany heard of the thrifty monarch's purchase of this stock and sent word to him that Krupp's stock was betetr than the American venture. The Krupp stock would pay three times as much as steel in dividends, said the Kaiser.

The King of Italy, the German story goes, took the Kaiser's advice and now holds $25,000,000 worth of stock in Krupp's cannon factory. And conclude the Germans, if Italy goes to war with Germany, the Krupp stock held by the King or Italy will be cancelled, or at least, the King of Italy has good reason to believe it will be.

Langford said that if elected he would take a firm stand for the economical administration of the city's business as had always been his endeavour in the past.

Fancy Bazaar At St. John's School-House

Mayor Buller Inaugurates This Function

St. John's schoolhouse was, yesterday, transformed from its ordinary prosaic appearance into a fancy bazaar.

The stage had been very tastefully decorated with flowers and Japanese lanterns, the background being formed by a large Japanese flag. On this had bean shaped a Geisha or Japanese tea house where some very excellent tea with the concomitants of cakes, etc., were served by some "Geisha girls." The electroliers had been dispensed with, the illumination being provided by a number of Japanese lanterns. The effect was extremely pretty, especially in the evening.

The body of the large schoolroom was filled with stalls, mainly decorated by flags, among which the British Union Jack and the French tri-colour were pre-eminent.

The proceedings were ushered in at 3.30 p.m. by Mayor Buller, who in a neat, trite speech, eulogized the work carried on by the men and women's Bible classes of St. John's church, under whose auspices the fancy bazaar had been inaugurated, and who then declared the bazaar as being opened.

These Bible classes are well attended. The men's class number about forty, while the women's class, led by Mrs. May, have upwards of sixty members on the roll. They are both well organized, having a complete staff of officers, while in connection with the women's, there is a sewing class each Tuesday where work is made to be given to the deserving poorer brothers and sisters.

During the afternoon and evening, vocal and instrumental music was given by several willing workers.

In addition to the stalls there was also a "fishpond," which caused a considerable amount of fun and merriment. Altogether it was a very pleasant function:. The stalls comprised the following:

Fancy stall—presided over by Miss Smith, assisted by the Misses Dayman and Deason.

Fancy stall—Mrs. Bacon and Miss Tinworth.

Home-made candy stall—Miss Defoe and the Misses Wallis.

Young men's Bible class stall—This was a large stall with a gramaphone in evidence, on which various selections were given. The contents were general. This was manned by Messrs. J. Common, A. Conway and W. Common. Mr. Arthur Kingdon is the leader of this class.

Fish pond—Messrs. J. Common and A. Conway.

The Geisha tea house was served by Mrs. Toone, assisted by Miss Reid and Miss McKinlay, all prettily attired in "Geisha" costume.

At 10 o'clock the bazaar was closed for the evening by the rendition of the National Anthem— "God Save the King."

The bazaar and sale of work will be resumed on Friday evening next from 7 till 10. Bring the kiddies, they will enjoy it.

Five Building Permits Issued

Five building permits have been issued during the past few days, representing a valuation of approximately three thousand dollars. There is an indication of activity among the building trades of the city. Building operations will hardly be carried out on as large a scale as last year, but taking into consideration the depletion in the ranks of builders and artisans, there should be a fair amount of work for everybody.

F. E. Hunt, alterations to building at 208 Wescott Street. This consists of raising the roof and extending the wall. Estimated cost $1,100.

C. R. Nixon, new verandah at 301 Reid Street. Cost, $300.

Dr. G. S. Cameron, garage at 318 Stewart Street. Cost $150.

MOVING PICTURES ARE BARRED

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Persons who had hoped to see the Willard-Johnson fight in motion pictures will be disappointed. It was recalled here to-day that a federal statute expressly forbids not only the interstate transportation of fight films but the importation of such films from foreign countries. It provides a fine of $1,000 and imprisonment for one year or both for each offence.

The law was passed by congress on July 31, 1910, 27 days after the Johnson-Jeffries fight at Reno, Nev., and resulted from fears on the part of many members of Congress especially from the south that race riots would follow attempts of the promoters to show the fight in the "movies."

NOT ALLOWED TO SPEAK ENGLISH

PARIS, April 8.—Prohibition of speaking English on the telephone is enforced in Paris more strictly than ever. Even talking to the American embassy in English is carried out with the greatest difficulty.

An American, who is unable to speak French, was talking over the 'phone with the American embassy when he was interrupted and told that he must not use English.

The operator replied, "Then you may speak English, but the other gentleman must speak French."

The conversation was interrupted until an appeal was made to the superintendent of the telephone company, who allowed the conversation to be carried on.

SUPERVISED PLAY GROUND MUST COME

"The people generally get what they want" and the people of this city want not only Hydro radials, but supervised playgrounds. The Local Council of Women have secured permission to use the grounds of one of our Public schools for this purpose and are now inaugurating a campaign whereby these grounds may be ready to be used by the children of the city during the summer holiday months. Under trained supervision, these grounds will be a boon, not only to the children, but to many tired mothers who can feel that their children are not only playing healthfully, but safely, as their playgrounds will be carefully kept and looked after by professionas. Any citizens who are interested in this subject, will do well to watch the Press, where from time to time items regarding this new venture by the Local Council of Women for the good of all in the city, will be published.—F.M.D.

Says Training In Camp Is Needed Here

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Kindly allow me space in your valuable paper in regard to recruiting of the 57th Peterborough Rangers. I notice that the boys are not coming forward to enlist, simply because they think there is no camp training. That is the fault. The boys won't join on that account. It's outside training that make the men and every volunteer should have at least a month under canvas; you promise the field and you will get the boys. They don't send the men that go to the front on city training; they work outside; so us fellows that work in the city want camp training. As you say, we are of as much importance as the Regulars if we are "only volunteers."

HAS SURPLUS OF WOMEN

Unmarried Females Under 45 Years of Age in England Outnumber Males by Half Million

LONDON, April 8.—A volume in two parts containing evidence and papers submitted to the Dominions Royal Commission in London during its sittings in June and July last, has been issued. The first section includes the report of the Special Committee of the Royal Statistical Society on the migration of women from the United Kingdom to the Dominions and a report on the distribution of sexes in various parts of the Empire, with special reference to the surplus of women in the British Isles available for emigration, by Dr. E. C. Snow.

Dr. Snow, in the course of a paper on "The Magnitude of the Population of England Available for Emigration," recently read before the Royal Statistical Society, argued that apart from military considerations, there practically was no male population under 45 years of age available for emigration from England and Wales, but an appreciable number of unmarried women under 45, perhaps as many as half a million, could be spared. In the interests of the future development of the Dominions, the present deficiency in the number of women emigrants should be rectified.

SOLDIER POET WRITES PATHETIC HUMAN DOCUMENT---DIARY REVEALS PATRIOTIC SOUL

One of the most spiritual, the most courageous, the most pathetic human documents this appalling war has revealed is the diary of a young French soldier, Sergeant Marcel Drouet, poet, man of action, man of thought. Only a few brief extracts can be printed at present, and they form the subject of a charming and sympathetic article by M. Maurice Barres, of the French Academy, in the "Echo de Paris." The letters are the revelation of the soul of a soldier.

Day after day, from the first day of the war, the young soldier, poet entered his actions and his thoughts in the pages of his diary, which came direct to M. Barres—the diary "with its cover of red cardboard, crumpled, frayed, and hardly legible." It had passed through its owner's vigils in sunshine and in snow, and it was preserved after he had entered the valley of the shadow of death. The young soldier was only twenty.

WHIRLPIND OF WAR.

The first letter M. Barres prints describes an action in which the soldier poet deals with the fall of his lieutenant in action. This is a translation:

We tramp across fields, with the sun beating on our heads and without a drop of water! We march to the sound of guns. At about 1.30 the first shells, the first shrapnel, begin to fall around us. Then, little by little, the firing becomes acute on our left (we are in the first line) and we extend in open order.

Just as I lie down I feel a shock at my hip; a spent bullet, still hot, which scratches my belt—and suddenly a hailstorm of shells and bullets! A man of the second section on our left receives the full force of a shell. I see him stand clear against the sky line, hands clasped, and then he sits down. It is over for him.

The first becomes heavier from minute to minute. We advance in rushes, Lieutenant Gabriel at our head. When we reach a little ravine where the bullets are flying fast and furious I rush forward with my half-section, cross it, leaving behind my corporal, Desharbes, dead, and the wounded. We reach the bank.

At that moment they tell me, "The lieutenant is wounded, perhaps killed." At once I hurl myself again into the hail of bullets, and I find my little lieutenant all bleeding, a hole in the nape of his neck. I return to the head of the section, always under a stream of shot (a German quickfirer has not ceased peppering this ravine!) and take command.

What a sight! All round the grass and the foliage torn to shreds; the men, nose to the ground, knapsacks on their heads, motionless!

That does not prevent them being wounded, though; Delile, Lefrancois, bleed near me, the one wounded on the head, the other in the side. From the top of the bank the adjutant, his arms dripping with blood, and the men stream down in a rush and pass at the double.

I find myself separated from my company and near the captain and a lieutenant of the 7th. I feel the loss of my lieutenant bitterly—the agony of seeing death so very near me seizes me. The lieutenant of the 7th—my neighbour—lying a yard away from me says "Ah!"—and moves no more—a bullet in the head. At last the command to retire! Night falls, we file off under the last shots, followed by an occasional shell, but practically in safety.

I feel the greatest joy of the past month. Gabriel is only wounded. The bullet glanced, without penetrating his neck. He is looking for me everywhere they tell me. I run from company to company. At last I find him. What an embrace! Here he is with his head bandaged, eyes burning with fever, but walking with firm steps.

With very little provocation I would dance!

BOOKS—AND SHELLS.

The younger soldier-poet finds himself thrown by the whirlpool of war in the neighbourhood of a school, where are books—food for the soul. It is towards the end of September.

I am installed at Fromezey, with the advance posts, in the village municipal school. Beautiful country furniture, three magnificent wardrobes among other pieces, stand out conspicuously in the midst of sinister disorder.

Nothing but signs of pillage throughout the house, which should be so neat and carefully tended, with its school hall below, and living room, and fine bedroom, in which there are still two children's bedsteads side by side. On the first floor two more rooms, one containing the library of the schoolmaster and the civil documents.

In a medley of drawers I find some faded letters, souvenirs of an engagement—"I embrace you tenderly —my uncle has fixed April 29 for the marriage." . . .

I dive with glee into the library—here are books by Jules Verne, Mayne Reid; reading for one and all. I choose a Lamartine, a Chateaubriand and a Pascal, and up to seven o'clock I revel in their pages with delirious joy.

A shell falls about fifty yards from the schoolhouse. Those swine are going to bombard us! Every two minutes a shell comes along, breaking the church tower (the clock stops at seven o'clock) and scattering several graves of the little cemetery, without respect for those old stones under which our brothers lie! . . . I have the windows stuffed with mattresses, I place a sentinel in the passage, and I pick up my Lamartine once more.

Soldier-Dreamer.

The most beautiful and the most touching of all the entries is one written on the first day of November, All Saints' Day. It reaches a high level of mystic splendor, thrown into high relief by the moral and physical courage of the soldier of France. It is touched with the radiant sublimity that decked the soul and strengthened the arm of Joan of Arc—soldier, saint and dreamer.

Once again in the trenches of the first line as I write these words on the first day of November spent in this earth where, when God wills, I will go to join the dear departed who have preceded me! . . .

All Saints' Day and the Day of the Dead— this will be the first time I have not commemorated in a worthy manner the memory of those who are bound to us by bonds of blood and affection. Little chapel of Cambrai, perchance devastated by the barbarians, I will not go to you this year to kneel on your flag stones, which cover those to whom I owe my life and everything.

O my dear dead ones! believe that on this sunny morning which gilds with a parting caress the chilly plain dotted with so many bodies, believe that the memory of you all is far more vivid and living than my own recollections.

For even if I am here quivering, benumber, muddy, black and sick with cold, if I am without regret and proud of my post, it is thanks to you, thanks to your example, your teachings, and your pains.

I thank you, dearly-loved father, darling mother, for having made of me the Frenchman that I am, the son of the country which wishes to live. If I lament your death, if my solitude is great and desolate, have I not before my eyes the picture you conjured up with so much indignation—of Sedan, still trembling from the horrors of '70 —and I have not the cross of St. Helena, which one of our blood carried and which has been entrusted at last to my pious hands?

In Hands of Barbarians.

I think of you, sandy-green cemetery of Sedan, with your majestic shadows, where sleep the grandparents I never knew, but whose height of soul I respect so deeply; Sedan, whose pride has been subjected to invasion and to the dishonour of occupation. You will be avenged, that we swear!

I think of you, my dear little ones, in the hands of barbarians at this very moment, no doubt. But I have full faith in your hearts, so well do I know your devotion to things sublime. Dear aunt, with your white locks; thou, my eldest sister ;my own brother, and my little nephews, for whose future we fight to-day!

I think of you, my dead friends, brothers united by death, and you friends, alive but in danger. Ah! I would like to meet you all on this day of remembrance.

I think also of Thee, my God, who desired all these things to happen for Thy greater glory and for the establishment of Thy justice. All these misfortunes, these woes, all this bloodshed, have been imposed by Thee, my God, as a redemption. But Thy glorious sun will soon light up the world, I am quite sure, in the victory of right, which has tarried nearly a century.

I am helping with all my strength —with all my soul. And if Thou takest me out of this world, O God of Goodness, permit that it will be to reunite me with those who have gone before me to Thy domain, and for whom my affection on earth was so precious.

That is the whole ardent prayer I make Thee before the rising sun this All Saints' Day, which already glints on the shells—sowers of death— in this year of 1914, which will see the return of peace throughout the world by the annihilation of a barbarian people, and which will witness the rebirth of the French nation.

The Last Post.

After this came nights in the trenches through the snows of November and December until the New Year dawned —a New Year destined to be brief for the young soldier. M. Barres ends his tribute with the simple order of the day which "closed the noble life of Marcel Drouet."

Drouet, sergeant in the reserve of the 165th Regiment of Infantry. He never ceased from the opening of the war to show proofs of devotion and courage; model of section commander, leading his men to battle by giving them the most noble example; killed in his trench, January 4, 1915.—Montreal Herald.

PETERBOROUGH BRANCH, W. R. DUNSFORD, Manager.

The Guardsman

Published every other week

PETERBOROUGH, ONT., APRIL 8, 1915.

WHEN A MAN assures his life, it means that he makes provision for the restoration of his life's value when he himself shall have ceased to live or to be an earner. In a very real and true sense, he establishes a sinking fund for the ultimate retirement of an obligation. To the credit of this fund he deposits annually, on stated dates, a definitely calculated sum—an amount each year which, with interest added, will suffice to liquidate the indebtedness or sum aimed at.

On the assumption that every man should provide for the restoration of his life's money value for the benefit of those dependent on him, the total amount of this money-value may be regarded as the amount of the sinking fund. The length of the period covered by this sinking fund may be fixed at 10, 20, 25, 30 or more years, or it may be made co-extensive with the remaining years of a man's life whether these years are to be few or many —as they are indicated by the figures of expectancy of life as found in mortality tables.

If, say, the money-value of a man's life be 20 years, and the maturity period of the sinking fund—treating this life-value, as a sinking fund — be 20 years, then the amount of the annual in-payment to the credit of this fund will be something less than one-twentieth part of $10,000, allowance being made for interest. If life assurance be used as the method of operating this sinking fund, then the added factor of the man's age must be taken into account.

As a method of operating the sinking fund, life assurance has an advantage over all other methods, for it provides for the immediate and complete realization of the full amount of the sum aimed at in the contingency of the premature death of the one who set out to provide the $10,000.

Life assurance should always be regarded as a sinking fund—the best of all methods for providing for the repayment or restoration of a money-obligation which is extensive as to amount and remote as to the date of re-payment or restoration.

Thus, if the nature of the obligation be a mortgage, or a proposed legacy or benefaction, or the liquidation of a debt, or the cost of a child's education, or the purchase of a home or property, the amount of the voluntary or compulsory obligation can be positively and immediately assured—this by the creation of a sinking fund by the methods of life assurance.

It is this aspect of life assurance—this function—which gives life assurance its compelling charm and which differentiates it from all other forms of accumulating money for set objects.

Though the value and availability of life assurance for such aims and purposes as those noted above are well known the fact remains that comparatively few persons use this supremely attractive, efficient and easy method by which to provide for the education of their children at any age 10 or 20; for the purchase of a house or property by a stated date; for the endowment of an institution or for a legacy to some relative, friend or servant; for the discharge of a debt or mortgage; or for a trip abroad or some other dearly cherished object.

Many it is true assure their life to restore its value to those dependent on them; but life assurance has other and wider uses. It can even be employed for the purposes of business—the replacement of machinery which has to be periodically renewed; for a partner's retirement at a stated age, and the withdrawal of capital which may accompany such retirement; for the increased rent which may be inevitable at the termination of a present lease; and so on and so on. Wherever a sinking fund seems worth creating, life assurance can be used as the method of establishing and operating it.

The great majority of men have ambitions and aims the realization of which is related to money and is far off. They can positively and immediately assure these ambitions and aims by an endowment life assurance policy.

A Simple Way To Remove Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most of if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

FEARING LOVE GONE WIFE OF CONSUL TRIES TO END LIFE

NEW YORK, April 7.—Despondent in the belief that she had lost her husband's love, Mrs. Josephine Gonzalez, wife of Manuel Gonzalez, Consul General of Costa Rico in this city, attempted suicide by taking bichloride of mercury last evening in her apartment, in the Lafayette apartment house, No. 320 Manhattan avenue, Dr. Emmanuel Reinhardt, of No. 112 Cathedral Parkway, who was called to attend her, considered condition so critical that he would not permit her removal to a hospital. She was made a prisoner on a charge of attempted suicide and a policeman from the West 123rd street station was detailed to guard the apartment.

Mrs. Gonzalez blamed interference by her husband's relatives in her affairs for her estrangement from her husband. They had lived happily since their marriage in City Hall by Alderman Riordan last August, she said, until a week ago. She stated that Mr. Gonzalez had three daughters by an earlier marriage living in Costa Rica, and some of his relatives were dissatisfied with his marriage to her because they believed he might have difficulty in supporting two households.

"I took the poison," she said, in reply to a question. "I love my husband with all my heart. I would die for him because I cannot live without him. I may die, but my love will never die. But now I do not want to die. I only want my husband back."

Mrs. Gonzalez asked many questions about the effect of bichloride of mercury. She said that she felt only slight discomfort and expressed the belief that she would recover.

She said she did not at first regard the quarrel she said she had with Mr. Gonzalez a month ago as serious, although he went to live with a relative at Ridgewood Heights, N.J., at that time, and told her, she said, that he never would be back.

Recently, she stated, he notified her that she would have to give up the Manhattan avenue apartment by Wednesday of this week and that he intended to take all the furniture. "He even said he would take this bed," she said, referring to the one on which she was lying.

Mrs. Gonzalez said she had received a generous allowance from her husband until recently, when she was obliged to discharge her maid. Since then, she said, her mother, who lives in another part of the city, has helped in the housework, as she had been made ill by the separation from her husband.

Mrs. Gonzalez, who is attractive, of the brunette type, twenty-nine years old, said she was born in Philadelphia and was educated in the Convent of the Visitation of St. Agatha, in St. Paul, Minn., where her father had been a well known republican leader. She refused to tell the police her maiden name.

Although it was Mrs. Gonzalez assertion that she had taken poison that led her mother to call Dr. Reinhardt, Mrs. Gonzalez later said she did not take the poison until she heard the physician's ring at the door. She told the police she dissolved the greater part of one tablet and drank it. Dr. Reinhardt said he had found unmistakable evidence that Mrs. Gonzalez really had taken poison.

Mr. Gonzalez, she said, held a position with Willard R. Grace & Co., before he entered the diplomatic service of his country. He had been secretary of the Costa Rican Embassy at Paris, she said, before he was transferred here.

Mr. Gonzalez, at his home in Ridgegood, admitted that he was the Costa Rican Consul General and that Mrs. Josephine Gonzalez was his wife. He said that he had become estranged from her four weeks ago, but declined to make any further explanation, on the ground that it was a private matter.

The police told Mrs. Gonzalez that they had notified Mr. Gonzalez of her request that he come to see her. The failure to get any satisfactory reply apparently bothered her more than the fact that she had taken poison.

SERIOUS RIOTS IN VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER, April 8.—Owing to the fact that the city has no funds to allocate to relief purposes, resulting in the abolition of the bread line, out-of-works lined up on Hastings street and commenced to loot many stores in the vicinity. A hurried call for police was sent in, and the attitude of the crowd, composed chiefly of foreigners, was ugly looking. At times the police had difficulty to keeping the crowd back, and attempts frequently were made to floor the officers.

As a result of this five arrests were made, and the police anticipate this is only the beginning of the trouble which may culminate in serious riots. Arrangements have, however, been made to cope with any disturbance, and the services of the mounted force will be brought into operation should circumstances demand.

Had Heart Trouble FOR YEARS.

Weighed 87 Lbs. Now Weighs 138 Lbs.

Miss Beatrice Lougheed, Staples, Ont., writes: "I feel it my duty to tell you what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had heart trouble for quite a few years. I doctored for it, and altogether my bill amounted to $400, and still no cure. One day when very sick I was lying on a couch close to where some almanacs were hanging. I took one down, and was reading about what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills cured, and thought I would try them. I got six boxes to start with; have only taken three boxes and I never felt so well in my life as I do now. I only weighed 87 pounds when I started to take them, and now I weigh 138 pounds. I hope all poor sufferers will be benefitted by them as I have been."

Wherever there is any weakness of the heart, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will strengthen it and build up a strong healthy system.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Excelsiors Smothered the Cressman Five in the Final Game

The Excelsiors played like world beaters last night in the deciding game of the division of the 'Y' Basketball League. There was simply nothing to it from start to finish but Excelsiors. They shot from all angles and got away with it. But this is not taking anything from their honour, for they certainly played gilt-edge ball.

For a deciding game it was exceptionally free from fouls, only four being called during the game. There was a big crowd of fans on hand, as many had hopes of Cressman's pulling off a win, thus making a three-cornered tie between Excelsiors, Cressman's and Unknowns, but the 'Top-Notch' boys were in such fine trim and had their eyes glued on the basket so tight that nothing could stop them. Long and Knapman at forward for the Excelsiors played the finest game seen on the local floor this season. Long scored nine baskets and Knapman got seven. Stuart played his usual consistent game at centre, while Hamilton and Darling played a cast iron defence and checked their opponents so successfully that they held them down to 19 points, while their team mates were piling up 47.

Bartlett and F. Cressman did practically all the scoring for their team. The question is now whether the Excelsiors are the champions of the city. This question should be answered by some good fast quintette of players. How about the Veterans? We wonder if they could make it interesting?

Excelsiors—Long, Knapman, Stewart, Darling, Hamilton.

Cressman's—F. Cressman, Bartlett, Raynor, H. Cressman, Palmer.

Referee, Dobbin; timer, Preston; scorer, Thackeray.

ENTHUSIASTIC WELCOME FOR JESS WILLARD

KEY WEST, Fla., April 7 — Jess Willard, the new heavyweight champion pugilist of the world, arrived here late to-day on the steamer Gov. Cobb, from Havana, where on Monday he won the title from Jack Johnson. A crowd of several thousand who gathered on the pier to greet the new champion, became so demonstrative that they broke down fences and parted ropes in their eagerness to get near the Kansas giant. The police had great difficulty in preserving order.

As the steamship warped into her dock, the crowd of excited men, women and children on the pier craned their necks for a glimpse of Willard. Soon Willard was surrounded by a throng of cheering, jumping, gesticulating persons, and he was half carried to another end of the pier, where a committee from the Board of Trade bundled him into a carriage for the parade up to the town. A band headed the procession to Willard's hotel, and he was given an enthusiastic greeting all the way. Later when Willard was shown a telegram offering $20,000 as a purse for a fight with Frank Moran, he referred the newspapermen to his manager Tom Jones. Jones, after reading the telegram, said emphatically that Willard would not fight for nine months or a year.

"Willard," said Jones, "has been training for a year and a half, and has earned a rest. He is going to tour the country, picking up the money that is due him, for you know Willard has not made any big money out of this fight.

"After Jess has completed his touring and had a rest, he will be ready to defend the title against any white heavyweight the public may think worthy. He will never fight another negro. Any time, however, that a real white contender appears who gives indications of real ability and popular support, Jess will be found ready to meet him for the title in any part of the world."

OTTAWA FIGHTING FOR TWO PITCHERS

OTTAWA, April 7.—A case involving two of the leading pitchers of the Canadian Baseball League will be considered shortly by the National Commission. Herb Shocker and Louis Peterson are the principals, with the Ottawa and Fort Wayne clubs as the contesting parties.

Last spring Shocker and Peterson were found awnting, and Owner Varwero found awnting, and Owner Varnell turned both over to the Ottawa club. Neither received a release slip, but they considered themselves "canned" by Fort Wayne. Both developed well, Shocker proving the best spitball twirler in the Canadian circuit. Peterson looked very promising. Several months ago Claude Varnell sold the Fort Wayne club to a syndicate, and President Lou Hilbrener of the Central League wrote to the Ottawas that Peterson and Shocker were part of the transaction. However, the Ottawas refused, and reserved both Shocker and Peterson. This the Fort Wayne people had not done. Besides, Shaughnessy has a letter from Varnell informing him that the Ottawas could consider themselves the owner of the two players. However, the Fort Wayne club has appealed to the National Association. Shocker and Peterson, to strengthen Ottawas' claim, have both signed with the Senators. The case will be discussed and disposed of shortly.

The Ottawas have offered to trade Arthur Lage to Hamilton for Catcher Fisher, but they refuse to give Bullock. The St. Thomas club wants the latter, and Ottawa has offered Bullock for Kopp. St. Thomas declines to think of letting Kopp go, so both deals are effectually blocked. A meeting of the local club will take place this week to put things in shape.

The Ottawas have decided to train at Chatham, but owing to the lateness of the opening of the season the players will not report there until May 15. The season will open May 19. Pitchers Kubat, Roberts, Shocker and Peterson have signed, but Gero and Bramble are hold-outs, and will be suspended. Bullock refuses to sign, as he wishes to play at St. Thomas.

CHEESE BUYERS POINT OUT MISTAKE OF PROPOSED MOVE

Several prominent, cheese buyers who attend the local Board meetings are not welcoming the proposal to form a Board at Norwood. Flavelles Limited of Lindsay, wrote to the Examiner:

"We believe that it is in the best interests of the cheese trade to keep the Boards as large as possible instead of breaking up into a number of smaller ones. The trouble with the smaller Boards is that, as a rule, the buyers hardly think it worth while to attend as their chances are not so good for getting a portion of the cheese. With a large Board, practically all the buyers in the country make it a point to be on hand and in this way, while there may never be an extreme prices paid, the price is always a good fair market value each day.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie said the idea if carried out would be simply folly. The amount of cheese produced in this district is only one-half of the production a few years back. Dividing the Peterborough Board into two parts will simply make two small boards, neither of which would be attractive to many buyers. The result would be lessened competition from the buying end, and in a short time patrons would realize this fact when lower prices would be secured. Mr. Gillespie remarked that most of the buyers attending the local market are not going out of their way for the slight opportunity of bidding for a small make.

Mr. John Riddell says the Peterborough Board has at all times attempted to deal fairly with salesmen and buyers.

Other members say that the weekly sale idea is not an asset. The fortnightly sale encourages the best factory conditions and presents the cheese after considerable evaporation has taken place. This, it is claimed, is fair to the buyers and tends to place the Board on a good, reliable basis.

Voice of The People

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—It must be obvious to all your many readers that the strong convincing arguments presented by Mr. Johnson against the Russelite doctrines have greatly infuriated them and their sympathizers. But it will be observed, however, that no attempt whatever has been made to confute the arguments presented by Mr. Johnston. And is it not evidently a sign of defeat when people will bluster and use opprobrious language against their opponent instead of dealing calmly with his points? Such is the case of "Casual Observer" and he seems to be an adept in the use of such words. However, it proves nothing except the nature of the person who wrote it. Mr. Johnston was fair in the sermon against Russel on March 15, and when reading Russel's books he quoted verbatim the exact language and never did misrepresent, as some would like to have it. He proved all his appoints very logically and scripturally and no one thus far has disproved them. If "Pastor" Russel or any of his sympathisers or followers have any desire to defend their views and prove Mr. Johnston false let them deal with his points and not resort to invective. It isn't likely that Mr. Johnston will lower the dignity of the Christian ministry by employing any such debasing language as his opponent in last night's paper. The public appreciates a healthy discussion and whenever the Russelites are ready to defend themselves no doubt Mr. Johnston is fully qualified to support all he has said. It is anyone's right to expose the tenets of any denomination if he considers them false, and consequently injurious to the public, and any religious views that cannot bear examination like Russelism are surely not worth believing. Hoping that any future writers on this theme will not resort to abuse but rather confine themselves to the argument, I remain,

Yours truly,
FAIR PLAY.

St. George's Annual Vestry Meeting

Was Held Last Evening—A Good Attendance

The annual Vestry meeting of St. George's Church was held last evening in the Parish Hall. The Rector presided. There was a good attendance and the most pleasing feature of the meeting was the fact that the Church is starting a new year with a clean sheet. Considering the great depression in trade and the fact that a number of young men of the Church have enlisted, the people of St. George's have every reason to be thankful.

Officers Elected

Church Wardens—Messrs. Wilson and Hake.

Sidesmen — Messrs. Jay, Lee, Holmes and Pitchford.

Vestry Clerk—Mr. Rew, Junior.

The financial statement was read by the retiring People's Warden, Mr. F. Holmes.

After a general discussion respecting the future work of the Church, the meeting was closed.

THE GERMAN REPORT

BERLIN, via wireless, April 8.—Renewing their fierce onslaughts between the Meuse and the Moselle, the French are leaving great heaps of corpses in the wooded regions, according to the despatches from the front to-day.

FIVE YEARS IS SENTENCE

gone into by the Crown Attorney from information from Ottawa and Montreal. He had been sentenced several times before as McCarthy, but claimed that his right name was David Rousselle. He was tattoed "D.M." on the body, but that was explained as standing for "David and Mary." The Mary was a girl he once went with steady. But all his thefts and trouble was on account of whiskey. The information from headquarters did not give any particulars of the charges other than the term served.

Chum of Murderer.

In a letter from O. Campeau, Superintendent of Police for the Province of Quebec to Chief Thompson, in which he gives the record of Rousselle as David McCarthy in that Province, he drew the attention of the Chief that McCarthy was a friend to Alphonse Foucault, wanted in Montreal on a charge of murdering a constable. He asked the Chief to try and find out from the prisoner here what he knew of the present whereabouts of Foucault. It is not likely that Rousselle will give his friend away if he does know where he is now.

His Record.

Rousselle evidently started his criminal operations in his home province. He says he was born in Quebec City, and he served six months out of Montreal, and was latterly let off on condition that he left the city. He was known in Montreal as McCarthy, and his record in the Police Department there was as follows: Arrested April 20, 1906, on a charge of theft. He was sentenced to six months.

As a result of the comparison of finger printe at Ottawa, Cheif Commissioner of Police Col. A. P. Sherwood, found that Rousselle's finger prints as taken by Chief Thompson's men here were identical with those of one David McCarthy, whose record in Ontario was as follows:

Feb. 25, 1911, Fort William—Shopbreaking and theft, 18 months in Central Prison.

May 14, 1912, Sudbury—Shopbreaking 12 months Central Prison.

Aug. 22, 1914, Sault Ste. Marie—Burglary, 8 months, Ontario Reformatory.

Fred Mitchell.

Frederick Mitchell gave his name here at first as Frederick Morison, but later on being identified as Mitchell, with a former record in Ontario and Alberta, admitted his real name. He did not ask for any mercy, but looked straight at the Magistrate while he received sentence. He has been dealt with very leniently on former occasions, having been allowed out on suspended sentence three times.

In a letter from the superintendent at the Ontario Reformatory, where Mitchell was sentenced to two years less one day, for breaking, entering and theft at Ottawa, he is not wanted there any more if possible. They believe he would be a lot of trouble to them and that he not capable of being reformed. While they were making intercessions for his parole he escaped by a daring and original method on March 15, 1915. He had made a trip West to Alberta and spent some time in Lethbridge jail too.

Mitchell's record in Ontario is as follows:

September 22, 1910, Ottawa—Theft. Sentence suspended.

March 17, 1911, Ottawa—Shopbreaking and theft. Two charges. Six months' sentence in Central Prison on each charge to run concurrently.

December 5, 1913, Ottawa—Breaking, entering and theft. Two years less one day Ontario Reformatory.

Escaping from Ontario Reformatory, March 15, 1915.

To Go to Kingston.

Magistrate Dumble in passing sentence this morning said, addressing the prisoners: "From your appearance one would not be led to assign you to the criminal classes. The story of your life has not been a good one. You have both apparently deliberately chosen the life of outlaws

"You have been shown great leniency by the courts with suspended sentences. One of you has abused the leniency and kindness shown you at the Reformatory by running away.

"I do not see what use you are in life. You (Rousselle) may have been a soldier in Africa. You should have limited your offensiveness to Africa. The judgment of the Court is that you shall each serve five years in the penitentiary at Kingston." The law provides a sentence up to 14 years for this case.

Mitchell, in reply, asked if His Worship could not be a little more lenient. "You are entitled to no leniency whatever," returned the Magistrate.

Rousselle had a mother and such a term would break her heart. His answer was that he had not had much consideration for his mother in the past.

Goods Identified.

Mr. Zacks was present during the morning and after he had identified the two suits and raincoats as being his property, they were turned over to him on an order from the Court.

Mr. Zacks was asked if he wished to have anything to say to the Court about the claim he put in in view of the admission of the prisoners that they only took one suit and one raincoat each. He said he was positive about the two raincoats at least, and he said he missed several more of another line, also some more suits. He could not say definitely how much property he had lost.

MIGHTY ATTEMPT TO CRUSH AUSTRIAN ARMY

Russians Pressing Forward Into Hungary With the Austro-Germans in Retreat at Nearly Every Point

Special Morning Cable.

LONDON, Eng.—(Special Cable.)—April 9.—On two great battlefields, 700 miles apart, the Allies are co-operating in a mighty attempt to crush Franz Josef's army and force Austria-Hungary to sue for peace.

Official and unofficial despatches received here to-day indicated that the Allies are moving slowly to success. The Russians are pressing forward into Hungary, with the Austro-Germans in retreat at nearly every point. Fierce drives of French around St. Mihiel have caused the Germans to hurry reinforcements, originally designed to stem the Russian onslaughts in the Carpathians. Various reports indicate that Hungary is in a state of terror over the Slav invasion and demanding that the Dual Monarchy ask for a separate peace.

A Bucharest despatch to-day estimated that the Austro-Hungarian losses in killed, wounded and prisoners in the defence of Hungary from invasion, totalled more than 300,000. At least 100,000 of these were prisoners, according to a Buharest estimate.

The Berlin claim that France's sudden offensive around St. Mihiel was directly linked with the Russian advance upon the Carpathian passes, is generally accepted here. Though aiming to smash the St. Mihiel wedge, the savage attacks of the French armies south of Verdun are believed to form part of a great plan of campaign worked out at Petrograd, Paris and London. Gen. Joffre is keeping the Kaiser too busy to send more aid to the retreating Austrians.

The same strategy, according to the French, saved Warsaw from Von Hindenburg after a Russian defeat in the Mazurian lakes. While the Slavs were falling back out of East Prussia in disordered retreat, their French allies began swift smashes against German trenches in the campaign.

Von Hindenburg cried for reinforcements for a grand assault on Warsaw. The German General Staff had none to send. Every available man was plugging the German line around Perthes.

Forty-Two Photographs of Woman Causes Wife's Woe

NEW YORK, April 8—Forty chorus girls and his first and second wives' photographs on the walls of the 'den' of Henry Frank McNamara, a member of the Lotus Club, were one cause of martial discord between him and Mrs. Mary B. MacNamara, his third wife, who is seeking a separation in the Supreme Court before Justice Whitaker, Mr. MacNamara is a stock broker.

Mrs. MacNamara took all of the likenesses of her husband's friends from his room, she said, with the result that he threatened to "parboil" her with a kettle of hot water which he held over her head. Then she put them back.

Mr. MacNamara testified in his own behalf yesterday. He said he had kept a dairy of tribulations which he attributed to his wife. When not allowed to produce it the husband exhibited instead a pair of charred baby blue pajamas which he asserted his wife had burned only because they were his. He said the one wish which Mrs. MacNamara had expressed about him was "I wish you were dead. I would like to attend your funeral."

He said she incessantly asked for money. Her demands he described as "a continuous performance." She threatened him with ruin unless he would fulfil her requests, he said.

Friends of the broker, Henry D. Long and Mrs. Sarah A. Long, his mother, testified that they had found the MacNamara home in an untidy condition on several occasions. Mrs. Long asserted that it once took her an hour, with the assistance of Mrs. MacNamara, to wash the accumulation of dishes.

Mrs. MacNamara on the witness stand, asserted her husband told her she "was not worth killing," and that he was going to give her "slow torture" because she was a "little imp of hell." He said that he would give bichloride of mercury to her except that it would take four days for her to die, she asserted.

Mrs. MacNamara said that detectives in her employ in May, 1913, traced her husband with a Bettie Marshall, whom she described as a chorus girl. He kissed her good-bye at the stage door, according to Mrs. MacNamara.

Husband and wife separated in May of 1913, according to testimony, and he paid $25 a week toward her support. She said that a year later he informed her that if she wanted some one to support her she had better find some one else. Mrs. MacNamara said that she formerly had been married to Richmond J. Watson, She is now living with her mother in Hyde Park, Mass.

William H. Johannason, a detective in the wife's employ, told of following Mr. MacNamara to the Grand Northern Hotel, where he met a chorus girl.

In reciting the alleged cruelties of her husband Mrs. MacNamara said that she was told by him on one occasion to press his trousers with an iron he had heated or be burned with it until she did. The trial will be continued to-day.

Belgians in England A Great Problem

The problem of providing employment and proper habitations for the Belgian refugees both in Holland and in England, is daily growing more urgent, in the opinion of Percy Alden, member of Parliament, who has represented the British Government in its dealings with the refugee question since the beginning of the war.

The number of Belgian refugees in England is now officially estimated, according to a government statement in the House of Commons, at 180,000 not including 18,000 wounded soldiers in British hospitals. This total consists of 65,000 men, 69,000 women and 46,000 children under 16.

"I feel very strongly," said Mr. Alden in a statement to the public, "that, through lack of work and proper housing these Belgians run a serious risk of returning home at the end of the war in a demoralized and deteriorated condition. In Holland, especially, the method of dealing with the refugees is still of a temporary and unsatisfactory nature; they are living in churches, schools, barns, sheds and barges, and the food they are receiving is none too food they are receiving is none too little or no attempt has been made to deal with it, either in Holland or England.

"I have made several visits to Holland at the request of the president of the local government board to investigate conditions there. England and Holland are faced with a very awkward task, but a serious attempt will have to be made, and that soon, to provide remunertive work and adequate residence for these people.

"My belief is that the next step should be the building of some thousands of wooden huts, each containing three rooms, which could be constructed by the refugees themselves, and could be taken to pieces at the end of the war and transferred to various parts of Belgium to be used as dwellings until permanent homes can be built. The building of the huts could be made to provide work for many thousand refugees. I calculate that at lease $500,000 will be required for the adequate launching of this scheme. It is the only way I know in which a proper semblance of family life can be restored to these Belgians during their temporary exile from their own country."

SAYS TURKEY IS PREPARED

Special to the Examiner.

VIENNA, April 9 — Field Marshal Von Der Goltz, on his way back to Constantinople from Berlin, stopped in Vienna and saw Emperor Francis Joseph. Later, he spoke to a reporter of the Neuse, he spoke to a reporter of the Neuse Freie Presse of his visit, saying: "I found Emperor Francis Joseph in a serious mood, but resolute and very confident."

Regarding the situation in Turkey, Field Marshal Von Der Goltz said: "Turkey, to-day, is better prepared than ever. She has a million and a quarter of well trained men, in addition to several hundred thousand reserves, for any emergency."

SITUATION IN GREECE EXTREMELY CRITICAL

"The Whole Country Will Fight With Enthusiasm if Our Interests Demand It" Says King Constantine

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

ROME, April 8.—King Constantine of Greece described the situation in his Kingdom as extremely critical, in an interview granted a correspondent of the Rome newspaper Tribuna and published here to-day.

"The whole country will fight again with enthusiasm if our interests demand it," King Constantine said. "My people are thoroughly patriotic, but those who govern should judge well the time and opportunity for action."

American Lady Tells of Zeppelin Raid On Paris

NEW YORK, April 9.—Back for a rest after the strain of work in the volunteer hospitals of France, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, St., arrived in New York yesterday morning on board the Transylvania, of the Cunard line, accompanied by Mr. Joseph Harriman and Miss Barbara C. Rutherfurd.

Mrs. Vanderbilt began her second trip to France since the war started two months ago, and since then has been making a tour of the hospitals in Northern France administered under the auspices of the Franco-English Society, as well as inspecting the work done by the American Ambulance Hospital, in which she is interested deeply.

Mrs. Vanderbilt was in Paris on March 26, when Zeppelins sailed over that city, and she described the manner in which she was awakened by the military trumpets that warned the city.

"When we looked out," she said, "the sky was illuminated as though it had been midday by the large number of aerial bombs sent up by the French as well as by their searchlights, which played everywhere. There was a great noise made by the anti-aircraft guns as well, but the people did not seem disturbed to any great extent. Instead, they seemed to treat the whole matter as an interesting adventure and were gay rather than sad."

Mrs. Vanderbilt went to her home, No. 660 Fifth avenue, and, although she did not say so in so many words, it is understood her return to France again is largely a question of her health.

Others on board the Transylvania were Mr. Chandler Hale, Mr. Joseph de Wyckoff, Mrs. Douglas Clapham and Mr. C. A. Swinburne.

Italian Fleet Shows Activity

Incidents Reported From Various Ports Regarded as Significant

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

ROME, April 9.—Increased activity on the part of the Italian fleet may be presaged by incidents reported from various ports which, while of no great importance in themselves, are regarded here as significant.

A battle flag blessed by the bishop of the diocese was presented to the dreadnought Comte Cavour by the Duca and Duchess di Genoa at Spezia. The presentation was made the occasion for a patriotic demonstration.

The Duca and Duchess d'Aosta went to Leghorn to say farewell to their son, Principe Aimone, who is a student at the naval academy there, and who expects soon to be ordered to sea.

There has been no outward change in the situation regarding the maintenance of Italian neutrality, but military preparations are being pushed with ever increasing vigour. Information obtained from reliable sources, however, is to the effect that negotiations are being continued, and that there yet is hope of reaching a satisfactory understanding so that war may be avoided.

Senator Morandi, once tutor of King Victor Emmanuel, who presented in the Senate a resolution favouring disarmament, has written a long article supporting his views, which, he says, should be discussed more widely if Italy is likely to turn from neutrality to war, since a lasting peace would be impossible without a part and simultaneous disarmament of the great nations. He contended that only those countries which intend to prepare for another war immediately after the close of the present conflict could disagree with this view.

Senator Morandi recalls that when the four Powers allied against Napoleon considered the French Emperor defeated they agreed in London in June, 1814, to reduce their forces by half, but owing to Napoleon's return from Elba there was no real disarmament until after Waterloo.

The conclusion reached by Senator Morandi is that without disarmament the world must expect "not revolution but anarchy."

GERMANY NOT IN COMMAND

ROME, April 9.—Carasso Effendi and Midhat Bey, the first a member of the Turkish Chamber of Deputies and the second former secretary of the Turkish Committee of Union and Progress, are at present in Rome. They deny having any special mission, but it is recalled that they appeared here on the eve of the negotiations to bind the peace between Italy and Turkey.

Referring to the Dardanelles these two Turks yesterday expressed conviction that they could not be forced, even with a powerful army. They described the economic situation of the Turkish people as excellent, and denied the current reports that Germany was ruling Turkey. They said Turkey had decided to take part in the war the day the German cruiser Goeben was permitted to enter the Dardanelles.

How the Soldier On Service Votes

OTTAWA, April 9.—Hon. C. J. Doherty, explaining the Bill to enable men on military service at home or abroad to exercise the franchise in case of an election, said that the right was being given to all men who were 21 years of age, and British subjects. A man who has not already the right to vote in any particular riding will cast his vote in the riding where he resided for the last thirty days before he enlisted. There would be an affidavit also by the soldier as to his name and place of residence. The officer who receives the ballot will also give a certificate as to the identity of the man and that he actually marked the ballot.

These ballots will be sent out before hand to the commanding officers in the different parts of Canada, in Bermuda, and to the Secretary of the High Commissioner's office in London. When the writs for the election are issued notice will be sent for the distribution to the soldiers.

Struggling Poet Found Murdered

Special to The Examiner:

ABERDEEN, S.D., April 9.—Edward D. A. Parker, of New York city, was murdered four miles west of Aberdeen early yesterday morning and his body dragged to railroad rails, where it was run over by a St. Louis bound Milwaukee passenger train. All articles of jewellery, money and other valuables had been removed from the man's pockets, only a prayer-book and several letters remaining to identify the body.

Clyde Hurst, the young son of G. W. Hurst, superintendent of police, has identified Ben Condon, of Chinook, Montana, as one of the three men he saw last night following Mr. Parker in Aberdeen. The men had a cudgel about three feet long. The boy heard them say:—"It's heavy enough, all right"; "He'll be a dead poet before morning, "I hate to, but it's got to be done," and similar remarks.

He told his father last night of what he had seen and heard, and immediately following the murder he was taken from school to assist the police in locating the men. Condon was arrested, but the two others so far eluded officers. Condon has admitted that he was with Mr. Parker last night, but declares he left him at a haystack west of the city early in the evening.

Among letters found in the dead man's pocket was one from Frank McGlynn, of New York, advising the young man, who was apparently his stepson, to try to sell his own poetry to magazines and nor expect the writer to do it for him. Mr. McGlynn gave his address as care of Actors' Society, No. 1416 Broadway. Another letter was from Mr. Parker's sister, Mary Rose McGlynn, No. 2947 Bainbridge avenue, the Bronx, New York.

What its New York inventor claims is a punctureless automobile tyre is filled with rubber balls instead of an inner tube, the injury of any one which failing to affect the entire tyre.

Litters used by the Netherlands army are made of straw and are provided with straw blankets so they can be used as beds.

"THE GRELL MYSTERY"

By Frank Froest

Green laid his hand on the handle of the door, but suddenly something occurre to him. "Do you think she's gone with him, sir?"

Heldon Foyle made a little gesture of dissent. "I don't think it likely. It would double the danger of identification. But we can soon find if she's gone back to her home. I told Taylor, who is watching in Berkeley Square, to report when she returned." He touched a bell and put a question to the man who entered.

"Yes, sir," was the reply. "He rang up half an hour ogo. You told me I wasn't to disturb you. He reported Lady Eileen Meredith had just gone in."

"There you are, then, Green," said Foyle. "That point's settled. You get along. I wish I could come with you, but it won't do for me to leave London just now, and goodness knows where you may have to finish up. Good-bye and good luck."

When Green had gone, Foyle gave a few instructions to cover the points that had arisen, and walked to Sir Hilary Thornton's room. The Assistant Commissioner looked up and proffered a cigar. "Think of the angels," he said. "I was just wondering how things were going."

"Things are straightening out a bit," said the superintendent. "It's been a busy day, and it's not over yet." And, puffing a ring of smoke into the air, he told in bare, unadorned fashion the events of the day. "It has been a narrow thing for Grell," he concluded. "Even now, I fancy we shall get him. Green's as tenacious as a bulldog when he's got something to take hold of."

With his hands thrust deep in his trousers pockets, Sir Hilary strode to and fro across the room. "It's time we got a bit forward," he said. "The adjourned inquest will come on again soon, and we shan't be able to keep the question of identity up our sleeves any longer."

"There's a week yet," answered Foyle. "I don't think it will much matter what is revealed then."

The Assistant Commissioner came to a halt. "You're not a man to be over-confident, Foyle," he explained. "Do you feel pretty certain of having Grell under arrest by that time. I've not interfered with you hitherto, but for heaven's sake be careful. It won't do to make a mistake—especially with a man of Grell's standing."

Heldon Foyle lifted his shoulders deprecatingly. "It all depends upon an idea I have, sir. I am willing to take all responsibility."

"You're still convinced that Grell is guilty?"

"I am convinced that he knows all about the murder," answered Foyle ambiguously. "With the help of Pinkerton's, I've traced his history back for the last twenty-five years. He's had his hands in some queer episodes in his time before he became a millionaire. There are gaps which we can't fill up, of course, but we're pretty complete. There was one thing in his favour. Although he's known toughs in all corners of the world he's never been mixed up in any dirty business. And as he's carried out one or two political missions for the United States, I suppose he's had to know some of these people. To-morrow or the next day I expect to have the records of both Ivan Abramovitch and Condit. It will all help, though the bearing on the murder is perhaps indirect."

"You're talking in parables, like a detective out of a book," said Thornton, with a peevishness that his covering smile could not entinrely conceal. "But I know you'll have your own way when you don't want to be too precise. How do you regard the burnt paper? Is it important?"

"It would have been if I could have saved it," said the detective regretfully. "As it is, it is of no use as evidence in a court, for it only rests on my word. I keep pegging away at it, but I'm not certain that I can fill it out as it should be. But you never know your luck in our trade. I remember a case of forgery once. The conterfoil of a tradesman's paying-in book showed 100 pounds with which he was not credited in the books of tht bank. The cashier was confident that his initials in blue pencil on the counterfoil were genuine. Yet he was equally certain that he had not received the money. The tradesman was certain that he had sent the money. There it was. I was at a dead end. One day I noticed a little stationer's store near the tradesman's office. In the window were some blue pencils. I walked in and bought something, and casually remarked that I should not have thought there was much demand for those pencils. 'Oh, school boys buy 'em,' said the old woman who served me. 'There's old ——s' son over the way. He buys half-a-dozen at a time.' Well, off I went to the grammar school that the boy was said to be attending, and had quite a talk with one of the masters. He admitted that the lad was exceptionally clever at drawing. I was beginning to see my way so had the boy called out of his class into a private room. 'Now tell me, my boy,' I said, 'what did you do with the money you stole from your father on such and such a date?' The bluff worked. He turned pale, and then admitted that he had forge the initials, taken the money, and gone on a joy-jaunt for a week while he was supposed to be staying with an aunt. There was the luck of the idea coming in my head through looking at those pencils."

"Have you been looking at blue pencils to-day" asked Thornton with interest.

"Something of the kind," admitted Foyle with a smile, and before he could be questioned further had vanished.

He had said nothing of the blotting-paper incident, for there were times when he wished to keep his own counsel, even within the precincts of Scotland Yard itself. He did not wish to pin himself down until he was sure. In his own room, he unlocked the big safe that stood between the two windows, and taking out the roll he had abstracted from Lady Eileen's desk, surveyed it with a whimsical smile playing about the corners of his mouth. Once he held it to the mirror, and the word "Burghley" was plainly reflected.

"That ought to do," he murmured to himself, and, replacing it in the safe, he swung the heavy door to.

The jig-saw puzzle to which he had likened criminal investigations was not so jumbled as it had been. One or two bits of the picture were beginning to stick together, though there were others that did not seem to have any points of junction. Foyle pulled out the dossier of the case, and again went over the evidence that had been collected. He knew it practically by heart, but one could never be too certain that nothing had been overlooked. He was engaged when Mr. Fred Trevelyan was announced.

"Fred Trevelyan? Who is he?" he asked mechanically, his brain still striving with the problem he wished to elucidate.

"That's the name he gave, sir," answered the clerk, who ranked as a detective-sergeant. "I should call him Dutch Fred."

"Oh, I was wondering. Send him in."

There was nothing of the popular conception of the criminal about Freddy as he swaggered into the room, bearing a glossy silk hat of the latest fashionable shape on one arm. His morning coat was of faultless cut. His trousers were creased with precision. Grey spats covered his well-shone boots.

Italian Fleet Suddenly Leaves Mediterranean Stations.

ON THE ITALIAN FRONTIER, April 8.—The warships of the Italian fleet departed suddenly on Monday from the Mediterranean naval stations at Spezia, Gaeta and Maddalena Island. They concentrated at Augusta, Sicily and at Taranto. They are thus, within a few hours of the Adriatic.

The departure of these warships caused a profound impression, particularly at Spezia, where until last Sunday the harbor was crowded with dreadnought cruisers and torpedo boat destroyers, while the town was filled with officers and sailors.

Italy has now the finest fleet in her history. It is headed by several new dreadnoughts, of which the most formidable is the Conte Di Cavour, which corresponds in the Italian navy to Great Britain's Queen Elizabeth.

Britain Will Probably Permit Light Beer Under Restrictions.

LONDON, April 8.—Several more Cabinet meetings will be required, according to The Times, before the Government is able to place definite proposals before the country for dealing with the drink problem, but already it is possible to indicate in what direction the Ministers are moving. They have ruled out total prohibition as impracticable. The Times continues, "and so far as the discussions have gone, favor the following measures:

"First, prohibition of wines and spirits; second, encouragement of lighter beers by compulsory reduction of their strength; third, further restrictions in the sale of intoxicants in the military areas, and in districts where munitions of war are being manufactured."

Germany Admits Loss of U-29.

BERLIN, April 8.—(Via London.)—The German Admiralty has given out an official statement in which the loss of the submarine U-29 is accepted.

"The submarine U-29 has not returned from its last cruise. According to a report of the British Admiralty of March 26, this vessel with her crew was sent to the bottom. She therefore must be regarded as lost."

FOUND HER IDEAL

Loss of Fortune and Social Standing Brought Love and Happiness.

By GEORGE ELMER COBB.

Daniel Forsythe considered himself one of the most fortunate men in the world when he became a partner with Roger Bell. He was getting old, his new business cares would be light, and Bell was a money maker. Besides that, young Denzil Bell and Lucia Forsythe were engaged.

It was true that young Bell was by no means the man the old business veterans would generally have selected for a son-in-law. The scion of the Bells was idle, without ambition, sickly and a spendthrift. As to Lucia, she had failed to find one ideal among the fashionable young men with whom she was brought in contact in the social swim. She had arrived at a marriageable age, however, and the principal anxiety of her father was to see her "settle down," as he expressed it. She sighed a trifle, and then in her great love for her father she decided to make a sacrifice of herself.

Then, rudely, unexpectedly, came the darkest day in the life of old Daniel Forsythe. With a crash the great house of Bell, Forsythe & Co. went down in ruin. All of the Forsythe fortune was involved. The Bells, however, were notorious for having ever "an anchor to windward." When the creditors were settled with the Bells flew as high as ever. Mrs. Bell had a fortune of her own, and on that the family could drift along very pleasantly. The first thing shallow, mean-spirited Denzil Bell did was to break the engagement with Lucia. She had expected it, and was devoutly glad that it had come about.

"We are paupers!" mourned her father. "And now the engagement is broken. It crushes me to think of you, Lucia. I had so counted on your trip abroad to finish up your art and music. Now—"

"Now, dear papa," cried Lucia, almost joyously, "I am free to have my own way, to really live, to be of some actual use in the world. Yes, art and music are very dear to me, but thanks to your great goodness, I know a good deal worth knowing of both. I am going to try to share those treasures, to impart my knowledge to the world at large."

"Even if the crash had not come," declared her father, "it would not have meant much to me, for I am gradually breaking down in health."

"Nonsense!" cheered his hopeful daughter. "A month up among the pines with Aunt Carrie will soon drive away all such megrims. Papa, you have taken care of me all my life—now I am going to pay you back."

Lucia was as good as her word. She did not realize that the removal of social restrictions, the absence of matrimonial fetters, were elements in the vast courage and ambition that began to come into her life in a practical way.

Years previous Mr. Forsythe had given his widowed sister a small home at Wareham and had secured a permanent pension to her. This was now their refuge. Lucia found it to be a very humble home, indeed, but comfortable, cleanly kept, and, what made up for all other deficiencies, they were welcomed with true, heartsome love. Lucia had arranged in the city to do some illustrating for two publications. A music house, too, had agreed to pay her something for arranging songs, so she began her new life with quite an encouraging income. Her work did not take up all her time, and she became immensely interested in the children of the poor factory workers of the town.

"I declare, papa," she said, one day about six months after their arrival in Wareham, "I believe I never knew what real happiness was until now. Think of it, this grand air and exercise have made you twenty years younger, the bank is willing to pay you well for a few hours of your time as adviser, I am earning a nice little sum, and oh! these dear little children. Mr. Page has selected those who seem to have the musical and art instinct, and Saturdays I have four different free classes. You should see some of their drawings. I am really proud of them, and there is not one of my music scholars who would not give up a whole holiday to practice on the piano."

The Mr. Page she had alluded to had come into Lucia's life quite prominently of late. He had charge of a school supported by the manufacturing plants at the edge of the town. The work was purely philanthropic. It was profound admiration for the way in which he had won the interest and love of his poor pupils, that had caused Lucia herself to long to be of assistance in co-operating to raise the social and educational status of the forlorn little ones.

Lucia would never forget to her dying day one golden afternoon when she was strolling by the riverside with Harold Page, discussing new plans for the benefit of their mutual work. Suddenly Harold had sprung from her side. Then she saw that a little girl playing in a boat tied to the shore near the mill dam had fallen into the water. Just in time Mr.

"It Crushes Me to Think of You, Lucia!"

Page made a plunge that rescued the imperiled child from sure death.

The little one was more frightened than hurt. When Page carried her to a grassy plot, Lucia sat down to care for the weeping child, and her rescuer hovered near by to soothe her with gentle words. "Oh, dear Mr. Page! You was so good, so grand to jump in and get all wet and mussed up, just for a bad, naughty little girl!"

She was so grateful, so happy, that she seized his hand. She drew it close to that of Lucia, and kissed them both, and held them there so close together that Lucia blushed and Page looked embarrassed. It awoke Lucia to a quick comprehension of the fact that she had found her ideal at last. It nerved Mr. Page to speak out what had been in his heart for some time.

"Miss Forsythe," he said, as they walked slowly homeward, "anybody would be pardoned for the common belief that you are a princess in disguise, and really I was led to believe that you were the great heiress they said. But I have learned that your work here is real soul labor. I have something more in worldly wealth than my humble but glad position here would seem to indicate. Let me share it with you."

And on such a dreamy, mellow evening, and with such earnest words from such a man, Lucia Forsythe could not say him nay.

Malmed History.

"Quebec is taking its place as a summer resort for American tourists," Charles M. Schwab said the other day.

"Some of our tourists show in Quebec a remarkable ignorance of history; but, then, the natives in a tourist's presence show a remarkable ignorance of history, too.

"'What's this here?' the tourist said.

"'That,' said the native, 'is where a great hero fell.'

"'Fell, eh?' said the tourist. 'Did it hurt him?'

"'Hurt him?' said the native, with a disgusted look. 'Why, it killed him!'"

NOBLE INDIANS STILL LIVE

Homeless Tribe in the Floridas Refuses to Accept Favors From the Government.

It is difficult to realize that this homeless fragment of a people still retains, after nearly two centuries of disaster, the traditional pride which distinguished the caciques of the early Floridas, says the Christian Herald. They ask nothing from the United States government, would accept nothing, indeed unless tactfully offered as their righteous due, and through the men who have won their confidence, or through others aligning with these. The gauntest straggler who drops in at the mission store in times of bad hunting and deluged crops will hardly admit that the Indians are needy. "Injun no hungry now," he will answer to your hospitable question throwing back his proud, melancholy head as if gazing into that remote past with which—who knows?—he may be mentally contrasting the present moment.

They ask for nothing except by way of purchase and it would be unprecedented for a Seminole to "jump his account." It is not difficult to see why the mission needed the store. Besides the advantage of location and the closer contact with the Indians in general, the mission can also, through this agency, help the Indians in general, without seeming to dispense charity. Dr. Golden has steadily kept the prices of skins and furs up and of provisions down. The store is thus run at some loss in dollars and cents, but of great gain in the efficiency and scope of the mission's relief work.

The doctor and his assistants of the landing, moreover, kept open house for the Seminoles at all times, dispensing a simple, cordial hospitality frankly accepted by the glade people, whose appreciation, as well as sense of reciprocity, is shown by their custom of bringing "gift offerings" of their best to these good neighbors who with kindness and truth, are gradually wiping the stains from the white man's name.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog, and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach, or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

Native Heroism

If proof were needed of the loyalty of Britain's native troops in Africa, and their attachment to their white officers, it would be found in an incident which occurred in Nairobi. "Our native troops," writes a corporal in the Royal Engineers, "seem to have no fear; in fact, they are extremely brave. One of their white officers, Lieutenant Oldfield, killed at Tsavo, having come right on to the muzzle of a Maxim, four of his native askaris threw themselves in front to try to save him. The whole party were instantly riddled."

The construction of a new port on the east coast of the Island of Luzon is expected to reduce the time for trips between the Pacific Coast of the United States and Manila by four days.

KNOTTY PROBLEMS FOR ARMY SURGEONS

Difficulties of Treating Injuries Which They Have Never Seen Before

What do I think will be the crucial problem for the military surgeon in the present conflict?" asked a surgeon with medical corps experience, in answer to a question upon this point. "You might just as well ask me what the doctors would have to do in a city if a hundred or more armored automobiles carrying machine guns were turned loose in the streets at a crowded hour. There would be injuries of a well-nigh endless variety, and the task of the physician and the surgeon would range the whole gamut from the trifling to the hopeless."

This does not answer your question, I know, but it is the nearest I can come to an offhand picture of the work ahead of the surgeon upon the battlefields of Europe to-day. Just think of it, there are gigantic armies struggling desperately with all of the grim determination of highly trained soldiers with every kind of weapon calculated to spread havoc in the opposing trenches. These of necessity must produce an appalling list of killed and wounded, and the injured offer problems to the medical men that most of them have never seen before.

Treating those injuries is vastly different from the ordinary practice in the casualty wards of a city or military camp in time of peace. The conical headed leaden bullet has given way to the steel or nickel jacketed bullet filled with lead and finished with a long, tapering point. This is the so-called 'humane projectile' of modern warfare, and it is undoubtedly true that this bullet makes under some circumstances a smaller wound and a cleaner one—the projectile piercing a man through and through without producing the explosive or shattering effect of the blunter nosed leaden affair of other days.

A Tumbling Bullet

Within some limits this is naturally to be expected, because the thinner, sharper missile, travelling at a much higher velocity, makes its way through the body substance with less difficulty and, accordingly, with a reduced area of injury when sweeping on upon a straight line. It seems, however, that this humane projectile can act in a thoroughly barbaric fashion.

But there is the probability of graver and more desperate wounds from this very bullet, because of a tendency on the part of the tapered missile to "tumble" in flight. By tumbling the military man means the spinning of the bullet about its short axis instead of rotating upon its long axis and holding its point steadily foremost.

You can see what this means in the case of the present longer projectile. The moment it begins to tumble it presents a larger mass when striking an obstacle in its path and instead of piercing this body like a needle it enters and tears its way through something after the fashion of a whirling wheel.

But while this steel covered tapered projectile can do an enormous amount of harm, the fact remains that it can also put a man out of action effectively and yet make his wound such that it will heal quickly. For instance, this bullet will bore its way cleanly through bone when going at its higher velocities just like a drill, and these injuries if promptly attended to by the soldier himself or a companion will give but little subsequent trouble from a medical standpoint.

Modern First Aid

Every fighting man to-day in a civilized army is supplied with a first aid packet. If he will but apply this promptly in accordance with the instructions he will prevent infection of the hurt and the wound will heal.

The staggering losses reported from Europe bear out the fact that there is a woful lack of humaneness in modern warfare, and unquestionably the greater measure of bodily damage has been inflicted by the artillery and not the rifle of the foot soldier.

The type of projectile used in the field gun for the attack of infantry is primarily what is known as shrapnel, a thin bodied shell loaded with lead balls and a sufficient charge of explosive to scatter them broadcast when the projectile explodes. These bullets inflict extremely severe wounds and cause the greatest measure of destruction of both the hard and soft tissues of the body. Their power to damage is somewhat akin to that of the old blunt nosed rifle bullet and in this respect there is certainly no gain in the direction of humaneness.

Teacher—Now, Tommy, don't you agree with the others?

PARIS, April 8.—The Minister of Marine, the Minister of Foreign Affairs and the Minister of Finance are preparing a bill jointly which will be submitted to the French Parliament authorizing the Government to pay for cargoes belonging to neutrals, which may be taken by the French Government in transit to belligerents.

The bill will contain an authorization to pay for the cargo of cotton on board the former Hamburg-American Line steamship Dacia, which was seized by a French cruiser while on a voyage from Galveston, Texas, for Rotterdam, and which was taken into Brest on Feb. 27. The Cabinet Ministers desire a free hand in dealing promptly and liberally with seized cargoes.

FRENCH YOUTH JAUNTY GUNNERS

Defy Death, of Surprising Skill and Popularity in Stress of Battle

LONDON.—Writing in the Daily Chronicle, Philip Gibbs has an article headed "With the Armies of France—Youth and Faith." He says in the course of it:

"The spirit of D'Artagnan is not dead. Along many roads of France I have met gay fellows whose courage has the laughing quality of Dumas' musketeer and his Gascon audacity which makes a jest of death itself. The French soldier at his best retains that quality of youth which soars even above the muck and misery of the trenches.

"The character of a young lieutenant of artillery who a few weeks ago came to fill the place of a poor fellow killed at the side of his caisson is typical of innumerable soldiers of France. He presented himself with a jaunty good humour, made a little speech to his battery which set all the men laughing, and then shook hands with them one by one.

"Everything was a joke to him. He baptised his four guns by absurd nicknames, and had a particular affection for old 'Bumps,' which had been scarred by several shells. The captain called this young gentleman Lieut. Mascot, because he had a lucky way with him.

SILENCES ENEMY'S BATTERIES.

"He directed the aim of his guns with astounding skill. A German battery had to shift very quickly five minutes after his first shell had got away, and when the enemy fire was silenced he would call out: 'Don't chuck any more,' to the telephone operator. That was his way of ordering the cease fire.

"But a few days ago Lieut. Mascot jumped on to the top of a hayrick to direct the marksmanship of his battery, and a moment later a German shell burst above him and scattered part of the rick in all directions. It was a moment of anguish for the onlookers. The captain became as pale as death, and the gunners went on plugging out shells in an automatic way with grief stricken faces.

"The telephone man put his head out of his dugout. He stared at the broken rick. Beyond doubt M. Mascot was as dead as mutton. Suddenly, with the receiver at his ear and transfigured, he began to shout, 'Don't chuck any more!' It was the lieutenant who had sent him the usual order. Ten minutes later the lieutenant came back laughing gayly, and, after shaking some straw out of his muddy uniform, gave a caressing touch to old 'Bumps,' which had got the enemy's range to perfection. . . . Then the captain embraced him.

MANY OF SCHOOL AGE.

"The spirit of youth in the French army has been recruited by some soldiers at least whose age belongs rather to the schoolroom than the camp. The youngest sergeant in the French army is a boy of 16. His father, formerly a deputy and at the outbreak of war a sub-lieutenant of reserves, naked the colonel of his regiment to find a place for his son in the ranks.

"'Impossible,' said the colonel. And then, with a smile, 'But in order to oblige you, I will give him a uniform and a rifle and authorise him to follow the regiment.'

"This remarkable decision which refused and consented was pleasing to the father but not satisfactory to the son. Unless he were actually enrolled in the regiment he could not be promoted for any gallant deeds he might be able to do. Finally the birth certificate was dispensed with and the boy entered the regiment.

CARE OF THE EYES

Health as Well as Beauty Demands That Eyes Get Attention.

The woman who takes care of herself should give as much attention to her eyes as she does to her skin or to her hair. In the first place after driving or being in the dust of the city or country she should wash or bathe her eyes with tepid water. This removes the irritating dust or small particles. After reading or before going to bed she should bathe the eyes with salt water or tepid water to which is added a pinch of salt, and using an eye cup, will be surprised at the difference in the sparkle of the eyes. If inflamed they should be bathed several times a day. The dull, sunken eyes, the hollow circles and the shallow complexion of many women is due, however, to the complaints and diseases peculiar to women. The best thing I know for this is Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription, because it is a temperance tonic, being made of roots and herbs with pure glycerine. Dr. Pierce publishes the ingredients on the wrapper so it is not a secret, and I have seen many women cured by it and not only that, but the dull, sunken eyes, the sunken cheeks, and bust, have taken on a sparkle and healthful appearance. Thousands of women have testified to having been cured of womanly diseases by this Prescription. It speedily causes all womanly troubles to disappear—compels the organs to properly perform their natural functions removes pain and misery at certain times and brings back health and strength to nervous, irritable and exhausted women.

It banishes pain, headache, backache, low spirits, hot flashes, dragging-down sensations, worry and sleeplessness surely and without loss of time.

Keep the bowels healthy by using Dr. Pierce's Pellets. They don't gripe.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines are manufactured in Canada at the World's Dispensary, Bridgeburg, Ont.

A DIFFERENCE

A man hates to be kept waiting or to be disappointed in an engagement. He can see no reason why a woman cannot arrange her small affairs and so be punctual in keeping appointments with him.

On the other hand, his business affairs are never small and must always pass muster as an excuse for tardiness or actual breaking of engagements entirely.

PAINS QUIT! BACK SORENESS GOES! TORTUROUS LUMBAGO CURED BY "NERVILINE"

This Wonderful Cuartive Liniment Never Fails.

RUB ON NERVILINE

Neuralgia quickly cured is twice, nay, ten times cured. Little neuralgia paints grow into big ones, but "Nerviline" in ten minutes relieves even the worst ones. Even a single application will remove the nerve congestion that causes the pain.

Nerviline penetrates deeply into the sore tissue, reaches the source of inflammation, drives it out root and branch. Every drop of Nerviline is potent in pain-subduing power, and its strongest charm lies in the fact that it rubs right in, even to the very last drop. Nerviline is not greasy, and its pain-removing power is at least five times greater in strength than ordinary remedies.

We guarantee Nerviline will cure neuralgia—not only relieve it, but actually and permanently cure it. Just in the same way will it cure lumbago, sciatica, stiffness and rheumatism.

To conquer all muscular and nerve pain, use Nerviline. A large bottle in the home keeps the doctor's bill small. Get the large 50c family size bottle; it is more economical than the 25c trial size. Sold by all druggists everywhere, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GREY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Colour and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all grey hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Grey, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

THEY'LL NEVER DO IT.

Sultan Tells Correspondents Dardanelles Cannot Be Forced.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 8.—(Via The Hague and London.)—"I am convinced that the Dardanelles cannot be forced. The brave conduct of the Turkish troops in the recent operations against the straits permits me to conclude that although the allies bend every effort and use every means at their disposal they will be unable to achieve their purpose."

Thus spoke Mehmed V., the Sultan of Turkey, and first caliph of the moslem world, yesterday in the course of an audience which he had granted an Associated Press correspondent. The Sultan throughout the audience showed and expressed the greatest confidence in Turkey's ability to withstand the onslaught of the allied forces, and followed with the keenest interest a description of the operations by the allies on March 18 against the Dardanelles' forts, given by a correspondent of the Associated Press.

Sweden Angered by Seizure.

STOCKHOLM, April 8.—The seizure by the Germans of the Swedish steamer England is expected by ship-owners to meet with greater activity by the Government in defence of Swedish rights, particularly since the vessel belongs to Naval Minister Bronstroem. Urgent representations have been made to Germany as to the desirability of releasing the vessel. ### Talk of Peace Untimely.

LONDON, April 8—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst announced yesterday that the Women's Social and Political Union and the other suffrage organizations in Great Britain and France has decided not to participate in the forthcoming women's conference at The Hague to consider the question of peace.

In this connection the British militant leader said: "This movement is well meaning but mistaken. Those running this conference have no political influence. Pro-Germans are working hard in this direction here and in neutral countries and much German money has been circulated in America, but this is not the time to talk peace."

Provincial House Closes To-day.

TORONTO, April 8.—The Ontario Legislature prorogues to-day. Lieut.-Governor Hendrie, accompanied by a small retinue, will enter the Legislative Chamber, and from the Speaker's dias will grant his sanction to the 100 odd bills which enter this year on the statute books of the province. The ceremony will be purely formal, and the only item of business will be the submission of the printing committee's report, which was unusually delayed.

It is not expected that much social atmosphere will be attained, the pomp which formerly attended this custom having gradually dwindled of recent years.

Greece Won't Give Territory.

PARIS, April 8. — The Grecian press bureau, says a despatch from Athens to the Havas News Agency, yesterday issued the following official statement: "Certain information having come into the possession of the Government it is declared officially that the King never gave his consent to negotiations concerning the cession of Grecian territory to any foreign power and that he never approved of any proposition of this character."

MOTHER! IF CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

A laxative to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, April 7.—Liverpool market was fairly steady this morning, which caused a firmer opening here. Winnipeg opened unchanged to ⅛c higher, but eased off again on report of rain in the districts which were previously reported dry in the winter wheat belt and the United States Government report, which was construed as somewhat bearish. The demand for cash wheat was less urgent than for some days past, but offerings were very light of spot stuff, which were readily absorbed.

Total inspections on Tuesday were 367 cars, as against 694 last year, and in sight today were 240 cars.

Wheat futures closed 1⅛c to 2c lower; cash, 1⅛c lower; oats, ⅛c to ¼c lower, and flax, 1c to 1¼c.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., April 7.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.65⅝; No. 1 northern, $1.63⅝ to $1.63⅝; No. 2 northern, $1.61⅝ to $1.62⅝; May, $1.64⅝ to $1.64⅝.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 63½c to 63¾c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 54½c to 54¾c.

Flour and bran unchanged.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

There were no choice steers on the market, but a few odd sales of good steers were made at $7.50 to $7.75, and the lower grades from that down to $5 to $6.50, while cows brought from $4.75 to $6.75, and bulls from $5.50 to $6.60 per 100 pounds.

TERRIBLE BATTLE AROUND ST. MIHIEL IS NOT YET APPROACHING THE END

Losses on Both Sides Have Been Terrible and the Dead Bodies Are So Numerous That Military Operations Have Actually Been Interfered With---Little News of the Struggle is Being Given Out To-day.

HOLDING POSITIONS, GERMANS MAINTAIN

(Special Cable to The Examiner.)

PARIS, April 9.—(French official communique.—The British troops have displayed great bravery in repelling determined night attacks at ——— (name deleted by the British censor, the French war office announced to-day.

Aided by hundreds of star shells, the German infantry made repeated charges on the British positions, which were repelled with very severe losses. The British losses were not heavy.

German trenches were so choked with mangled German corpses that the French troops were unable to occupy them, and woods full of dead and dying were described in the despatches telling of the terrible battles now raging around St. Mihiel.

So frightful has become the loss of life in the savage attacks against the German positions between St. Mihiel and Pont-a-Mousson and Etain that the military operations actually are being hampered by the piles of dead bodies. The battles are being waged with such fury that neither army has had time to go to the aid of its wounded, much less to bury the dead. The sides of the Combres Plateau and the Eparges region north of St. Mihiel, are strewn with corpses.

The official communique from the war office this afternoon threw little light on the progress of the French offensive. The French have made some progress near Eparges and have repulsed the German counter attacks in the Ailly woods, east of St. Mihiel, capturing six machine guns and two mortars.

The very fact that little information is being given out indicates that the battles to smash the German wedge have not yet approached the end. Despite tremendous losses on both sides the conflict is going on with renewed fierceness at every angle.

PARIS, April 9.—Roland D. Garros, the famous French aviator, was the hero of a thrilling air battle in northern France, according to the story published here to-day. Garros attacked an aviator over the allied lines. For several minutes the two birdmen circled about each other, firing rapidly. Then a bullet from Garros' rapid fierer pierced the German's gasoline tank, causing an explosion that sent him tumbling to the ground.

THE GERMAN ACCOUNT

BERLIN, via wireless to London, April 9.—Despite the enormous losses in the fighting between the Meuse and the Moselle, the French are attacking with increased fierceness, according to an official statement from the war office to-day.

At every point the Germans are maintaining their positions in the face of terrific attacks, and along the St. Mihiel—Pont-a-Mousson line the French are being slowly driven southward, say the official despatches.

Near the sea coast, a German detachment has again captured Drei Grachten, on the west bank of the Yser, taking two Belgian officers and 100 men prisoners. In retaliation for the French bombardment of the villages behind Beausejour, the Germans have bombarded Rheims with incendiary shells, setting fire to many buildings.

SEES SMALL HOPE OF PEACE

WASHINGTON, April 9th. — That President Wilson sees small hope of early peace in Europe was the interpretation placed to-day on his Thursday night's speech at the Methodist conference here.

"No man can see the outcome," he said, "but every man can keep his own spirit prepared to contribute to the net result when the outcome displays itself."

MEGANTIC DOCKED

LIVERPOOL, April 9.—The British White Star Liner Megantic docked here to-day after an uneventful trip from New York.

REPORT NOT CONFIRMED

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The revival of reports that Germany "having abandoned hope of a smashing victory" has informally intimated to the United States willingness to discuss peace propositions, met with no confirmation in official quarters here to-day.

Secretary Bryan said that the rumour was based more on hope than on fact.

FAMILY AWAY WHEN HOUSE WAS BURNED

Fire in North End Was Probably of Incendiary

A fire, most likely of an incendiary origin, burned the home of Mr. Thos. Blodgett, 367 Downie Street, to the ground at an early hour this morning.

At 2.15 a.m. a call was sent to the Fire Department, but they were notified too late to save the residence. It was a roughcast house and valued at $400. The family was all away from 7.30 o'clock last night to a dance, and as there was no fire burning in the house, therefore the only conclusion of the Chief was that someone had started the blaze.

Chief Howell has some evidence as to who was around the place about the time of the fire and hopes to know the fiery party in a couple of days.

GO SIX WEEKS WITHOUT TAKING OFF THEIR BOOTS

Letter to Local Russian From Brother in Poland Indicates the Character of Conditions on the Eastern Front in Europe

SAW AWFUL SIGHTS

"Since August I have had my boots off only five times," wrote Louis Chernikof from "some place" in Russian Poland, sixty miles from Warsaw, to his brother, A. Chernikof, second hand dealer at 178 Simcoe Street. When the war broke out Louis Chernikof was a reservist in the Russian Army. He has been in and out of Lodz several times with the tide of war, engaged for the most part with an ambulance corps. He writes that he has seen such gruesome scenes after engagements and has witnessed suffering so terrible that he has at times wished he, himself, were dead, rather than continue the experiences. Men without eyes, arms, legs, in fact maimed with all the wanton destruction of war. He mentions finding two men, ostensibly a German and Russian, both wounded so badly that one was dead and only a spark of life remained in the other. Their arms were interlocked and rigor mortis had stiffened the dead man's hold like a vise on the other. The ambulance men had to pry the arms of the dead from around the body of him in whom there was still some life.

Chernikof said in his last letter that he was so tired he should be in the hospital. He sleeps only every other night on account of his many duties. He mentions the contrast of the ordinary comfortable practices, such as changing under-garments every week: "I am glad if I can change my underwear every five or six weeks," he wrote.

"You go to bed every night and undress yourself, but I remove nothing but my overcoat, which I wrap around me. It serves for pillow, bedding and blanket, all in one."

Chernikoff gleefully relates an incident he witnessed on day in the open stretches of Poland. It was late in the Fall and in a big field the harvest of roots were gathered in large piles. A German airman flew over the field and apparently thought he had discovered a masked battery. He dropped twenty-four bombs on the mangold heaps with excellent aim, but the Russians regarded the bombardment as a huge joke and enjoyed it immensely.

The Chernikoff family are Russian Jews with their home at Rouzana, in the Province of Grodno, Russia. Louis' letter speaks of the vastness of the sweeps in Poland, heightened by the razed villages and towns. The people have fled in all directions. His steadfast adherence to his Jewish faith is indicated by his request that eight pounds of Matza (the food eaten during the Passover) be sent to him; or the flour and lard necessary, and he "would get a utensil, clean it carefully, and bake his own cake for the great feast." Even under the isolation and inconvenience of his position with the troops he showed marked anxiety about receiving his Matza, wishing to follow the religious law he knew to its very letter.

ADVENTURES WITH SUBS

Blue Funnel Liner Theseus Chased by an Undersea Boat Which Fired on Her with Three Inch Gun

FRENCH BARK SUNK

LIVERPOOL, April 9.—The captain of the Blue Funnel line steamer Theseus, which left Liverpool March 27th for Java has sent back a report of an exciting chase by a German submarine on March 29th. The Theseus sighted the submarine which signalled to stop and abandon the ship. The Theseus put on full steam and started zig-zagging on her course. The submarine opened fire and continued throwing shells at intervals. The chase continued for 3 hours when the submarine abandoned the pursuit.

Of seven explosive shells fired by three inch gun on the submarine, five struck the Theseus and did considerable damage.

LONDON, April 9.—The tug Homer, arriving at South Shields to-day, reported that while towing the French bark Colonel Frouis, off St. Catharines point yesterday, she sighted a German submarine rushing down upon her through a heavy sea. The Homer cut loose from the bark and attempted to ram the submarine but missed by a margin of not more than three feet. The submarine shot a torpedo at the tug but missed. She then turned her attention to the bark, sending her to the bottom.

New Mains on Hunter Street

In Preparation For Street Paving —Meeting of the Utilities Commission

It has been reported to the Utilities Commission that in the event of Hunter Street being paved west of Aylmer Street, it would be necessary to take up the five inch water main from Aylmer Street to Park Street and a four inch main from Park Street to Belmont Avenue and lay an eight inch pipe. It was also recommended that a six inch main be substituted for the four inch main on Walton Street, and that an eight inch main be laid on Hunter Street from Belmont Avenue to Walton Street. The estimated cost, less the value of the pipe taken up is placed at $3,339.45.

The manager of the Utilities Commission has been asked to submit a report respecting the electric signs that were taken over by the city from the Peterborough Light and Power Company.

Frontage Rate.

A letter was read from W. Detcher regarding the water rate on 13 Hilliard Street, from which the house had been removed. It was resolved that the rate be reduced to a frontage rate dating from January 1st, 1916.

The John McDougall Caledonian Iron Works Company have accepted the offer of half the amount of their account with the Commission. A cheque will be issued to the company for $209.20 to settle the account.

NO CAUSE FOR ALARM AT BELLEVILLE SAYS DR. AMYOT

Provincial Bacteriologist is Dealing With the Outbreak of Cerebro-Spinal Meningitis—Talks of the Nature of the Disease.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

BELLEVILLE, April 9 — Captain (Dr.) Amyot, provincial bacteriologist, Toronto, in company with Lieut. Dr. Palmer and Drs. Fraser and Hodge of Toronto Division were busily engaged yesterday in going over conditions in the camp in Belleville. They arrived in the city early in the morning. Dr Amyot returned to Toronto early this morning leaving in charge Dr. Palmer, Dr. Hodge and Dr. Fraser.

No Cause for Alarm.

When seen at Hotel Quinte last evening Dr. Amyot went into details with representatives of the press concerning the meningitis outbreak here. As he explained the disease and its development and as he found conditions satisfactory at the barracks, there seems no cause for any undue alarm. He told of measures that had been adopted at Toronto camp. These, he said, would be followed here. In Belleville, however, the disease had got a stronger foothold than in the Toronto Camp, yet this need not excite any fear, for proper methods were being taken.

Plans to Stamp Out Disease.

There are now two men sick with meningitis in the Belleville hospital. These cases look promising. Yesterday a suspicious case came under the care of the physicians and the man was segregated. He is now housed in the 34th Artillery Armouries, Church street, where a temporary detention hospital for suspicious cases complete in all details has been established.

All carriers of the disease will be segregated and will remain so until all traces of germs are gone. How many of these there are, will only be determined by the examination which Lieut. Dr. Palmer and Drs. Hodge and Fraser are undertaking. This method is known as "swabbing in the nose." About one hundred men who may have come in contact with the germs will undergo this test. After swabbing, cultures will be developed and tests made.

"How long may a man be a carrier?" Dr. Amyot was asked.

"In Toronto camp he said they had found 72 carriers and only one remains now in detention. Not one of the 72 was taken sick. This one who remains segregated has been a known carrier since Feb. 27. Generally, however, carriers are cleared in 5 or 10 days. As far as is known to bacteriologists it is the early carrier who dies."

Equipping Laboratory.

The bacteriologists will work in conjunction with the city Board of Health. A laboratory is being equipped for use in stamping out the disease. This is in the Board of Health's room in the city police building.

In the case of meningitis, unfortunately there is little effectual remedy. Vaccination against it is impossible. In Toronto a serum had been prepared, but it had not reached the stage of success.

Germs Short-Lived.

Meningitis germs are very short-lived. They are not carried by clothing as they die almost immediately The method of communication is by mouth secretion. Contact is almost direct unless when the victim sneezes or coughs. So short is the life of the baccilli that the swab has to be forced far up into the nose to get he living germs, for in the lower part of the nose, they are often found dead.

Flexner's Serum Injected.

In Belleville Hospital the same treatment is being followed as in Toronto, namely, the injection of Flexner's serum into the spinal canal. This serum is not very effective, but it extends a man's life and if he has vitality he may pull through. For this reason the men who are well are not worked too hard, so that their resistence to disease may not be lowered.

More Men for C. M. R.

OTTAWA, April 8.—Notice has been received by the 8th C.M.R. that the strength of the machine gun sections of the mounted regiments has been increased from 27 to 30 men, with four guns.

As a result of the increase in the establishment, the 8th C. M. R. are now open for a limited number of volun-

REFERRED TO THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT

Steps to be Taken to Enforce Restitutions in Case of Binoculars Supplied to First Contingent

RESOLUTION PASSED

Special to the Examiner.

OTTAWA, April 9.—The first business transacted by the Public Accounts Committee this morning was to pass a resolution proposed by Hon. Dr. Reid, regarding the binoculars supplied to the first expeditionary force.

"On the evidence," the resolution read, "a number of glasses were of poor quality, of low range, and inferior efficiency, passed inspection and were paid for at expensive prices. This was due to misrepresentation and inadequate inspection. The committee therefore recommend that evidence be referred to the Justice Department to enforce restitution and take such further proceeds as the law will permit."

The above resolution refers to the Birkett glasses, 166 in number, only three of which, Bauch and Lomb binoculars, were found to be of superior quality.

An Object Lesson in the Making of a Car

Last Chance To-night to See the Pictures in the Duffus Garage

Automobile owners and others have one more chance to-night to witness the moving pictures "The Making of a Ford" in the Duffus Garage, Simcoe Street. It's a sight worth seeing and one that you can't see again "for love of money," in the city. "The best chance a man ever gets is the one he gives himself." So if you own an automobile or intend to own one sooner or later, this demonstration of the making of a Ford will be quite an object lesson.

PIN-PRICK POSTAGE.

Taxation at the best, in its mildest form, of licidence, is bad enough. It is bad enough in itself, but when its imposition leads to injury of vital interests, and breeds annoyance, and creates unnecessary trouble, it becomes much less defensible. Hon. W. T. White's miss-called war tax — a cent added to the letter rate—is estimated to add 7 millions to the revenue. It is enough to pay that without adding vexatiously to the public inconvenience. It would have been possible ot raise as much revenue by adding an ordinary one-cent stamp to the two-cent letter rate. This could have been done without inconvenience to the public except the added cost. But Mr. White insists that there must be an ear-mark on each letter in the shape of a seperate war-tax stamp, which has no greater carrying power than an ordinary one-cent stamp. And it may have even less. It is provided that a letter that does not carry the war-tax stamp in addition to the two-cent stamp does not go—except to the Dead Letter Office, which promises hereafter to do a greatly increased business. Thousands of people, through thoughtlessness or imperfect information, will find a little knowledge a dangerous thing. They know a three-cent stamp is necessary, but they may forget, or may not have a special war stamp, and acting accordingly, their letter will go to the Dead Letter Office. It promises no end of inconvenience and annoyance and loss, to have this pin-pricking annoyanec of being compelled to use the "war-tax" stamp. There will be no gain in revenue over using the ordinary stamp, and the post office, which is maintained as a public convenience, will be made a public inconvenience, if not nuisance. The people won't object to paying the extra seven millions of revenue; but they do object to being compelled to pay twice—once in the form of the extra cent a letter, and again in annoyance and unnecessary vigilance. The people's zeal in meeting gladly the extra war-tax revenue of seven millions will be somewhat cooled by the reflection that, even with all the annoyance and extra payment involved in the postal war-tax, the revenue of seven millions thus raised, may be hardly enough to offset the amount of the stealings effected through the benign influence of the middleman patronage lists.

HOSTILITY VS. PREFERENCE.

Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, as a measure of dutiful and practical loyalty, gave a preference of 33 1-3 per cent. taxation on British goods imported into Canada. Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Borden has not only largely destroyed this preference, but has provided in effect that a discriminating tax should be placed on British goods imported into Canada. The five per cent. increase on customs taxation hits our British brother hard; and this increase is not at all counter-balanced by an increase of 7½ per cent. on goods imported from other countries; for there is very little foreign importation of the class of goods to which the increased taxation on British imports applies. For instance, as is seen from the following table, the imports of goods from Great Britain to which the increased taxation applies, is about 30 times greater in volume and value than the combined imports from all other countries. The relative imports in 1914 into Canada were as follows—in yards—

| | British. | Foreign |
|---|---|---|
| Tweeds | 2,150,353 | 66,625 |
| Flannels | 792,002 | 100,000 |

It is seen that the total quantity of British woollen imports affected by the 5 per cent. increase on British goods is over six million yards, while the quantity of these goods of foreign origin, affected by the 7½ per cent. increase is only 182,625 yards, or as noted more than 30 times less. Besides in knitted goods a similar relative disproportion exists. In 1914 Canada imported knitted goods to the total value of $1,198,480. Of this amount $1,018,480 came from Great Britain, and only $148,000 from other countries. As a revenue expedient, according to the fiscal policy of the present government, the increase of 7½ per cent against foreign goods is defensible; but there is no defence for imposing a penalizing impost on British goods, especially for a government that was wafted into power on a wave of professed loyalty, and by the help of gusty gales of flag-flapping. We are helping Britain by sending the best brand of soldiers to fight and help in the war; but at the same time we put our hands into John Bull's pocket and filch a few handfuls of Lloyd George's "silver bullets." There seems to be a sharp distinction between lip loyalty and loyalty in action.

OFFICIAL SLANDER.

In the heat of political campaigning and at other times, partisan newspapers of the rabid sort, are wont to make strong statements regarding political opponents. It is, however, a different matter when straight lying is circulated under the official imprimatur of a party organization. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's influence as a national figure must be greatly feared, when in order to weaken this influence, the Federal Press Agency of the Conservative party, the headquarters for campaign literature, issues secretly a slanderous document like this, for broadcast circulation:

"LAURIER AND QUEBEC."

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier once declared that if the Empire was ever in peril he would be 'the first to stump Quebec.' Well, the Empire was in peril—the greatest peril it has ever faced. Did he stump Quebec? Did he call for French-Canadian recruits? Not a bit of it. His lips were sealed in so far as any appeal to his fellow-countrymen was concerned. Why? Because Laurier, now as ever, cares not a whit for the Empire. Vote Conservative for Borden backs Britain."

This official lie was issued in face if the fact that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had attended immense meetings in Quebec, and spoke in terms of appeal of which he is a master, for the express purpose of urging French-Canadians to enlist. He spoke from the same platforms as Hon. T. Chase Casgrain, representing the Government, and afterwards made, as he is now, a member of the cabinet. In referring to the matter in Parliament, after repelling the slander, Sir Wilfrid said, as reported:

"My heart is very much in the fight." (Cheers). "The fight in which Britain is engaged. I would eagerly have done more if more were needed." He was glad to have the testimony of the Prime Minister and the Minister of Militia that French-Canadians had nobly answered the appeals made for service. (Renewed cheers).

Sir Wilfrid added that he had received a letter that morning stating that French-Canadians were eagerly enlisting, and that more were offering than were required. He felt it just to himself and those he represented in all parts of Canada to characterize the leaflet as "a falsehood and malicious libel and slander." Sir Robert Borden, in reply, did not condemn the "malicious libel and slander," but rather justified it by his favourite refuge, the tu queque argument. He said that he had been criticised by Liberal newspapers. That's another matter. A newspaper has only an individual responsibility; it is far different when the official organization of the Conservative party prints slanders secretly and secretly circulates the slanders "where they will do the most good." Sir Robert said that "personally he had no knowledge of the pamphlet." All the more to his blame. If he has such a lax grip on the reins of party discipline, that party machinery maintained in his interests, as leader of his party, can be used for stabbing in the dark, he is much to blame. He should know; but what can be expected, when he lets his responsibility be usurped by a man like Hon. Robert Rogers who "knows how to win elections?" He may be sure that the means and methods will not be interfered with by weak considerations of honesty, truth, or even decency.

CANADA'S RELATION TO THE PROBLEM OF NAVAL DEFENCE

In the course of an address delivered at the Town Hall, Bobcaygeon, under the auspices of the Bobcaygeon and District Soldiers Aid Society, the Hon. President, Mr. H. J. Wickham formerly Hon. Secretary of the Navy League, Toronto Branch, made the following remarks:

The present war is illustrative, in a very practical way, the immense importance of sea-power. It is true that sea-power has apparently been somewhat inactive, and because of the silent way in which sea-power does its work, there is a real danger that its importance, and the tremendous influence now being exerted by the British Navy and its allies, may not be fully realized by the people. That is to say, that in estimating the relative influences which are making for the success of the allied arms, there is a danger that the fundamental and vital importance of the part being played by sea-power may be somewhat lost sight of, or at all events, that, as a matter of proportion its true significance may not be fully grasped, i.e. as a matter of cause and effect.

We, of the British Empire, must always remember, that for us, sea-power is the very breath of our life. We exist as an Empire to-day, as the Articles of War declare, under God's providence, by reason of the sea-power gained by our forefathers and maintained by succeeding generations. When we lose that sea-power and become unable to command the sea, we shall cease to exist as an Empire, as we know the British Empire of to-day.

The British Empire, let me remind you, differs essentially, from other Empires, in this, that whilst for instance nations such as Germany, Russia, France, Austria and U.S.A. are self-contained and have their internal lines, of communication by land, we, British, depend upon the sea as the only means of communication between our different parts. It is a vital necessity for us to be able to use the sea freely, in order to trade overseas, or be able to go, one to the support of the other, in time of need. You will at once perceive therefore that the size and strength of the British Navy, is regulated from time to time, by the relative size and strength of the navies of other powers, who we think may reasonably be expected to combine against us. Great Britain does not build ships for aggressive purposes, but solely to defend the Empire against having its supplies of food and raw materials cut off, a task which, in present world conditions, it will be impossible for her to continue to perform, without the asisstance of our great Dominions.

Now let us go back to last August and see what our sea-power has effected since then. At the very beginning of the war, in order to escape capture, alal German merchant ships had either to get into their own harbours, or submit to be interned in the harbours of neutral powers. Practically all the large German merchant steamers that failed to get into one or the other, were captured by British or French cruisers and taken as prizes into our ports at the outset of the war. Germany's over-sea trade was at once paralyzed. Just stop to think what that means for Germany. They possessed two of the largest. I believe, the largest, mercantile fleets in the world, the North German Lloyd Co. and the Hamburg-American line. The traffic carried on by these two lines extended to every part of both hemispheres. The mere knowledge that we and our allies possessed a decided superiority at sea, was enough for the Germans, they did not wait to give us a chance to use it, that is, wherever they could help themselves. From last August until now, the influence exerted by the much vaunted German High Sea Fleet has been a passive one. By remaining in their mine protected harbours, and in the Kiel Canal, they have made it necessary for our Main Home Fleet to watch the North Sea so that if the German ships come out they may be brought to batle. The comparatively few ships which their submarines have managed to torpedo, (war or merchant vessels) and their raid against defenceless seaport summer resorts, will not affect the final issue, one way or the other.

Ever since the war began the "Strangle Hold" of sea-power, to use a term I see in the papers, has been gradually and surely tightening on the German throat. Their main avenues for over-sea supplies were cut off at the beginning, but there remained some leaks through which war material and other contraband have continued to reach Germany. It was impossible, all at once, to stop these supplies from passing through Italy, Holland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden, and perhaps Roumania and Bulgaria. But these leaks are in process of being stopped now. The Kaiser made a great mistake, when he brought Turkey into the fight as a belligerent. It gave us the opportunity we wanted and in a short time, I venture to say, we shall have passed through the Dardanelles and seized Constantinople and the Bosphorus, thus not only opening up the way to our ally Russia, from whom we shall be able to get food and enable us to send her in war material, but also cutting off from Germany and Turkey the supplies of oil and other stores they are now able to get from Asia via the Bagdad Railway.

Please observe once more, how that, by the decided superiority of the allied fleets at sea, we are able to deliver our attack at almost any point we want to, both by bombarding fortresses and landing troops to operate on shore. Our enemies, not being able to show themselves on the sea, are powerless to prevent us.

Now I ask you to consider, what would have been our position in Canada, if there had been no British Navy to command the sea, or, what would have amounted to the same thing, if by false economy the British Navy had proved unequal to the task it had to perform. It would have been a case with us of "You'll never miss the water till the well runs dry." Canadian exports to all countries other than U.S.A. would have been stopped, because our enemies would have controlled the sea routes. The same of course as to imports. Not a single Canadian soldier could have crossed the Atlantic to go to the assistance of the mother country, and the mother country herself would have been unable to land troops on the continent. Canadians would have been doomed to remain idle and helpless spectators of the great struggle now going on. Let me say just here, that for the last five years, living in a house overlooking Portland Harbour, one of England's most important Naval bases, I have watched the British Admirals exercising their men and ships at the very work they are doing to-day. Rain or shine, fair weather or foul, clear or thick, in gales of wind and in fog they are kept constantly at it. I have frequently declare, that ever the Navy fails us, which God forbid, it certainly will not be the fault of the splendid fellows who man our war ships, nor let me add of Britain's merchant marine.

Then let us ask ourselves the question who is it that supplies the sea-power which as I have shown is the very foundation upon which the British Empire rests, and are we Canadians doing our part in supplying that sea-power?

Assuredly we are Not! Whilst Australia and New Zealand have each contributed in a conspicuous manner, to the success of the British Navy at sea, about all we have to represent Canada are two old obsolescent cruisers the "Niobe" and the "Rainbow," one or two other small craft, and two submarines purchased by British Columbia at the eleventh hour. We have not to go far to find the cause of Canada's ignoble position in this respect. It is not the fault of the Canadian people. They are all right, and have shown by their splendid loyalty since the war began where they stand. It is entirely due to party politics. The naked truth is that there are certain prominent politicians whom I could name, but will not do so, who have so adroitly misused the navy question for partizan purposes, that the will of the Canadian people has not been given effect to. I say deliberately that any man, I don't care who he is or to what party he belongs, who seeks to make party capital, out of the Navy question in Canada, is guilty of disloyalty to Canada and the Empire, and to continue to do so in the face of present conditions, when the Empire is engaged in a struggle for its existence, is deserving of a more serious charge than disloyalty. There are lots of good men on both sides of politics who are well aware that I am only speaking the truth, and it is their duty to speak out, when the time comes, and let these politicians know, that their pernicious influence will no longer be tolerated. You may mark my words, that if it were not for party politics, there need be no more difficulty in settling the Navy question, by giving Canada a thoroughly representative Navy built and manned by Canadians, linked up with the British Navy and controlled for strategic purposes by a central Imperial Admiralty Board, on which Canada might be represented, than there is in the case of the citizens of Toronto, who combine to maintain a common police force, whilst continuing to compete with each other in trade matters. The British Navy has always been the police of the Seas, protecting the weak and the terror of evil doers.

WELL KNOWN CHARACTER PASSES AWAY

Word has been received of the sudden death of a well-known character, whose name was a familiar one to residents of Peterborough. Richard McBride dropped dead this morning at the County House of Refuge near Lakefield, where he had been an inmate for a short time. The deceased was locally famous and his harmless eccentricities made him known throughout the district. During the summer months visitors to the nearby summer resorts might count with reasonable certainty on seeing Richard McBride at South Beach, Mt. Julian or Burleigh Falls, or else at Gore's Landing or Harwood. His Bohemian habits had made him a familiar visitor over a wide range of country, and many is the person in Peterborough county, who has had his head "read" by the deceased who sometimes posed as phrenologist.

DRIVER HAD A NARROW ESCAPE

An accident of a very serious nature was narrowly averted about 3 o'clock this afternoon by the presence of mind of a passer-by, when a team started to run away and the teamster was thrown between the horses on to the pole.

While a load of "cases" was being transferred at the Grand Trunk freight sheds the team became frightened and started to run towards the street. The teamster, taken by surprise, fell between the animals, landing on the pole of the waggon. Mr. David McQuaig, 474 Sherbrooke street, was passing on a bicycle when he saw the horses rushing frantically down the alley to Charlotte street. Several small children were playing directly in the line of their run, all innocent of the danger. Mr. McQuaig with great presence of mind, managed to get the youngsters to safety, and caught one of the horses as it came within reach. He was successful in steering them to the curb, where the pole was broken, but the driver, fortunately, was uninjured.

The Two New Sunday Schools

The arrangements for the building of two new Sunday School buildings for the two branches of the S.S. of the Temple Corp. go on apace, says Adj. McElhiney, and it is hoped that they will both be finished, one by the first of May, and the other by the first of June.

Any of the friends who wish to help in the way of labour in digging, carpentering, etc., will be much appreciated.

They are in need of some stone for the foundations, and they are hopeful some friend will give them enough. The districts to be served by these two buildings at Bracley's School House and at Byersville, will much appreciate these arrangements, both for the children and adults.

MR. HUTCHINSON'S GOOD POSITION

Mr. M. J. Hutchinson, formerly City Editor of the Examiner and until recently connected with the Regina Leader, is shortly to take over the business management of the Edmonton Bulletin. After leaving Peterborough, Mr. Hutchinson was with the McLean Publishing Company of Toronto. He left this connection for the newspaper field several years ago, with which he has been connected ever since. Mr. Hutchinson's many friends in Peterborough will be pleased to see the advancement he has made in the newspaper field since leaving the Examiner.

The Opening of the "City Cafe"

Is Scheduled For Tomorrow—Private Dining Room For Ladies

A separate dining-room for ladies with a separate outside entrance constitutes one of the many new features that is to be found in the "City Cafe," which will open to-morrow for the first time. For many weeks workmen have been engaged in converting the premises located at 164-166 Charlotte street into its present form, and the result will doubtless find favour with the public generally. The "City Cafe" combines a number of innovations that are not to be found elsewhere. Among these might be mentioned the private compartment which are located upstairs. These are open to ladies with and without escorts.

Downstairs there is a large roomy dining-room furnished with dark oak. Separate washrooms have been provided for each floor. The lower dining-room is reserved for the use of gentlemen. The upper floor is divided off into seven private compartments.

No pains have been spared to make the "City Cafe" one of the best of its kind in the city. There is ample ventilation. The various rooms will be prettily decorated with palms and other mural decorations of a suitable character.

CONDITIONS IN WEST

Mr. H.P. Kennedy is Visiting Friends in the City

Mr. H. P. Kenedy is in the City to-day visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Kennedy. Mr. Kennedy is a director of the Edmonton Stock Yards, Limited, of Edmonton, a company in which he has great faith. Mr. J. H. Ashcroft of Toronto, one of the brightest live stock men in Canada, has been appointed manager of the Company. Mr. Kennedy has been in the West for the past two months and he finds conditions there much better than he anticipated. He states that farm lands are being disposed of at as high, if not higher figures than formerly, but that all "wild-cat" propositions have been given a black eye, which is for the good of the West.

Mr. Kennedy will be returning to Toronto to-morrow evening.

Farmers In Need of Help

Mr. T. Howell of the Department of Agriculture, who has been in the city for several days for the purpose of securing farm help, will be in his office in the Bank of Commerce building to-morrow. A number of men have been obtained, but there is still room for more. Farmers are in the city almost every day in search of help.

Thankoffering Service Held

The annual Thankoffering Service of the Women's Missionary Society of the George St. Methodist Church, was held on Wednesday evening with a large attendance present. After the opening exercises Mr. Jos. Wearing gave a most enjoyable address on "Missions." A duet by Miss Hill and Mrs. Pearson was thoroughly appreciated. Mrs. Jas. Kendry presided, and the offering amounted to $35.40.

Mme. De Thebes, World-Famed Prophetess Says She Feels That the War Will Soon be Over

Mme. De Thebes, the world-famous French prophetess, has issued an Almanac for 1915 in which she prophesies what will happen during the coming year to great personages and nations of the universe. To lend weight to her mystic utterances, she takes care to call attention to what she prophesied for 1914, and it must be confessed that some of her prognostications for the year of the outbreak of the European war were startling in their accuracy.

She not only foretold war, but stated that France would be ravaged in it, that Belgium would be ravaged with fire and sword, that part of the territory of France would be separated for a time from the rest, and that bloody events would take place at Warsaw. It is no wonder that, in the preface of her 1915 Almanac, she points with pride to these prophecies of disaster.

Former Achievements.

In addition to her prophecies concerning the war in her Almanac for 1914, Mme. de Thebes announced that France would be profoundly stirred by a sensational trial, which would lead to rioting in the streets. Here, too, she has been proved right, she now points out, by the Caillaux case.

Her first prophecy concerning 1914 was this: "After 1913, an auroral year, we see 1914, a flaming year, the year of splendid deeds and great heroism."

Referring to her statement concerning the union of 1914 between European nations and "peoples over the sea," Mme. de Thebes declares that this has been borne out by the fact that not only Japan but troops from Canada, India and Africa are fighting on the side of the allies against the Germans.

Position of Italy.

Turning to foreign countries, Mme. de Thebes had this to say in her last Almanac of a year ago.

Italy pursues her triumphant destiny. A new Pope? Yes. And great changes with him. The attention of the world will be turned at supreme moments toward Italy.

Everything foreshadowed for Germany is disquieting. I say and repeat that Germany is among the nations most seriously threatened with disturbances, with profound changes in customs and institutions. Fate hangs over the Emperor more than over anybody else. It is not the eagle of victory that he bears on his helmet.

Unhappy Austria! What did its leaders need for success? More kindness, more honesty, less avarice.

For England, Mme. de Thebes prophesied "domestic and foreign war." In Russia, she said, the "Slavs are overcoming the Germans." She continues:

St. Petersburg has no more formidable enemy than Berlin, and if the Machiavellis of Germans were masters it would be all over in an instant with peace in Russia.

Of Poland she wrote:

Poland! Poland! You have had reason not to despair. It is upon you that the future smiles. Splendid and bloody things will be accomplished at Warsaw before long.

But most startling of all is Mme. de Thebe's prophecy that during 1914 Belgium would meet with "the fire of destruction."

Out of the Present Mist.

Having thus sought to predispose people favourably toward her power of foretelling events, Mme. de Thebes takes up 1915, "the misty year," as she calls it.

Mme. de Thebes declares that she feels, "in the mist," that the war will soon be over, that it will bring to France tremendous consequences, "entirely different from what France imagines." She counsels her countrymen:

Surprises will follow surprises. Do not weaken through impatience or despair. The future is yours.

Remain faithful to your magnificent instincts, to your marvellous predestination, and you will be the pacific queen of the world. If not—but no, I cannot say it!

She goes on to warn France solemnly to be on her guard when the peace negotiations come, for then Fate will be watching for her. "Who is the man whose sword will be broken?" he continues mystically; "who is the woman whom vengeance will pursue, who will die miserably and not alone?"

Next summer and autumn, she foretells, will be such as Paris has never seen, for pomp and enthusiasm. "And one of the French nation will then be great, great as the great drama itself."

Summing up what 1915 will bring to France, the seeress writes:

It would appear that the year will follow a bloody and broken course for one-third of its duration, after which it will find its equilibrium in peace, still hidden by smoke and mist, which will continue to its end. * * * Few men will arise, excepting three or only one, dominating all the rest, and there will be innumerable disappearances of those representing errors of the past.

End of the Kaiser Foreseen.

After indulging in an outburst of vituperation concerning Kaiser Wilhelm II., Mme. de Thebes declares that "he will soon die, or anyhow, disappear." Germany, she adds, "is condemned to exist no longer, at least as she now is." As to the Empire's future, she avers that two different visions haunt her —one of a German torn by internal dissension, by rebellion against militarism and the Prussian Junkers; the other of a Germany suddenly yielding and declaring herself beaten in order to recuperate and again hurl herself at her enemies with new strength.

"But, in any case, there will be no more Hohenzollerns," declared the French prophetess. She adds:

And in the meantime, where is the man of whom I know, whose advent I foretold last year, he who will arise in Germany, whose word will dominate all others, who may save his country from part of the just punishment reserved for it by Providence?

Mme. de Thebes prophesies destruction of the Empire of Austria-Hungary, "which has no longer any reason for existence," and of the Austrian Emperor she says:

Francis Joseph, who has brought unhappiness to all those who have made the mistake of loving him, cannot die without bringing misfortune to his people.

A splendid future awaits Belgium, says Mme. de Thebes, and the King of the Belgians, "if he can escape the perils that threaten him." For England, too, she sees a glorious future. Russia, we hear, will emerge from the war "morally superior" to her former self, but "she will pay dearly for her victory."

The correspondent of the London Times in Paris says that there are two things in particular in which the French place their confidence when they think of the long wall of German trenchline which has got to be broken—Joffre and the 75, and the field gun gets quite as much petting and picture postcard adulation as the commander-in-chief. At the back of all the systematic progress which the French have been making since the main German offensive wore itself out lies the excellence of their field artillery. The nation knows this, for the men who have been at the front, infantry as well as gunners, are never tired of repeating it, and the letters and diaries captured from German dead and prisoners speak more eloquently still. So whereas in Germany the popular admiration is bestowed now on their big siege guns, now on their Zeppelins or submarine, according to the whim of the moment, in France the 75 has it all.

Aids Charges of Infantry.

French infantry can charge within 50 yards of a German trench while their own guns, firing just over their heads from two miles in the rear, rain such a hurrican of lead upon it that not one of its defenders can show his head and live. No other army can make the same boast. But for this quality in their artillery the French would at the present time be rooted fast in their trenches in such districts as the Champagne, where owing to the heaviness of the soil a rapid charge across the open is an impossibility. As it is they are going forward hand over fist. The 75 keeps down the German fire while the infantry stumble forward through the mud and smother the Germans with the bayonet; the trench once rushed, and its defenders taken or slain, a hail of shells from the French guns prevents the German supports from counter-attacking while the trench is put in a state of defence in the opposite direction. So trench by trench the ground is gained.

Accuracy of fire is one great point about the 75; speed is the other. The 75 can fire from 20 to 25 shells a minute. The German 77cm. gun, which is modelled upon it, can in theory do the same, but it does not possess the automatic fusing mechanism of the French gun. Consequently unless the German gunner is very expert, he cannot fix the fuses as quickly as they are done automatically in the French gun.

Very Sound a Revelation.

The sound of a battery of 75's at rapid fire when the gunners are working with a will is a revelation to anyone hearing it for the first time. During the battle of the Yser, on one of the most critical days, the writer was standing on the roadside just outside Nieuport, when the Germans drove the Belgians over the canal from Mannekenaverre, and occupied St. Georges. The two battalions that had been holding the bridge were at their last gasp; fragments of one of them came trickling back along the road, some of the men reeling and bloody from their wounds, others shaken and demoralized by the cannonading they had endured.

The situation was serious; it looked as if the Germans might come right on to Nieuport and threaten the bridgehead. Suddenly a battery of French 75's opened fire from among the willows about three-quarters of a mile ahead. The sharp reports came rapping out like the barking of an angry dog. Presently the gunners warmed to their work and the shots followed one another in quick and quicker succession like the detonations of a Chinese cracker—bang, bang, ba-bang, bang-bang, bang, bang, while the flashes showed like darting ribbons of light through the rising haze of the afternoon. Three heavy German howitzers, which had been dropping Jack Johnsons hour after hour on the wretched village of Ramskapelle, shifted their fire to try and stop this torrent of shrapnel which was checking the advance of their infantry. The huge shells came plunging into the meadows beyond the battery, throwing up the soft mud 50 feet into the air and massacring the cows as they grazed, but they could not find the range, and the French guns went on barking away with impunity till dusk. That single battery, by its rapid fire, stopped the Germans from debouching from St. Georges and saved the day from being worse.

COWANS' SOLID CHOCOLATE MAPLE BUDS

For bites between meals there is nothing equal to Maple Buds—all the goodness of the Indies seems to be caught and prisoned in these pure, velvet-smooth bits of solid chocolate—and they're so wholesome and nourishing too.

A Statement From Rev. Mr. Webb

Editor of the Examiner:

Peterborough has witnessed a very strange thing in recent days. One who signed himself "Ratepayer" and whose identity is well known to hundreds in our city, has for years been writing from behind the shelter of a nom-de-plume regarding the immorality of the Brock Street rink. One week ago he did as he has frequently done before held the ministry of Peterborough up to scorn because they could not join with him in his ill-advised propaganda. This week, under pressure of a threatened law suit he has hurried to the penitent bench and has willingly, hungrily eaten of the humblest kind of humble pie.

Now I hold no brief for the roller rink. It may be bad and very bad, but I with other of my brethren have decline to denounce it because I had no facts to justify me in so doing. Besides this, those who were writing and urging us to do so had no facts to give us.

My wonder to-day is, that since the legal pressure has had such an effect that simple morality has not led this person to apologize for denouncing ministers who could not join him in the tirade for which he has so humbly begged to be forgiven. I would gladly name him in this letter if I did not have reason to feel that he would do as the first settler did in Will Carleton's poem.

"When we're bothered it will oft occur.
We seek blame-timber and I lit on her."

However it is not necessary to name the really responsible man, because all parties concerned know the writer quite as well as if he had signed his name.

Yours sincerely,
J. R. Webb.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, the less soap you use the better.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Matt. Stevenson, of Asphodel, Victim of Unfortunate Accident—Was Unconscious 24 Hours

Mr. Matt. Stevenson, a farmer of the Donegal neighbourhood, Asphodel, met with a very serious accident when he fell through a hole in the loft of his barn. Mr. Stevenson dropped a distance of fourteen feet, striking upon the hard barn floor. The impact rendered him totally unconscious and in this state he was found about an hour after the accident. Medical aid was at once summoned and the unfortunate man removed to the house. Not until twenty-four hours afterwards, however, did he regain consciousness. Although no bones were broken, the shaking up Mr. Stevenson received, was a severe one, which is manifested by bad bruises and a torn ear. Latest reports are that he is doing nicely. Dr. S. P. ## A Tax on Cats

Suggestion From the North Ward

Here is a chance for one of that quartette of municipal aspirants in the North Ward to make a name for himself. If he were to carry to a successful issue the proposal made herein he would wake up some morning to find himself a national hero.

The North Ward is infested with cats, and the only way to reduce this nuisance to a minimum is to tax them heavily. We have a tax on dogs; why not on cats?

Dogs are useful sometimes in eating up scraps; cats are forever scraping up scraps, and it would not matter so much if they chose a respectable hour for their operatic airs, but they hold forth in the middle of the night when every decent citizen should be asleep.

Just why this particular end of the town should be overrun with cats it is hard to say, unless it is because it is populated for the most part by widows, grass widows, widowers, grass widowers and spinsters, pardon me, unclaimed treasures.

In the south end the people are too busy raising chickens and children to be bothered with cats.

Let one of these four men, who have been stung by that ambitious bug, aldermanitis, proclaim his intention of fathering a bill for the taxing of cats, and an army of long-suffering people will immediately rise up and call him blessed, yea a "Daniel come to judgment."

Whew! It is now high noon, and my blood still runs cold as I recollect those blood-curdling shrieks that reverberated under my bedroom window last night. Before darkness set in I had lined my window sill with rocks, cans and other missils ((everybody in our block does the same), and retired with the expectation of getting at least a couple of hours' sleep, but alas, the concert started shortly after nine. By eleven o'clock all my shots had been fired without results. Coming on near midnight I dozed over, and started to dream. Me thought I was slipping down the greasy slope to the bottomless pit. As I neared the door of the fiery furnace I could distinctly hear the diabolical yells of old Nick and his mistress Nicotine as they welcomed me in my headlong flight. Louder and louder grew the wails (oh, deliver me from a death like that), hotter and hotter grew the flames; I grabbed my face with my hands ere I took the final plunge, when, bang went the bed and I landed on the floor. Half awake I rushed to the window for air, and right below me were old Nick and Nicotine, of my dream, piercing the air with their fiendish cries.

Every night it is the same. About nine o'clock "Tom" is let out by his loving owner Angelina. He seats himself on the back door and calls: "Minnie, O, Minnie, come quick, come quick!"

Hearig no response he keeps up the call ad infinitum, "Minnie" it might be explained is the cat belonging to Mr. Neebor, a couple of doors up. "Minnie" hears the call, and kicks up a fuss until she is let out.

Taking up her position at her back door she coos: "Yes, Tommy, dear Tom, how long I've been!" to which "Tom" replies: "Come over, O Minnie, come over, O come." But it is needless to enter into details, for you all know their method of making love.

The upshot of it is Mr. Sandwich, who lives between, buys a stout hearted dog to avenge his cat-loving neighbour. The result, while it is hard on "Tom" and "Minnie," is most disastrous to the nervous system of the neighbourhood.

Who will arise and deliver us?

teers, as they have been keeping just about up to the strength called for, 564 officers and men. It was announced at the barracks at Lansdowne Park that only the very best men would be accepted, and there is no use in any other kind applying. Men are wanted who an shoot, ride and know al labout horses. The corps has advanced so far in its training that it would be handicapped considerably by taking on green men.

There is a rumour in circulation that the Mounted Rifles will leave here within the next month and a half, although officers of the corps know nothing of it. Whether they will leave here for a training camp, for the front, or for Egypt is not known.

Lindsay's Fine Recruits.

Lindsay Warder: A notice posted in the entrance stated that all absent from duty hereafter will be severely dealt with. Private McNeil, who was hit with a bottle on Saturday night, is improving, but still has a bandage around his head. His assailant, Pte. Quinn, is still at large. A Belleville deserter who was brought back to Lindsay, was hustled out of town this morning to parts unknown. The deserter was crippled through some accident which he met with in Belleville.

Lindsay Post: During the month of March, the Post has been informed, over $8,000 was received locally from the Government for distribution among the soldiers recruited here for the Third Contingent. The action of the government in making Lindsay a recruiting centre has been a great advantage to the town as well as the military authorities, for while the citizens generally have benefitted from the circulation of this money, the Militia Department has been able to secure a splendid body of men for service abroad. Recruiting is still going on at the armouries and the men are fast rounding into shape. Sergt. James Blake, who is attached to the local detachment, is proving a capable assistant to Sergt.-Major Allen as drill instructor.

The Examiner is glad to be able to state that the report furnished by a Belleville correspondent that Pte. Norman, of Lindsay, had passed away at Belleville, from an attack of spinal meningitis, was incorrect. The story of his death was widely circulated around Belleville, but was afterwards officially denied.

Belleville, Ontario—Wilfrid Stratton, of Peterborough, is attached here as subaltern with the 39th Battalion. He played quarter-back with the intercollegiate champions in 1914, when 'Varsity was defeated by the Argonauts in the Dominion Finals.

Belleville Intelligencer—The army service corps is dispensing milk powder to the troops, which is considered more sanitary than the ordinary liquid milk, and does not call for inspection.

Presentation To Mr. Cyril Devey

Honoured by Choir of St. John's Church Last Evening

At the conclusion of their practice in St. John's church last night, Mr. Cyril Devey was presented with an address and a handsome leather music case from the members of the choir. The Rev. Canon Davidson, although unable to be present through illness, sent a letter of kindly appreciation of services rendered to the church during the last nine years.

Mr. J. J. Howden, in making the presentation, said that Mr. Cyril Devey would be missed by the congregation as well as the choir and conveyed the best wishes of all for his future welfare. The young organist, in thanking his friends for their kind wishes and beautiful present, said that St. John's would always be his mother church wherever duty might call him.

Mr. Cyril Devey began service in the choir of St. Matthias, Wincester, Ont., serving for two years. The last nine years has been spent with St. John's choir and organ, except for a year with All Saints. He is nineteen years of age.

NEW DISCOVERY FOR TREATING WOUNDS

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, April 9—A scientific discovery that may revolutionize the present treatment of certain kinds of wounds has been made by Dr. G. Edwards, a young California chemist, who is working at the front with the British Red Cross.

It is believed that the discovery is a new serum, but the details of its character are not obtainable at present. When Dr. Edwards was seen at the Red Cross headquarters here, he said that he hoped to be able to reveal the results of the experiment he has been making at the front in another fortnight.

Church Will Be Closed For Present

The Clerk of the First Church of Christ Scientist furnishes the Examiner with the following:

First Church of Christ, Scientist, held their annual business meeting last night. The Auditors' report shows the church in good financial condition. As this church looks for the signs of healing as Jesus said would follow them that believe, as a proof of spirituality and progress it was shown that the best healing in the history of the church had been done during the past year.

According to the law of the Mother Church, Mr. and Mrs. Todd's terms of office expired, and as there are none in the church to take their place, the church disorganized for the present. Consequently, after next Sunday the church will be closed until further notice. The matter is left in the hands of the Board of Trustees to adjust.

WARM PRAISES FOR "SEPTEMBER MORN" PLAY

The Ottawa Citizen of Tuesday, April 6th, is most complimentary in its references to September Morn," the musical comedy which appears at the Grand Opera House to-morrow night. The Citizen says:

Like the famous picture which inspired it, the musical comedy September Morn is a brilliant piece of work. Not for a long time has such a sparkling music and dancing show hit the Capital and for its brief stay in Ottawa it should draw capacity houses. Crowded audiences greeted its initial performance in the Russel theatre yesterday afternoon and evening, and those theatre-goers who went to see what the advance notices had promised them got more than they bargained for. Because it is all that has been said about it and then more. It is full of colour and haunting tunes and clever people. There are three acts and the settings for these are quite up to anything seen here in the musical comedy line. The cast is a mature one and the chorus is pretty and well dressed and principals and chorus sing well and satisfying. There are at least ten song hits in September Morn that should long outlive the run of the piece, and that is no small order. Especially attractive are the songs, "When a Little Boy Loves a Little Girl," and "O, You September Morn." These are sung in the first act and make one hunger for what is to follow. Then in the second act is the funny "A Spare-rib from the Butcher Shop of Life," and "Where is the Pleasure of Wine and Song," and in the third act the particularly haunting song, "Beautiful Dreams I'm Dreaming." Of the dancing too much cannot be said. It is brilliant. The ever-popular tango predominates, but there are also classical expositions of the maxixe and the hesitation waltz. Throughout the three acts runs a story which is interesting enough to arouse anticipation. The medley of modern shoppers, art-students, and dancers from a riot of fun in each act.

The music, apart from the songs, is pleasing. The lyrics are melodious and trip along with the story with catchy appropriateness. The book is by Arthur Gillespie and the score by Aubrey Stauffer, and they have proved a happy team. The cast of September Morn is an exceptionally capable one. Dainty Miss Maude Potter is winsome and sprightly as Argentina, "the greatest tango dancer," and Miss Kathryn Bowen as Louise Storm is dainty and refined. The funmaker-in-chief is Gene le Rue, professor of art, which part is taken by Frank Minor, a comedian of the first rank. When he is on the stage there is laughter in the air. Teddy Van Dyke is played by Clarence Nordstrom with much restraint and Louis Kelso is another singer and actor of first rank.

Splendid Gymnastic Exhibition At Y.M.C.A.

Annual Entertainment in Gymnasium Was Most Successful Event — Long and Varied Programme Pleased Spectators.

REPEATED TO-NIGHT

The annual gymnastic exhibition of the physical department of the local Y.M.C.A. last night was not only a most enjoyable entertainment, but also a splendid demonstration of the individual abilities of the Y. M. C. A. members and the thoroughness of the instructional methods of Mr. G. M. Carson, the physical director. The programme was a long and varied one, with not a dull moment anywhere, and the audience found the whole exhibition novel and interesting. The seating capacity should be crowded to the utmost to-night when the programme will be repeated.

A splendidly rendered piano solo by Miss Grace Gumpricht was the opening number. Then the "A" Boys performed the "Sailors' Hornpipe" in effective fashion, the little fellows in their jolly jack tar togs winning hearty applause. The Junior Business Boys gave an exhibition of marching dalithenics that showed careful training. The tumbling "stunts" by the "B" boys was a most interesting feature, the spectacular diving that wound up the number being a thriller. The senior leaders who throughout the evening made a fine showing in spite of the fact that four or five of the corps are away on active service, put on a free hand drill that was smartly executed. The "A" boys showed their versatility in jumping over the 'horse' and the Senior Leaders followed with the Oxen Dance, a novel set of movements that pleased the spectators. The leaders then entertained with a series of difficult feats on the long horse.

Four members of the Y. M. C. A. wrestling class gave a clever exhibition of wrestling with Mr. H. B. Cowan, the wrestling instructor acting as referee. In the first bout Messrs. Dunsford and Calendar were the participants, while in the second Messrs. Lees and Hartikain faced each other. The boys all showed cleverness and the two short bouts were most interesting.

A wand drill by the intermediate leaders was prettily executed. The senior leaders showed some difficult acts on the parallel bars and then gave the "Dance of the Dixies' Rubes," an eccentric dance. Gordon Yeamans danced "The Highland Fling" in splendid fashion, to the accompaniment of the bagpipes and had to respond to an encore. The seniors staged several spectacular pyramids as the next number, and an illuminated maze run by the members, each carrying a Chinese lantern, while the lights were switched off, was a fitting close to a splendid programme.

The exhibition will be repeated to-night, and there should be a good crowd present.

Ringed plates, held together by springs, have been invented for pressing men's neckties.

WAR TAX STAMP IN EFFECT ONE WEEK FROM TO-DAY

The New War Stamp Was Put on Sale in the Peterborough Post Office This Morning---Tax Will Apply on Railway Fares---Some of the Rates.

Commencing Thursday next every bit of first-class mail matter will have to carry a war stamp. The stamps went on sale at Peterboro' Post Office yesterday. Until further notice each letter will cost the sender three cents, the regular two cent stamp and a war stamp and each postal card one cent more or two cents whether in the city or out of the city.

The two cent war-stamp is to be used for money orders only. When a person purchases a money order he pays the cost of same and also buys a two cent stamp, which is placed on the order. These stamps are not to be used for letters and will not carry same at any time.

The C.P.R. has had no word of how the tax was going to be collected on the telegrams. The banks have not yet received any supply of stamps nor have the express companies although it is understood that all these agencies will use stamps.

Won't Refund Tax.

The railway and steamship companies will not use a stamp for their part of the war tax. Each railway company will act as agent for the government and collect the revenue from the passenger when he purchases his ticket, whether it be rail or steamboat, for a chair or [illegible] car or for a sleeping car.

This point decided was fully considered by the executive of the Eastern Canadian Passenger Association at a meeting in Montreal, at which other points not made clear by the Act were cleared up.

It is pointed out that in the new order of things the law provides for a fine not exceeding $50 if a passenger refuses to pay the tax and also that no matter whether the railway company is obliged to refund the fare or a part thereof there will be no refund of the war tax.

Another point is that the tax will apply on the entire fare, no matter where the destination. If a man buys a ticket for New York he pays 15 cents war tax. Also, if any ticket is sold in the United States or by the Pullman people acting for the Canadian roads from any point in Canada, that fare is subject to the tax and must be collected by the foreign agent. If a man buys a sleeper in Detroit from Toronto to Montreal the Detroit agent collects the tax.

On all tickets over $1 and not more than $5, five cents.

For each additional $5, or fractional part thereof, five cents.

The tax applies to all kins of tickets for which cash is paid, providing the amount paid is over $1, and commutation tickets are taxable on the whole amount paid for them at the time of purchase.

Tickets issued in exchange orders drawn at other points are not taxable, because no purchase money is collected when the exchange ticket is issued.

The tax applies to the total charge on a ticket, including meals and berths on steamers.

Passage tickets entitling the holder to transportation from any port in Canada to any port outside of Canada, other than Newfoundland, the West Indies, Bermuda, British Guiana, British Honduras or the United States, must pay $1 tax if the transportation costs more than $10; $3 if the cost is more than $40, and $5 if the cost is more than $65.

Pullman Cars.

Sleeping and parlour car passengers are charged 10 cents for each berth or seat bought. Double berths pay double taxes, and drawingroom suites pay according to the number of seats or berths in the suite.

The act provides that agents shall positively refuse to sell tickets to persons neglecting to pay the tax, and there is a fine of $50 for each and every infraction of the law.

KAISER PLACES BLAME ON ITALY

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, April 9.—What the Kaiser thinks about Italy is reflected in the following statement he recently made to officers attached to the Austrian Emperor's suite:

"Even if we are crushed we shall never tire of telling our children in Austria as well as in Germany that our downfall was due to Italy. If it takes us ten or even twenty years we will win back whatever we give Italy now, and also seize Venice as interest."

This disclosure was made to a neutral newspaper man by an Austrian officer who heard the Kaiser's vow.

CLAIMS DRUG CURES BY "TWILIGHT SLEEP"

'Typical twilight sleep" has cured entirely nine "dope fiends," according to the claims attributed to Dr. Charles Whelan, city physician of Birmingham, Ala. Dr. Whelan says his patients, after being treated for 48 to 72 hours, awake without the slightest yearning for the drug to which they had been addicted, but with a ravenous appetite.

Dr. Whelan, who plainly is entirely sincere, has his patients in jail, where they are being supported by private subscriptions. His prescription lacks some of the ingredients in the scopolomin-morphine injection, which originated in Germany. But he says he is anxious to give every detail of the treatment to members of the medical profession.

Dr. Whelan proceeded on the theory that the drug users could be cured by withholding their usual doses if some method could be found for relieving their subsequent agonies without resorting to other drugs of like nature. "Twilight sleep" solved his problem he thinks.

Farmers Are Getting Ready For Spring

Spring Work May Commence in Peterborough County Within a Week or Ten Days—Frost is Not Very Deep

IN THE WEST

If the present brand of weather continues the farmers will be on the land in a week or ten days. In fact some of them have already dug their gang-ploughs out of the shed with which to fill in the furrows in preparation for the cultivator. There is very little frost in the ground so there will be very little delay once the land dries up. Mr. W. J. Johnston, who is building a house in the north end of the city, put in the foundation some weeks ago, and at that time it was possible to drive a crowbar right through the frost, which was down only a few inches. Farmers residing in Smith Township and on towards Lakefield say they will be on the land in a matter of a few days, unless the weather should take a turn for the worse. The first move on the land will only be in a small way, and will be confined chiefly to filling in furrows and other operations of a minor nature. The season will open up this year about the same time as last year.

Seeding in the West.

Winnipeg, April 9 — Showers in some parts of the West yesterday temporarily suspended seeding operations, but fair and mild weather for most parts continue. Most sections in the prairie provinces reports indicate big increases in acreage planted over last year.

Seeding will begin to-day on the Government demonstration farm at Portage la Prairie, and seeding has begun in many districts in Maitoba, according to Minister of Agriculture Bedford, who says the average date of beginning seeding for the past twenty years has been April 9th.

The Duke of Sutherland will have three thousand acres under crop and other large farms about as much. Brown and Wilkinson are using two tractors, each hauling five seeders, working night and day in planting two thousand acres. In homestead districts farmers are putting in every bushel of seed possible. Wheat will be the main crop everywhere. In Saskatchewan seeding is general in many districts, and prospects are excellent.

THE WAY OUT

Change of Food Brought Success and Happiness.

An ambitious but delicate girl, after failing to go through school on account of nervousness and hysteria, found in Grape-Nuts the only thing that seemed to build up and furnish her the peace of health.

"From infancy," she says, "I have not been strong. Being ambitious to learn at any cost I finally got to the High School but soon had to abandon my studies on account of nervous prostration and hysteria.

"My food did not agree with me, and I grew thin and despondent. I could not enjoy the simplest social affair for I suffered constantly from nervousness in spite of all sorts of medicines.

"This wretched condition continued until I became interested in the letters of those who had cases like mine and who were being helped by eating Grape-Nuts.

"I had little faith, but procured a pkg. and after the first dish I experienced a peculiar satisfied feeling that I had never gained from any ordinary food. I slept and rested better that night and in a few days began to grow stronger.

"I had a new feeling of peace and restfulness. In a few weeks, to my great joy, the headaches and nervousness left me and life became bright and hopeful. I resumed my studies and later taught ten months with ease—using Grape-Nuts every day. I am now the mistress of a happy home, and the old weakness has never returned."

SIR WILFRID LAURIER PROTESTS AGAINST FALSE STATEMENT

Long Debate is Given to Measure by Which Government Will Extend to Troops Privilege Denied Other Absentees

OTTAWA, April 9.—The bill to enfranchise Canadian soldiers at the front formed the chief subject for debate at yesterday's session of the House of Commons. Several speakers on both sides participated and at times the discussion grew warm. The bill will come up again to-day in committee.

Upon the orders of the day, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, rising to a question of privilege, read to the House an attack made upon him by The Federal Reporter, the official Conservative campaign sheet. The article charged him with having made no appeal to French-Canadians to enlist and accused him of unfriendliness to the Empire. The article he denounced as a "malignant libel and slander." He had spoken at several meetings in the Province of Quebec for the express purpose of stimulating recruiting among the French-Canadians and he was glad to say that the militia authorities reported that many more men had offered than could be accepted.

Sir Robert Borden said he had no personal knowledge of the article, but cited attacks made upon himself last fall by Liberal newspapers. When he was working twenty-four hours a day, they said "his lazy lips" had never been opened to make any patriotic speeches.

Judge Doherty, in moving the second reading of his bill to enfranchise the Canadian volunteers in Canada and at the front, explained at length its details. Every volunteer who was a British subject, 21 years of age, would be permitted to vote at the next Dominion election in the electoral district in which he had resided for thirty days before his enlistment. Each soldier would make an affidavit and mark his ballot in the presence of a commissioned officer but without disclosing to the officer how he voted. The ballot and affidavit would be sealed up and transmitted to the clerk of the crown in chancery at Ottawa. That official would transmit all the envelopes received by him to the proper returning officers, and each returning officer would count the ballots in the presence of their candidates or their representatives.

Continuing, the Minister said that the principle involved in the bill was neither novel nor revolutionary. In the present war New Zealand has passed legislation permitting her volunteers overseas to take part in the general elections, and he read a cablegram from the Premier of New Zealand to the effect that under that legislation 10,000 votes had been recorded.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in opening, said that the bill if not revolutionary, certainly greatly extended existing legislation.

There seemed at first blush to be a hardship in depriving any citizen of his right to vote merely because he was not at the time in the electoral district of his residence. But at every election railway men, commercial travelers and others were unable to vote. Our railways had to be operated, trains had to be moved, even though many citizens were thereby disfranchised. Men in the lumber camps, fishermen on the high sea, sailors, men employed in construction of our great railways were often disfranchised, and yet the laborer digging a trench for a railway had the same legal right to cast his ballot as the bravest volunteer digging trenches in France or Belgium.

Sir Wilfrid said that the bill not only attempted to preserve the right of suffrage to electors who happened to be volunteers, but went further and created a new franchise, making a man a voter because he was a volunteer, no matter what the legislation of his particular province might be. He saw no reason why the soldier in Canada should not vote, but they could go home for that purpose. As to the soldiers in the field, they were beyond the jurisdiction of the Canadian Parliament, they were subject to the orders of the British army officers. He also objected to the form of the ballot which provided for the volunteer voting, not for the candidate, but for the party.

Sir Wilfrid said the bill, if passed, would be destructive of discipline in the army, would open the door to every kind of fraud and would be impossible of enforcement.

Sir Robert Borden said that the men who were risking their lives for British liberty and British institutions should not be penalized by disfranchising them. He thought the fathers, mothers, wives and sisters of the men at the front would not view with approval the cold-blooded way in which Sir Wilfrid Laurier referred to the Canadian volunteers. The Prime Minister could not believe that the officers and men who were risking their lives for Canada would stoop to commit election frauds. He did not believe the country would think so, and he did not believe that their families and friends would fail to note the low estimate put upon the virtue of Canadian volunteers by the leader of the Opposition.

Sir Robert denounced as absurd the idea of there being any conflict between the civil authority of Canada and the British War Office. The men at the front would not let voting interfere with their fighting, but they should not be disfranchised because they were willing to fight.

Dr. Clark (Red Deer) said in England the army had always been kept free from political affairs. The civil power was always supreme and a soldier was regarded as a man apart. The Government should have consulted Lord Kitchener before bringing in legislation, but they probably had not done so because they knew only too well what his answer would be. When Lord Kitchener accepted his present position he distinctly stated in the House of Lords that he would take no part in political affairs. His phrase was: "Being a soldier I have no politics."

Solicitor-General Meighen characterized as rubbish the arguments advanced by Liberal members that campaign literature sent to the soldiers in the trenches might cause ill-feeling among the men and have a tendency towards lowering their fighting efficiency.

Hon. Mr. Oliver did not fear the way the soldiers would vote, but he very much feared the way their votes would be counted. Officials that could not be trusted to buy bandages for wounded soldiers would not scruple to violate election laws. He regarded the bill as a piece of electoral villainy.

Mr. Speaker: "That statement must be withdrawn."

Mr. Oliver: "I withdraw it unreservedly, but it is quite within the facts."

French Corps Have Reached Alexandria

LONDON, April 9.—French troops from Africa are ready to assist the allied fleets and British expeditionary forces against Turkey. The following official statement was issued by the French War Office last night:

"The expeditionary corps of the Orient, which was placed under command of Gen. A. G. L. D'Amade and concentrated at Bizerta (a fortified seaport of Tunis, Africa) to perfect its organization, effected the voyage of the Levant under the best of conditions. It had been ready since March 15 to aid the allied fleets and British expeditionary corps.

"In waiting it was deemed advisable not to prolong the stay of the troops aboard the transports, and for this reason the hospitality of Egypt was accepted. The French forces have been debarked at Alexandria, and are resting and perfecting their organization and cohesion. They are ready to proceed without delay to any point necessary."

Alexandria is about 600 miles from the Dardanelles, or two days' easy sail.

A despatch from Athens says:

"Typhus is raging among the Turkish troops at Erzerum, and is reported spreading rapidly. The Turkish forces apparently are short of ammunition."

Considerable supplies of ammunition and artillery are reaching Turkey through Roumania, according to The Daily Mail's Athens correspondent. The Roumanian Minister to Turkey is quoted by the correspondent as having said that Germany refused to deliver certain gun parts ordered some time ago by Roumania unless Roumania consented to allow Turkish shipments passage through Roumania.

Will Pay Indemnity

But Germany Believes She Had a Right to Sink the Frye

WASHINGTON, April 9. — Germany's intention to compensate the owners of the American ship William P. Frye, sunk on the high seas with her cargo of wheat by the commerce raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich, was formally communicated to the United States Government yesterday.

Ambassador Gerard cabled a note handed him by the Berlin Foreign Office in reply to the recent American communication, submitting a claim for an indemnity of $228,059.54 on behalf of the Frye's owners. The Foreign Office upholds without qualification the legality under international law of the raider's action in sinking the Frye, and bases the liability of the German Government to pay indemnity solely upon the old Prussian-American treaties of 1799 and 1828, which provide that contraband belonging to the subjects or citizens of either party cannot be confiscated by the other and, may be detained or used only in consideration of payment of the full value.

Germany Builds Big Submarines.

ROTTERDAM, April 9.—An eyewitness gives an account of the passage by river and canal from Antwerp through Belgium of three German submarines to one of the bases on the Belgian coast. They came up the River Scheldt as far as Ghent, and then by canal, running direct from there to Bruges through Rupelmonde. The submarines were said to be of great size, and it is declared that they have a surface speed of from twenty to twenty-five knots. They have been constructed at Hoboken. The canal has been deepened and widened at several points to allow their passage.

More Is Discharged.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., April 9.—After being locked up in the White Plains jail since Feb. 3 because of his confession that he killed eight aged inmates of the German Oddfellows' Home in Yonkers, Frederick Mors was discharged yesterday by Coroner James P. Dunn. Mors, who is believed to be of unsound mind, will probably be consigned to the Matteawan Asylum for the Criminal Insane. District Attorney Frederick E. Weeks, after a long investigation, concluded that he did not have evidence to convict Mors in court.

LIEBKNECHT WANTS PEACE.

German Socialist Leader Calls on Workers to Bring End of War.

PARIS, April 9. — A manifesto signed by Karl Liebknecht, George Ledebour, Otto Rueble, Franz Mehring, Clara Zetkin, Rose Luxembourg, and other members of the minority faction of the Social Democratic party in Germany, has been sent to Britain and France, appealing to the independent Socialists of those countries to work up a sentiment for immediate peace. The manifesto says that a million men have been sacrificed and the material damage to Prussia and Belgium amounts to billions.

A letter accompanying the manifesto says:

"Although placed beneath the iron heel of martial law and unable to express our opinions publicly, we can predict surprises in the near future. The Opposition to this abominable war is growing consciously in Germany, but effective peace action depends upon the help of our French, British and Belgian comrades.

DOCTOR SAID SCIATICA— RHEUMATISM—LUMBAGO

But He Could Not Help Me, and Endorsed the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Wm. Parker, 105 Cayuga street, Brantford, Ont., tells in the following letter of his remarkable experience with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills: "My doctor treated me for some time for Sciatica, Rheumatism, Lumbago, but to no purpose, for I had to lay off work. The visiting officer of Sick Benefit called to see me and advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, stating that he had been cured of the same trouble by their use. I asked the druggist about them and he recommended them highly. Not being satisfied with this, I went back to my doctor, and when he said they were good I began their use. The promptness with which they enlivened the action of the kidneys and bowels was wonderful, and it was not long before I was rid of all my trouble.

"I was so bad that I could only walk by hanging on to a chair or the wall. My wife had to lace my shoes. Only those who have had this ailment can realize the way I suffered. I am writing this letter to let people who have my trouble know of these pills. You are at liberty to use this letter, and if anyone interested will call or write to me I will give every detail."

Write to Mr. Parker, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify this statement. He will do this out of the gratitude he feels for his cure and because he realizes how difficult it is to obtain the cure of these dreadfully painful ailments.

There are so many treatments recommended for rheumatism that you naturally doubt them all. Here is an opportunity for you to verify the cure and put this great medicine to the test. It will only cost you a quarter to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They get at the very foundation of rheumatism, and by removing the poisons from the system take away the cause of pains and aches.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

KNOTTY LEE SAYS HE'LL HAVE A GOOD TEAM

GUELPH, April 8.—Knotty Lee, manager of the Guelph Maple Leafs for 1915, has assumed the reins of management for the season. There was a big batch of letters from players all over the country looking for places on the team, awaiting his arrival, and he at once waded into them.

With perhaps one or two exceptions, none of these men is desirable. Lee has a line on a number of players already whom he will have report here about the 5th of May, and out of the lot he expects to get the nucleus of a good ball team. He has one or two deals pending for seasoned players who will greatly strengthen and steady the team.

"You can just make up your mind that we will have a ball team this year that will be up there fighting all the time," said Lee to-day. "I know where the players are, and I am going to get them here. The men behind the team have told me to go the limit in getting together a fast bunch of ball players, and you can bet I am going to do my best."

Knotty went out this morning to have a look over the grounds, and reports that they are not in such bad shape. There will have to be a lot of work done on them, however, before the season opens, but a gang of men will be put to work as soon as it is fit and the diamond put in shape.

President McCaffery offered the Guelph team the use of the grounds at the Island in Toronto for training purposes, but Lee thought it would be better for the game in Guelph for the team to do its training right here, where the local fans could get a line on the players, and become interested in the team.

WILLARD'S TRIP NORTH A TRIUMPHAL JOURNEY

SAVANNAH, Ga. April 8—The progress of Jess Willard, victor over Jack Johnson in the battle for the world's heavyweight championship at Havana, on Monday, through Florida to-day on his way north was one continuous ovation. Not since the days when John L. Sullivan held sway as the king of glove artists have similar scenes and excitement been created by the advent of a fighter.

The day's trip was made amid a succession of spontaneous receptions, in which the populace of each succeeding city seemed anxious to surpass the enthusiasm of those places just passed. Word of the approach of the new champion was flashed ahead, and as a result flags and buntings were flying, bands playing, and hundreds waiting in the heat at every station between Daytona and this city. At every cross road and depot were throngs numbering from a few score to thousands. In many cases it was apparent that the spectators had travelled considerable distances for dust-covered automobiles and horse-drawn vehicles of all descriptions formed a conspicuous feature of the back-ground.

Just before reaching Savannah, where another great gathering cheered Willard, it was reported that the pugilist had been offered $100,000 for his share of theatrical receipts for the next year. Willard refused to discuss the report, or state who made the offer.

Voice of The People

Dear Mr. Editor,—This is to certify that the quotation which Mr. Johnston gave in your columns a short time ago is absolutely correct. I have received the paper called the "Watchtower," dated Sept. 15, 1910, and have proved for myself that Pastor Russel wrote this statement according to a letter received from one of his followers, who says in her own words, "I know what Pastor Russel writes in this article is true." So Pastor Russel wrote it. It is an editorial. Now Mr. Russel says here that his scripture studies are practically the Bible itself, etc. Anyone who doubts this statement may come to my house and read it from the identical paper.

Yours truly,

Question of Soldiers' Votes is Discussed

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, April 9—Consideration of the details of Hon. C. J. Doherty's bill to extend the franchise to soldiers was commenced in committee in the House of Commons this morning.

The first suggested change came from Col. H. H. McLean, Liberal member for Queen's Sunbury, who will shortly proceed to the front. Col. McLean suggested that there should be no age limit. That all soldiers should be entitled to vote whether over or under twenty one years of age.

Premier Borden said that yesterday he had expressed himself as personally in favour of this change. He suggested that the matter stand over for further consideration.

Hon. Frank Oliver took exception to the clause which provides that the soldier shall vote at the place of his enrollment as a volunteer unless the possessor of a vote in some other constituency. He thought it should be definitely decided where the vote would be long and suggested it might be better to have them all vote at the place where they joined the force.

Minister of Justice Doherty said that the effect would be to contralize a large portion of the voting in bigger cities and generally unhinge the plan of representation.

There will be further consideration.

THE BANKERS' DANCE

While the attendance at the Bankers' dance at the Conservatory Hall last evening was not sufficiently large to be of any very great assistance, financially, to the work of the King's Daughters, those who were fortunate enough to be present, were amply repaid by a very happy time. The hall never presented a more gala appearance than it did on this occasion. The decorations were carried out on a lavish scale, and this coupled with the beautiful gowns of the ladies, presented an animated and beautiful scene.

The music was provided by Huycke's Orchestra, and on every hand praise was heard for the splendid and varied programme of dance music, this clever organization provided. The King's Daughters served refreshments at midnight, after which dancing was continued. The patronesses were: Mesdames P. Campbell, J. Crane, W. H. Dunsford, V. Eastwood, A. F. Knight, C. H. Pennefather, R. W. Travers and A. F. Tomlins.

The committee who deserve great credit for the splendid arrangements, were Messrs. A. F. Knight (chairman) W. W. W. Dean, L. B. Jepson, W. B. Sloan, C. H. Paton, J. S. Watson, and R. Cottrell (Sec.-Treas.)

Among those present from out of town were: Miss Robertson, of Montreal, who is staying with Mrs. A. F. Knight; Miss Johnston, of Toronto, who is the guest of Mrs. Dearle; Miss Norman, of Toronto, who is with Miss Mabel Patterson for the Easter vacation; Miss Jessie Starr, and Mr. Russell McCormack, also of Toronto, who are guests at the home of Mrs. Alex. Gibson.

Alderman Green is still out of the city in connection with the death of his brother which occurred a couple of days ago. He is expected home to-morrow night.

On the Sick List.

Detective Sam Newhall, who has been indisposed for some days, is still confined to his home. Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine, of the City Engineering staff, who is also on the sick list, is recovering.

Three Months For Stealing $3.75

On a charge of stealing a pocket book containing the sum of $3.75, the property of Mr. Joseph Findlay, of East City, James Nelson was sentenced this morning to three months in jail. Nelson elected to be tried by Magistrate Dumble, pleading "not guilty."

Mr. Findley, who is an aged man, has been baching at his home in East City. The accused, Nelson, who was known to him had been working about the camps, but got out of a job and had no money. Findley invited Nelson to stay with him for a while, which he did.

One morning they came down town together, Findley leaving a pocket-book containing $3.75 on the window sill. When he went home it was gone. The prisoner got home later and when accused of taking the money got very angry and started a rough house, breaking a lamp and nearly setting the house on fire in emphasizing that he was not guilty.

The next day Nelson was buying drinks at a local bar, and Findley learning of it, went to look for him. He found the pocket book in his possession and $1.35 of the money in it. The remainder had apparently been spent in a fight with John Barleycorn.

There were several witnesses to be heard this morning and the case was not finished until about 12.30 p.m., when Nelson was found guilty.

Drunk Again.

William Kellar was found drunk in a public place. He was fined $2.00 this morning to be paid forthwith.

Rode on Sidewalk.

George E. Henderson rode on his bicycle on the sidewalk from the door of his residence to the crossing, a matter of four houses away. He has not been in the habit of doing this, but the road was muddy.

He promise that he would not do it again and was let off by the Magistrate.

Two Candidates Have Qualified

Up until three o'clock this afternoon two of the four candidates for alderman in the North Ward, had qualified. The other two have until nine o'clock this evening in which to qualify or drop out. Failure to qualify will eliminate them from the running. The two who have qualified are Mr. W. S. Dodd and ex-Alderman Langford. The two who have yet to file their declaration are Dr. W. T. Holloway and Mr. G. O. Cameron. There is reason to believe that the latter will drop out.

Around the Theatres

THE BACHELOR'S ROMANCE."

John Emmerson, a favourite with the Empire's patrons, is closing the week in a delightful romantic comedy, "The Bachelor's Romance." He has the role of a literary critic, reaching the indeterminate age which is associated with bachlerhood. Into the well-ordered if at times, absent-minded, regularity of his work of reading manuscripts breaks a word a pretty girl who grows up to love and be loved by him. The scenes are replete with comedy of the Emersonian kind, the story is unfolded with some degree of probability and all told it is one of the most pleasing photo-plays yet shown at the Empire.

THE ROYAL.

A clever vaudeville act by "Those Novelty Girls" heads the bill at the Royal. They sing novelty songs, and give an exceptionally good exhibition of balancing and juggling. They use a large ball for their balancing act and present variations in this turn that are not usually shown. The pictures include a George Ade Fable, entitled, "The Fable of the Authors, the Dear Public and the Plate of Mush." The feature picture is a two reel drama entitled Gwendolin. It is based on George Elliott's novel, "Daniel Dorando. A good comedy is "Getting to the Ball Game," completing a good bill.

THE TIZ-IT.

"For the Empire" is the big number at the Tiz-It. It is a war story released by the London Film Company and shows a realistic charge. A Billie Ritchie comedy, an instalment of the Trey O' Hearts and other comedies complete the bill.

THE RED MILL."

Manager Clayton's across the way house has an unusual picture that will appeal to billiard and pool players. It is a demonstration of billiard shots and is quite interesting. A good picture is "The Beautiful Unknown," a three act drama of unusual strength and with five settings.

Army Legend Clings For 100 Years

It is said that in the year 1912 the Twelfth Royal Lancers, the most famous British cavalry regiment, was delivered of the burden of 100 years' punishment inflicted on the corps a century ago by the Duke of Wellington.

In the year 1812, so runs the legend, the lancers broke into a monastery during the war in Spain, and there conducted themselves very badly. When the duke heard of this he paraded the regiment and sentenced it to a penalty which was to last 100 years. Every night at 10 o'clock, ran the order, the band must parade and play five hymns as punishment—the Spanish national hymn, the vesper hymn, and the English national anthem. Moreover, every man of the regiment was to stand at attention while the hymns were being played.

This hardly sounds like the "Iron Duke," and, as a matter of fact, the pretty legend is only a legend. An eminent military officer who had occasion to investigate the story gives the precise grounds upon which was based the hymn playing of the Twelfth Lancers' band.

"The custom endured for more than a century," says he, "and is not penal. These are the facts: In 1793 a part of the Twelfth Light Dragoons, as the regiment was then called, proceeded, when Toulon was abandoned, to Corsica, and were present at the taking of Bastia, May 22, 1794. The remainder of the regiment sailed to Italy and landed at Civita Vecchia. Here the conduct of both officers and men attracted the notice of the pope, Pius VI., who, May 30, 1794, addressed a most complimentary letter to them through Cardinal de Nelada, the papel secretary of state.

"He presented a gold medal to each of the officers, 12 in number. Three of the officers proceeded to Rome, where they were presented to the pope, who received them most graciously, and, taking the helmet of one officer, Captain Browne, blessed it and replaced it upon his head. He also presented to them three melodies: Sicilian vespers, the hymn now used as the Russian national anthem, and a melody, the name of which has not been handed down, for the band to play.

"The peninsular war was in no way connected with the matter. Had misconduct taken place in a monastery, it must have been, if detected, duly reported. A court-martial must have followed, and its sentence would be recorded, as the sentence of all court-martial are.

"But assuming that such a thing did take place, and that a court-martial was somehow avoided, which it could not have been, the Duke of Wellington could not legally have passed any such sentence, and had he done so, would have been liable himself. Such a sentence would never have been obeyed, and rightly.

"The story of the men having to turn out of bed long after 'lights out' in order to stand at attention while the hymns were being played is equally unsupported. Tradition dies hard, however, and the story of the 'Iron Duke's' sentence of 100 years of hymn playing endured until the year 1912, when the custom was discontinued during the quartering of the lancers at Potchefsroom, South Africa."

To The Electors Of No. 4 Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen—

Having been requested by numerous friends to offer myself as candidate for alderman in No. 4 Ward, at the coming bye-election, I have consented to do so.

Having had 36 years' practical experience in public and commercial life,—13 years of which have been spent as a resident of our No. 4 Ward,—I feel that I may not be unworthy of support as one of your representatives in the City Council.

If elected, my first duty will, of course, be to No. 4 Ward, but the general interests of the whole city will receive my close attention.

As it will be impossible for me to make a full canvas of the ward, I take this means of soliciting your votes and influence.

Yours truly,

"Johnny Canuck's The Boy"

The Examiner has received a copy of the second edition of the popular song "Johnny Canuck's the Boy," words and music by Jean Munro Molloy, wife of Trooper Molloy, blinded by a bullet in the South African war, and now on the professorial staff of the Miliary College. The song has such an aptness to this time of war, such a ringing appeal, so much of patriotism, such a virile swing and uplift in both music and words that it is no wonder that it has reached its second edition. It should be immensely popular with Canadian soldiers and the friends of Canadian soldiers. We all know "Johnny Canuck's the boy," but it is doubly delightful to be told it by this captivating song, with its manly march of melody and the dash of its catching chorus.

The Ancient Mosaic Law

PHILADELPHIA, April 10.—Interesting features of the ancient Mosaic laws were detailed by Prof. M. Gamden M. Cobern, of Allegheny College, in a lecture here on "Moses and His Times." Recent discoveries by archaeologists, he declared, have confirmed the Biblical account of Moses.

"One of the old Mosaic laws fixed the salary of a surgeon," said Prof. Cobern. "If he succeeded in an operation he received a certain sum. If he failed, his right arm was cut off."

Under the same law, he added, a contractor was put to death in case a building he had constructed fell and killed someone, or if a burglary was committed in a town the mayor and council were held responsible for it.

"The doctors of that day were as wise as ours," he continued. "They wrote their prescriptions in an ancient tongue that nobody else could understand. I've seen prescriptions for making the hair grow. They were printed on papyrus, and the fact that it was a good one was proved by a note written beside it in another hand. 'It does the work, too.'"

RUSSIANS SECURE SEVENTY-FIVE MILES

of the Carpathian Summits—Austro-Germans Must Return From East Galicia or Bukowina or Be Cut Off From Main Body.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, April 9.—With the exception of one hill, the Russians now are in possession of a stretch of over 75 miles of the principal summit chain of the Carpathian Mountains, according to the official reports issued to-night in Petrograd. The report states that violent counter-attacks on the part of the Austrians and Germans continue, but that the Russian forces have repulsed all these and that the advance in the direction of the Hungarian plains is proceeding without interruption.

The British military critics express the greatest admiration for the manner in which the Russians have handled the Carpathian campaign. Their advance between Polianka and Bartfeld, they say, squeezed the Austrians out of the Dukla Pass, that from Dukla squeezed them out of Mezolaborez and from west to east this process has continued until all the passes are in the hands of the Russian Emperor's troops. The critics contend that the Austro-Germans must now return from East Galicia and Bukowina or they will find themselves cut off.

Telegraphing from Petrograd to the Daily News, Fredrick Rennet says:

"Already there are remarkable signs that the more serious purpose of the large German reinforcements now answering the summons of the Hungarian Government is to overawe the rural population, which is beginning to threaten revolt. Should the Hungarian crisis burst into civil war behind the armies now facing the Russians, it is certain that von Hindenburg will immediately abandon his lines facing the Narew from the north and bring the main German army into Western Poland, sending Mackenzen's forces south again to try to get below the Russian position in Hungary. The Germans in the north have only one officer for about 400 men."

RED CROSS NOTES

The two Allen line steamers, which left the port of Halifax on March 22 and 25 last, carried 1,522 cases of Red Cross supplies and field comforts for the troops. These cases contained 92,162 articles of clothing, and, in addition, there were 94 cases of medical supplies, 73 cases of bandages, 18 cases of handkerchiefs and 7 cases of old linen. A further consignment of 460 cases left Toronto yesterday, making a total shipment for the month of March of 1,782 packages.

It is noteworthy that with the exception of 71 cases which were packed at the Halifax warehouse, the whole of these shipments passed through the headquarters office in this city, 77 King St., East, and included contributions from the Toronto branch, 137 cases; London, 97; Calgary, 34; Cobalt, 33; Vancouver, 22; Regina, 17; and 21 cases for shipment to Paris by the Secours National de France.

Colonel Ryerson, who sails from New York on the Lusitania on April 3, will during his visit to the front and in England visit the Duchess of Connaught hospital at Clivedon, the Shorncliffe hospital, and also those institutions in which Canadians are interested at Le Touquet, Boulogne, Rouen, Le Havre and in London. Colonel Ryerson will also pay a visit to the hospital being conducted in Paris by La Presse, of Montreal.

During the past month no less than 1,775 cases of supplies and field comforts have left the city for England where they will be distributed by the Red Cross Society and the War Contingent Association. This breaks all records and shows clearly how splendidly the people of Canada are working for the soldiers in this war. The Corsican, which left Halifax on March 21 for Liverpool, has on board 900 cases of supplies and field comforts for the troops. Of this number 71 cases came from Halifax and the rest were sent through the headquarters of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

Mr. Noel Marshall, Chairman of the Executive committee of the Canadian Red Cross Society, has received a copy of a resolution passed at a meeting of the British Red Cross Society in London on March 10, when H. R. H. the Princess Christian moved and the Hon. Arthur Stanley, M.V.O., seconded the resolution which was as follows:

"That the British Red Cross Society appreciates the valuable work which has been achieved by the Canadian Red Cross Society in connection with the Canadian Red Cross hospital at Clivedon, Taplow, Bucks, which has been placed at their disposal by Mr. and Mrs. Waldorf Astor. The committee desires to place on record its grateful thanks to all those who are responsible for the setting up and the working of the hospital, which forms a gratifying link between Canada and the home land. The committee also congratulates Colonel Hodgetts, Canadian Red Cross Commissioner, on the perfection which has been attained in this hospital.

H.R.H. the Duchess of Connaught has donated $5,000 toward the hospital that bears her name.

A letter appeared recently in the press from Captain Hamilton Morton asking for comforts for his company of the Toronto Grenadiers, and asking that a small association be formed to supply these needs. As the supply of such needs as these is exactly along the line of the work of the National Service Committee in co-operation with the Canadian War Contingent Association in England, a cable was sent to London asking that the men should receive the soup and other extras for which they asked.

The following cable was received from Mr. J. G. Colmer, the secretary of the Canadian War Contingent Association in London: "Soup, candies and other comforts now on way to third Battalion and all other units. Have asked officers commanding different units to keep us fully informed as to all requirements." (The Grenadiers are attached to the Third Battalion of the First C.E.F.)

Those who contributed in response to the appeal lately sent out for our fighting men will be glad to know that there is this close communication between Canada and London in enabling the needs of the men at the front to be met with the greatest possible promptness.

The treasurer of the National Service Committee has forwarded to Mr. J. G. Colmer, the secretary of the Canadian War Contingent Association in London, England, a draft for $3,000 being the first instalment of money received in answer to the appeal for comforts for the men in the trenches lately issued through this committee.

The chief demand continues to be for socks, coloured handkerchiefs and all forms of tobacco and candy. The money sent will be expended on the latter articles as purchase of tobacco, candies and soap in England does away with all difficulties with the customs as these articles are dutiable. Further contributions for this object may be sent to 77 King Street, East, Toronto.

Swoboda To Military Jail

PARIS, April 10.— Raymond Swoboda, charged with espionage and arson, was interrogated yesterday before the second permanent court martial in Paris. His arrest grew out of the investigation into the fire aboard the steamship La Touraine. His preliminary examination, which was purely formal, concerned only the question of his identity. Swoboda took the opportunity afforded him to protest vigorously against his arrest and declared himself ready to face any charges which might be brought against him. He will be transferred from the Conciergerie prison to the military jail.

To be carried inside a man's hat is a recently patented combination of mirror, memorandum tablet and card case.

FIERCE FIGHTING ON THE COMBRES HEIGHTS

Capture of Eparges in a Bloody Engagement Yesterday —French Pressing Home Their Advantage by Heavy Smashes

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PARIS, France, April 10.—Fierce fighting on the Combres Heights, east of Eparges, with a terrible toll of dead, was reported continuing, in despatches received here to-day. Following the capture of Eparges in a bloody engagement yesterday, the French are pressing home their advantage by heavy smashes against the centre of the northern side of the Teuton wedge.

Over rocky hillsides the battle about Combres is proceeding. The Germans hold strong position on top of the plateau. Their machine guns are raking the cliffs, dealing out death, but by daring rushes with fixed bayonets the French are slowly fighting their way up the heights.

The Combres battle is now most desperately going on between the Meuse and the Moselle, according to despatches from the scene of fighting to-day. The French believe they have found the weak spot in the German line and are hammering at it with vengeance. In the Ally. woods, southeast of St. Mihiel, around Regniville and north of Flirey, the attack on the southern side of the wedge is proceeding with almost equal violence.

To lift the pressure on their lines in this region, the Germans have launched offensives in the Champagne and near the sea coast. In Alsace, fighting has been resumed and there are indications that a general engagement will soon be under way from the sea to the extreme eastern end.

WAR'S FIGURES DWARF ALL WORLD'S HISTORY

Since the war began the figures involved in the statements of men engaged or lost have distanced the pursuit of the nimblest imagination. These figures and the colossal statistics of ordnance, ammunition and field equipment exceed the capacity of the mind to grasp their significance, like measurements of interstellar space. They make the numbers of men engaged in previous wars seem trivial.

An English compilation of the Prussian casualty lists, whether correct or not, gives the total of killed, wounded and missing as 1,050,029. An estimate from Paris puts the number of French soldiers on foreign soil at 750,000. A cemetery near Warsaw is said to hold 100,000 men. These are some of the figures contained in one day's despatches, which include the statement that the English and French armies thus far have called for American and French automobile equipment valued at more than $30,000,000.

To find anything like a parallel for the numbers engaged in the war one must go back to the ancient Persians. Xerxes may have led 2,000,000 men at once against Greece, and Darius may have had 750,000 or more to oppose the ruthless Alexander.

Napoleon at Marengo had only 18,000 men. He brought 400,000 over the border into Russia, of whom 20,000 survived the awful retreat. At Waterloo he had 48,950 infantry, 15,765 cavalry, 7,232 artillery. In our own Revolution, 309,781 men by one estimate were engaged. In the Civil war there were about 2,000,000 warriors for the Union and 750,000 soldiers of the Confederacy. At Gettysburg on the Union side there were 23,001 killed, wounded and missing, and on the Confederate side 16,971.

The troops under Washington and Rochambeau at Yorktown numbered only 16,000. In the war of 1812 the total number of Americans concerned was 576,622. In the Mexican war there were 112,230; in the Spanish war 274,717, of whom some 60,000 were actually engaged.

These figures chosen at random, clearly indicate the relative immensity of the scale on which the present conflict is waged, and the formidable dimensions of the task of the historian who must comprehend in his description not a definite succession of pitched battles, but the indeterminate opposition month after month of two intrenched alignments hundreds of miles in length involving hundreds of thousands and even millions of men.—Philadelphia Ledger.

ABANDONED HER PLAN

Austria Drops Preparations for a Second Invasion of Serbia

FRANZ JOSEF'S OFFER

Special Morning Cable.

ROME, April 10.—Hard pressed by the Russians in the Carpathians, Austria has abandoned her plan for a second invasion of Serbia, according to information reaching here from several sources.

The troops intended for the new Serbian campaign are now being concentrated along the Italian frontier, where Austrian military preparations continue.

According to the Petrograd correspondent of the Milan Secolo, Austria has proposed a separate peace with Russia, with the understanding that the Czar protect the Dual Monarchy against Italy's territorial ambitions.

Franz Josef, according to the Secolo's correspondent, has offered to cede Galicia, Bosnia and Herzegovina to Russia, but has insisted that she be allowed to retain Trente, Istria and Transylvania.

Another French Barque is Sunk

Bound From London to New York, Torpedoed Off Isle of Wight

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Eng., April 10. — The French bark Chateaubriand, bound from London for New York was torpedoed and sunk off the Isle of Wight Thursday noon. Captain Grendin and her crew of 24 men landed at Le Treport to-day.

The Chateaubriand did not sink rapidly enough to please the submarine's commander after the torpedo exploded, according to the crew.

The submarine fired three shells into the vessel's sides and she went down in three minutes.

Cash Sales of Wheat

At the Seaboard Were Reported at 200,000 Bushels—The Wheat Market

CHICAGO, April 10—May wheat is badly congested. This fact was clearly shown yesterday when a few shorts attempted to cover their outstanding contracts and were forced to bid the price up from $1.51 1-2 to $1.55 1-4 without securing all that was wanted.

The size of the open interest in May wheat is unknown, as it is scattered over several of the markets. There is practically no contract wheat at Chicago, as the amount is so very small that it would be no relief to shorts for delivery. It was said a short time since that foreigners were long on May wheat, but it is now reported they have sold their holdings in order to avail profits.

It is stated in Board of Trade circles that May wheat holdings are largely in the hands of one big concern in La Salle Street, and that the shorts will be forced to pay the price asked.

The strength shown by May wheat was reflected in the new crop months. Both the July and September were strong and higher, and closed at the best prices reached. The July was up 1 1-2c. and the September was 5-8c better. Old wheat is growing scarcer in all positions, and a cable from Broomhall says that importing countries' purchases, including Norway, Sweden and Denmark were 13,560,000, where the requirements are 22,000,000 bushels, and that Switzerland has imported only 6,500,000 bushels, with minimum requirements of 16,000,000 bushels.

Cash sales of wheat at the seaboard were reported at 200,000 bushels, with none here to mention. Sales of corn here were 140,000 bushels and of oats 235,000 bushels, while at the seaboard oats were 500,000 bushels.

Higher prices for hogs, with the prospects of a complete removal of the shipping embargo, started a buying movement in provisions in which packers joined. The stocks of products are still the largest held in many years.

Charged With Swindling Through Mails

NEW YORK, April 9.—Charged with participation in a swindle operated through the mails, in which they are said to have made at least $50,000 by providing "ladies" and "gentlemen" with "light, artistic work which may be done at home," Miss Marian Evans, a pretty young woman, and her employer, David Esaceson, were arraigned before Judge Edward D. Cushman, in the United States district court. Esaceson was held in $5,000 bail and Miss Evans in $1,000 bail for trial.

Esaceson lives in Boston. He is the head of the Kalos Manufacturing Company, a concern which purports to make and sell medallions consisting of coloured photographs pasted on the underside of a bit of concave glass. The concern has offices at 46 West 27th Street, 45 West 34th Street, and in Boston.

According to Assistant United States Attorney Robert Stephenson, one of the pretty girl instructors was always on hand in the New York offices to receive those who had answered the advertisements inserted by Esaceson in numerous papers, calling for persons who wanted light, artistic work at home. If the applicant had a dollar on his person, it is alleged, he or she was given a lesson in the extremely "simple art" of colouring the photographs and pasting them under the glass.

The girl instructors performed the job with such ease, it is said, that the victims usually succumbed to the proposition of buying "an outfit" for from $12 to $18.

"THE GRELL MYSTERY"

By Frank Frocst

Foyle shook hands with him, and his blue eyes twinked humorously. "On the war-path, I see, Freddy. Sit down. What's the game? Going to the big fight?"

The last remark was made with an object. Professional boxing attracts perhaps a larger number of the criminal fraternity than any other sport, except, possibly, horse-racing. In many cases, it is purely and simply love of the game that attracts. There is no ulterior motive. But in the case of Freddy, and men in his line, there was always the chance of combining pleasure with profit. The hint was not lost on the pick-pocket. A hurt expression crossed his face.

"No, Mr. Foyle," he declared earnestly. "I don't take any interest in boxing. I just called in to put you wise to something as I was passing."

"That's very nice of you, Freddie. What was it?"

The pick-pocket dropped his voice. "It's about Harry Goldenburg," he said. "I saw him to-day."

Foyle beat a tattoo on his desk with his fingers. "That so?" he said listlessly. "Out on the Portsmouth Road, I suppose?"

Dutch Fred sat up with a start. "Yes," he agreed, "just outside Kingston. How did you know?"

"Just a guess," laughed the superintendent. "Well, what about it? Did you speak to him?"

"I didn't have a chance," retorted Freddy. "I was in a little run-about with a pal when he came scooting by hell-for-leather. We only got a glimpse of him, and if he noticed us he made no sign. I thought you'd like to know, that's all. It was an open car, brown colour. I couldn't see the number for dust; it was A something."

"Well, we know all that," said Foyle. "All the same, Freddy, I am glad you dropped in; I won't forget it."

"Right oh, Mr. Foyle. Good evening." And the pick-pocket swaggered out, while Foyle thoughtfully stowed away his papers.

Some one brought in a cup of tea and some biscuits, and his watch showed him that it was a quarter to five. He had promised to call on Lady Eileen about six o'clock, and his mind dwelt on the potentialities of the interview as he lingered over his frugal meal. He had just poured out his second cup, when the telephone buzzer behind him jarred.

"A call from Liverpool, sir," said the man in the private exchange. "Mr. Blake wants you. Shall I put him through?"

A few minutes elapsed before Foyle heard the voice of the man who had been outwitted by the Princess Petrovska. "Is that Mr. Foyle? This is Blake speaking. We've got on the track of the lady again. She's been staying at a boarding-house pretending she was a member of a theatrical company. A local man spotted her and came back to fetch me to make certain of her identity. But she must have got wind of it somehow, for she's hired a motor and slipped off. We're after her now. She's only got half an hours start, and we've wired to have the main roads watched. I expect we'll have her in an hour or two."

The superintendent coughed. "Get along then, Blake. And don't smoke when you're on the job this time. Good-bye."

He replaced the receiver and returned to his neglected cup of tea. Things were evidently stirring. Was it altogether chance, he wondered, that Petrovska had chosen the day to make a move? Strange coincidences did happen at times, yet there was a possibility that her movements were correlated to those of Grell. Had the two managed to communicate? Well, at any rate he could rely on Blake and his assistants to find out whether she had received letters or messages. The matter was out of his hands, and it was not his habit to worry about affairs which he could not influence.

CHAPTER XLIV

That Heldon Foyle had come so closely on the heels of Grell's message was something of a shock to Eileen. She had not supposed that the detectives would be so quickly again on the trail. Her heart beat a little quicker, but her face gave no sign as she drew off her gloves while the footman told her of the superintendent's call at six.

When she was alone she sat with her long, slender hands gripping the arms of her chair, her grey eyes reflecting the light of the fire as she stared abstractedly into its depths. That she had done her utmost to help Grell escape she did not regret; she rather triumphed in the fact. Foyle could know nothing of that — at the worst he could only suspect. Her precautions had been too complete. She was confident that she and Grell were the only two people who knew of the day's happenings. In any case, she argued to herself, it was better to see Foyle. She had come to respect his acumen, and fear he might draw an inference not too far from the truth if she denied him an interview. Besides she asked herself, what had she to fear? Grell was safely away, and she could trust not to betray herself.

At six o'clock to the minute a footman—whose wooden face gave no indication of the fact that a moment before he had confidently informed Foyle in a stage whisper, "She seemed pretty cheerful when she came in, sir—been sitting all alone since"—brought her a card. Then Foyle was ushered in — calm and unruffled as though he were merely making a social call. She returned his bow frigidly.

"I hope you will not consider my call inconvenient, Lady Eileen," he said suavely. "I considered it of importance that I should see you as soon as possible."

She crossed her knees and regarded him composedly. "I am sorry I was out when you called this morning. Had I known, I should have waited for you."

The detective admired the manner in which the girl carried off a difficult situation. She spoke quite indifferently, and yet he knew that she was entirely on her guard. He smoothed the top of his hat with his hand.

"Sometimes an appointment with one's bankers is a thing one can't put off," he said blandly.

A tiny spot of colour burned in each of her cheeks and she flashed one quick look at the detective. This was an attack in flank which she had not expected. "My bankers?" she lied instantly, "I have not been to my bankers."

"I beg your pardon," he said, his voice keyed to a curious inflection. "I was under the impression that you had — that, in fact, you changed a cheque for £200 made payable to bearer."

She tried to hide a new feeling of alarm under a smile. "Well, and if I did?" she challenged. "That is, of course, my private business, Mr. Foyle. You surely haven't come to cross-examine me on my habits of personal extravagance?"

"Partly," he countered. "Shall we be plain with one another?"

She rose and stood with one arm resting on the mantelpiece, looking down on him. "By all means let us explain. I am only a girl and I cannot altogether follow the subtleties of your work."

"We are not such dreadful people really," he smiled. "We try to do unpleasant work as little unpleasantly as possible. As you say, you are only a girl, and although perhaps uncommonly clever, you are—if you will pardon me—a little more apt to let your impulses outreach your reason. More than once I have tried to advise you as I would my own daughter. Well, now, here is some more advice—for what it is worth. Tell me exactly what you did between the time you went out this morning and the time you came in— whom you saw and where you went. Will you do that?"

The tick of a small clock on the mantelpiece was loud. Eileen contemplated the tips of her boots with interest. Then a little ripple of laughter shook her. "You are a dreadfully suspicious man. If it interests you, then, you can have it. I went to the bank, and from there took a cab to my dressmaker's, where I paid a bill and was fitted for a new gown. I went on and did some shopping at various places. Shall I write out an exact account for you?"

If it had been the detective's design to entrap her into a series of falsehoods he might easily have done so. But there was no object in pursuing that course. He met her ingenuous gaze with a little lift of his shoulders. "This is mere foolishness, Lady Eileen. I want to give you the opportunity of stating frankly what occurred from the moment you got Robert Grell's letter this morning. You know this story of the dressmaker would fall to pieces the instant we started making inquiries to verify it."

"So I'm on the defence, then?" she said abruptly. He nodded and watched closely the changing expression of her features. "I have done nothing that gives you any right to question me," she went on defiantly. "And I am not going to submit to any more questions. Good morning. Can you find your way out?"

She caught at her skirt with one hand and with her chin tilted in the air would have withdrawn haughtily from the room. She was afraid that his shrewd, persistent questioning and persuasion might end in eliciting from her more unguarded admissions. He had reached the door before her, however, and stood leaning with his back against it and his legs crossed and arms folded. She stopped sharply and he divined her intention.

"I shouldn't touch the bell if I were you," he said peremptorily. "It will be better for both of us if I say what I have got to say alone."

The decision in his tone stopped her as her hand was half-way to the bell-push. She paused irresolute, and at last her hand dropped to her side. Foyle moved to her, laid a gentle hand on her shoulder and half forced her to a seat. After all, with all her beauty and her wits she was but a wayward child. Her eyes questioned him and her lips quivered a little.

TWO INTERESTING OVERHEAD VIEWS OF THE GERMAN CAPITAL

Herewith are shown two excellent overhead views of Berlin. The one to the left is taken from the Berlin Town Hall tower and shows the view looking northeast toward the Cathedral and Unter den Linden. The royal palace is shown on the extreme left of the picture on a level with the Cathedral. In front of the palace runs the River Spree, which winds past the Cathedral and past the old museum, the building with the Ionic portico just near the bridge in the distance. The Boerse lies opposite the old museum, on the nearer bank of the river. In the immediate foreground is the General Post Office, in the courtyard of which some vans are drawn up to receive their mails. In the panel on the right is seen an overhead view of Berlin taken from a Zeppelin. In the foreground is the River Spree, spanned by the Alsen Bridge and crowded with long barges and steam barges. The Lehrte station, one of the five terminal stations of Berlin, is seen in the centre of the picture, with railway lines leading into it from the top right hand corner of the view. To the left of the station are the German Colonial Museum, a small, round building near the river, and the Exhibition Park, further away from the river. Behind the Exhibition Park may be seen the square barracks of the Uhlans of the Guard, with the parade ground immediately behind them.

His View Is That Belgians Are Like Badly Trained Children, and Governor Declares That His Task Is to Make German Character and Force Respected.

(SPECIAL DISPATCH.)

AMSTERDAM, via LONDON, April 10.

There have been few more illuminating illustrations of the German point of view in regard to others than the chosen people, as they consider themselves, than that contained in an interview which a correspondent of the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung has had with General von Bissing, Governor of Belgium. The Belgians he seems to regard as children, to train whom in the right way is the appointed mission of the invaders.

"From the very beginning that I was placed in this responsible post I have realised that my task is to see that German character, German force and German work are respected. I hoped to bring back order and calmness to Belgium. If one wants to rule a people and to make them acknowledge the authority of an undesired government one has to take into account their peculiarities.

"In my efforts to try and reach them I have found that the Belgians have both good and bad traits. One good quality is that they love their country and have a very strong patriotism and will gladly work for it, even though not with the same energy as we Germans work. They are light hearted, which astonishes us.

"They so often appear to us like badly trained children, who become obstinate if they are forbidden to do a thing they want to do, and if they are threatened with punishment for things they have not done they become rebellious. I have threatened as little as possible, and only inflicted punishment when I have thought it necessary, though I have had to take sharp measures sometimes, and here and there my hand has been felt heavily.

"I have tried with all my might to put the economic life on its legs again, and have had success, especially with agriculture. In my personal manner toward the Belgians I have never allowed myself to be led away by a feeling of revenge for acts from which our troops have had to suffer on the part of a badly governed people, although for a man who at heart and soul is a German soldier this has been difficult.

"I have always tried to keep Belgium in a state of peace and calm which shall last during the probably fairly long occupation period. We must try to work so that in future Belgium will not be so dependent on imports. With this idea, I have changed the methods of agriculture, reducing the amount of sugar beet grown in favor of corn and potatoes.

"In the neighborhood of Malines, particularly, I have given them much help to get the crop of early potatoes necessary both here and in Germany. The German government will be the last to prevent the export of Belgian products, so far as Germany has no need of them. Everything that we undertake here would be very much easier if the Belgians knew what is going to be the fate of their country. In this, also, they are like children.

"On the days that we heard cannonading from the neighborhood of Nieuport and Ypres they listened attentively, and said that their release by the Allies was close at hand. Arising out of the measures of inoculation taken there is a story going about that the Germans wanted to inject poison into the Belgian children, and, at the bidding of their parents and teachers, the children all left the schools. Some one commented on this, in fun, 'Do you think the Germans will be so stupid as to poison their future recruits?'"

General von Bissing added that many of the Belgians have behaved most sensibly.

Austrian Captive in Russia Escapes by Walking Barefoot in Snow

(SPECIAL DISPATCH.)

BERLIN, April 10.

The Prager Tagblatt prints a letter from Lieutenant Ladislaus von Janik, of the Thirteenth Austrian Hussars, who was taken prisoner by the Russians on the night of December 11 and who subsequently escaped.

"It was a very dark night," writes Lieutenant Janik, "so dark that it was impossible to see friend or foe. Toward morning our trenches were attacked suddenly by a large force of Russians. I was wounded and taken prisoner. I received very kind treatment and was taken to a house where I had the luxury of sleeping under shelter, even though it was only on the barn floor. I was hungry, also, but they were kind enough to give me a share of the little that they had to eat.

"The Russians were forced to retreat and I marched with them on the road to Tarnow. The commander, who saw my condition, was so kind and sympathetic that he had me placed in a wagon, so that I was greatly relieved. During the journey one of the Russian soldiers took my cane from me. I complained to an officer, who immediately ordered the soldier to restore my cane, at the same time giving him a couple of vigorous slaps in the face.

"I remained in Tarnow until December 17 under guard of four soldiers. While the soldiers were having tea that afternoon I managed to leave the room unobserved and made my escape. On the outskirts of the town I found shelter in the home of a Jew, who concealed me in a snug little corner of the roof until nightfall. A Polish peasant nearby supplied me with civilian clothes and I was thus enabled to continue on my journey to find my regiment. I had no shoes and marched from village to village in my bare feet. Finally I came to Brysznak, where I was again befriended by a sympathetic Jew, who gave me shelter and something to eat.

"Twice I was arrested by Russian soldiers as a spy, but I was fortunate enough to prove that I was a Galician farmer, suffering from tuberculosis, who was walking in the snow for the benefit of his health. Of course, the many hardships had left me very much emaciated, so that I really did look as if I had consumption. I passed through Jaslo and Dukla and finally reached Lasliska, but everywhere there were Russians, and it did not seem as if I would ever pass through their lines.

"So I tramped back again to Dukla and from there returned again to Jaslo. Finally I fell in with an old gentleman who was travelling to Hungary on a Russian passport, and I went with him as his valet, reaching the frontier in safety.

"I reached my regiment after another two mile walk in the snow, and was able to report important information on the situation of the Russians, so that after all my being taken a prisoner was a blessing in disguise."

ALL BELGIUM ARMED TO REPEL INVADERS, SAYS GERMAN BOOK

Major von Strantz, Describing March of Kaiser's Armies Into Little Kingdom, Declares Women and Children Fired on Them, Killing Hundreds in Many Towns—Love Letter That Saved Officer's Life.

(SPECIAL DISPATCH.)

BERLIN, April 10.

Describing the march of the German army through Belgium as a "veritable hell," Major Viktor von Strantz has published a book in which he gives in detail many incidents of a tragic nature. In its 160 closely printed pages Major von Strantz gives startling experiences of officers and soldiers on the fields of Belgium. Some of them surpass in human and dramatic interest even the wildest imagination of writers of lurid fiction.

"With satanic smiles the Belgians watched the entry of the German army into their country," says Major von Strantz. "The larger their number the greater their joy, because they were certain that every German soldier would be slain and not one return to Germany, to tell the story. The Belgian army, of course, was not very strong in numbers, but the entire civilian population was prepared to fight with that army. There was not a peasant who did not have his gun ready to use; in fact, even women and young girls had armed themselves with revolvers and pistols, not even forgetting carving knives.

Tells Pathetic Incident.

In this terrible struggle that the Belgians made against the advance of the invaders, Mayor von Strantz relates a pathetic incident which stands out strongly in his picture of pain and desolation.

"Shortly after the fall of Liege, Lieutenant Helmut von der Fluehe entered with his regiment a small Belgian village on the road to Louvain. Contrary to the experience of the Germans in other villages, they were delighted to be received in this place with such evidences of friendliness and courtesy.

"The Lieutenant was quartered for the night with a poor peasant family consisting of three persons. The father was a big, raw boned man; the woman prematurely old and bent with the heavy work of the farm and the daughter, a girl of twenty-five years, whose blue eyes almost shone black when she was aroused.

"After the forced marches and the hard campaign work, the Lieutenant was almost worn out. It was the first time since he had left Germany that he found a roof above his head. He had reached that stage of exhaustion when one no longer cares what happens, and he took no precaution for his safety, being content simply to sleep. He took off his coat and threw himself on the little bed in the upper room of the peasant's house and was quickly sound asleep.

"It was about midnight when he was awakened by a noise in the room. His hand quickly grasped his revolver, which was under his pillow. There was some one in the room, but he remained quiet until his eyes, getting accustomed to the darkness, could see the object more clearly. He heard the swish of skirts and to his amazement saw that it was the daughter of the house. He determined to watch her movements before springing from the bed and accosting her.

"The girl was searching the pockets of his uniform. She went out and returned quickly with a lantern and examined the papers she found in the Lieutenant's coat with the aid of the dim light. She found a letter, opened it slowly and noiselessly and sat down to read it. The Lieutenant saw that it was the letter which he had received from his sweetheart, which he carried as a talisman, for it contained a confession of love for him. The girl was reading this letter:—

"'Dear, Beloved Helmut:—I do not know whether these lines will reach you, but nevertheless I will send the letter, as my heart is heavy and sad. I regret so much that I allowed you to leave without telling you how I love you. How I hope and look for your safe return, if you ever do return, God only knows. Every day I read the newspapers—every line in them—hoping for some news about you and your regiment. The night before you left, when we all sat together, I realized that I love you, Helmut. You sat gazing dreamily in the glass of claret before you, and somehow I could not help thinking that the glass typified the blood that was to be shed in this terrible war. Whatever happens I am yours, and if your blood is shed for the Fatherland, I will bury in it but for I give it—the dearest possession that I have—for we German women must give even that for our cause. But when you return, if fate so will it, and you and I together can help in building up Germany's greatness as we love to see it realised, then, my dear Helmut—but words fail me in thinking of such happiness.

"'ANNE MARIE.'

"The Belgian girl read slowly, and evidently understood what she read, for every now and then her eyes shone with the emotions that stirred within her. When she finished she retained the letter in her hand and slowly walked over to the bed where the young officer lay apparently asleep. She looked down at him for a moment. Quickly the lieutenant raised himself and grasped her wrist with an iron hand.

"'What are you doing at this time of the night in my room?' he cried.

"'I wanted to see if everything was in order,' she said without trying to release herself.

Her Warning Saves Officer.

"'Ah, and for that you search the pockets of my uniform and read my letters. Why not tell the truth? You wanted to secure my sword and pistol and then murder me. That's characteristic of you Belgians.' The lieutenant had arisen from the bed and looked her fixedly in the eyes. He still held her wrist.

"'We Belgians lived in peace and happiness, and you came and took our bread and everything,' she said faintly.

"'You talk like a child,' said the young officer. 'Strange what ignorance there is amongst you.'

"The lieutenant then tried to argue with her and to explain why the Germans had to go through Belgium, telling her it was absolutely necessary, as they expected an attack from France and England."

"The girl listened to him silently, but showed that she was not convinced.

"'Better get out of here quick,' she said.

"'What do you mean?'

"'You are in danger.'

"He tried to question her further.

"'Ask me no questions. I can tell you nothing, except that you are going to die. A woman waits for you, and I know what it is to wait for some one who may never return. Get away from here before it is too late. The Germans who are now sleeping in this village are doomed and a few minutes hence overwhelmed by ... sweetheart."

His uniform, buckled on his sword and climbed through the window. He did not even wait to take his sweetheart's letter. When he reached the street he shouted a warning. The trumpeter blew an alarm, and from every house German soldiers came. Just then shooting began from every window and from behind every wall and fence and wagon. But their marksmanship was poor, and this gave the soldiers time to get into formation. Von Helmut and his men managed to reach the main street with but few casualties. He himself was wounded and the blood streamed down his face. The soldiers who had been slow in getting away were at the mercy of the villagers, and many were killed. Lieutenant von Helmut reached the outskirts of the village, and here the artillery had made a stand and began shelling the village, which soon was in flames. The peasants with their wives and children came running out of their burning houses. They were rounded up by the soldiers and many were shot.

Brave Girl's Death.—

"The next morning among the many prisoners were three persons, father, mother and daughter. Lieutenant von Helmut recognized them. They were taken before the colonel, and the charge was that they had been the worst offenders in the whole village, having shot down German soldiers until the very last. The colonel gave his orders quickly and they lined up against a wall to be shot.

"Lieutenant von Helmut approached the colonel and asked for a word with him.

"'That girl,' said the young officer, saved us. She told me of our danger and were thus enabled to get away in time.'

"'That girl,' he said, pointing to her. 'You must be mistaken; she's a savage and the worst of the lot. Just look at the look of hate on her face.'

"He called the girl.

"'Did you give this officer a warning of the plot against us during the night?' asked the Colonel.

"'I give him warning? I would not raise my hand to save a dirty Prussian.'

"The Colonel ordered her to be taken away, but the young lieutenant was not satisfied. He asked for permission to talk to the girl himself.

"'She's afraid of you, colonel. Please let me talk to her.'

"The soldiers guarding the prisoners fell back as Von Helmut approached the girl. He laid a sympathetic hand on her shoulder.

"'Won't you let me save you?' he said with much feeling.

"Like a flash she turned her head and bit him in the hand so that he cried out because of the pain.

"The colonel laughed sarcastically.

"'Ah! now you can see for yourself. Let the girl go to the devil; she deserves it. She killed four of our soldiers and seriously wounded Lieutenant Martens.'

"Helmut could do nothing further. The girl did not even look at him again as she was led away.

"As the shots rang out which sent her into eternity Von Helmut, from the excitement of the night and the loss of blood from his wounds, fell unconscious." After recoveries had been given him a soldier approached and handed him a letter.

"Just before that Belgian girl was shot she gave this letter to bring to you ... ed at the writing. It ... sweetheart."

Bravest of the Belgian Regiments Gets Recruits

Colonel Delobbe, Presenting Youths to Veterans, Tells of Exploits of Seventh Infantry, Which for Many Days Held the Yser Against the German Onslaught.

(SPECIAL DISPATCH.)

THE HAGUE, April 10.

Spring recruiting is in progress in the Belgian army, and those who have not already been under fire are responding to a man to the colors. Various regiments enjoy well deserved popularity for bravery displayed on the field of battle, but it is noticeable that the recruiting officers of the now famous Seventh regiment of infantry are busiest examining recruits. It was to be expected that this little band would be first considered by men who, entering the service, are anxious to become identified with the bravest of the brave. Although every Belgian soldier deserves a tablet in the hall of fame, the officers and men of the Seventh infantry, who for a memorable ten days successfully defended the west bank of the Yser against the German forces, thus preventing them from reaching the sea at that point, deserve the highest commendation.

Addressed by Colonel.

Last week, when the flood of recruits was at its height, the men enlisted in the Seventh regiment of infantry were addressed by Colonel A. F. M. Delobbe, gallant commander of the regiment. Colonel Delobbe first presented the recruits to his veterans and then told the recruits of the campaigning already performed by the older soldiers since the opening of the war. His speech was inspiring and disclosed interesting facts concerning the regiment that have not been generally known up to this time.

"Soldiers of the Seventh regiment," said Colonel Delobbe, "I present to you the recruits of the class of 1915. I ask you to greet them in good comradeship, with all heart, and guide their first steps that they will make toward the enemy. Called during the war, and instructed exclusively in warfare, they are animated with the best spirit, and, in particular, with the great desire to meet the enemy face to face and to fight them with great obstinacy.

Recruits Presented.

"They come to us from our beautiful provinces which are ravaged and soiled by our inexorable adversary. They have seen our beautiful and ancient cities destroyed and our homes burned. Most of them had to flee before the invasion of the barbarous hordes and they are still possessed by that terrible vision of old men, women had children as they fled from the blows and exactions of the Teutonic soldiery, drunk with blood and carnage. Look upon them as an important reinforcement, who by their youth and animation, added to their confidence in the future, will give to our lines a new and great power. With such qualities we will go to new battles, which will be, I am sure, new successes for the great good of our country.

"And you, my young soldiers, I present to you these veterans. You will find among them good and affectionate comrades, always ready to help you and give you the best advice. Let yourselves be guided by them, they will always lead you to honor and glory. Look at our dear and venerated flag! Read these words, 'St. Georges-les-Nieuport,' written upon these three colors; contemplate this cross, the cross of the brave, and let me tell you by which circumstances this high distinction was given the regiment by our beloved sovereign.

"Last October our regiment, which was massed with the whole army before Antwerp, retreated step by step before the stream of about one million Germans which flooded our territory. Our regiment which fought gloriously at Haecht, which took Aerschot, took part in the battle of Louvain, during which it fought in the left wing and twice almost reached the gates of ——. It took an active part in the defence of Antwerp and was then forced to retreat to Flanders to escape the encircling arm of the enemy.

"After being on the firing line ten days our regiment left Antwerp on the evening of October 8 and arrived the next evening at Selzaete, having covered the distance, fifty kilometres. In twenty-four hours—an event rare in history. The men slept that night upon the pavement of the little Flandarian city, without shelter, straw or covers and continued the march another twenty-five kilometres toward the west the next morning. After two days' repose before the gates of Furnes, our regiment received orders to proceed to the Yser, as the Germans were marching toward the ocean and it was decided to stop them near the river.

How the Yser Was Held.

"Though knowing that our regiment had been fighting uninterruptedly for two months and a half our allies asked us to make a last effort so as to permit the arrival of the French troops who were to stop the German offensive movement. Our orders from the Allies were 'Hold the Yser for forty-eight hours.' Forty-eight hours afterward the French reinforcements had not yet arrived, and the order came for us to continue fighting and hold the Yser at all cost. Our regiment, placed in a dangerous position around the village of St. Georges-les-Nieuport, resisted so well that ten days afterward the enemy, in spite of superior numbers and many efforts, remained on the other side of the river. One must have lived through those days of St. Georges-les-Nieuport to understand the heroic conduct of these soldiers.

The Enemy Astonished.

"Crouched in bad trenches during six consecutive days and nights, they resisted the furious attacks of the Germans; in spite of the rain of shrapnel and those terrible bombs thrown by their Minenwurfer. The repeated assaults of the enemy, which had begun on October 13, were without results on October 22—so much so, in fact, that the commander of the Fifth regiment German infantry which was attacking us, wrote in his order of the day, 'The enemy still occupies the left bank of the Yser.'

"Do not these words testify to the heroic resistance of our regiment? The enemy itself was astonished at the resistance, and the same day that the German general wrote those words our King rewarded the gallant conduct of these veterans by bestowing on the regiment the Cross of the Order of Leopold. There, young soldiers, is an episode which marks the past of your veteran comrades. United to them, the future belongs to you. Our flag, emblem of our country, was always our watchword, but it is doubly so to-day because of the cross attached to it.

"In the future battles you will follow this venerated flag; this cross, like a star in the firmament, will show you the way to duty and glory. In following it and led by our King we will re-enter into the heart of the country where we will find our precious possessions, our glorious independence and our dear liberties."

A HEALTH RECIPE

Among the "Answers to Questions" column in the Toronto Star, the following is worth reproducing:

Disgruntled and Pessimistic—What Should He Do?

D.S.W.F.: It is probable that the doctor who tells you that you do not need medicine, and had better go off somewhere for a change, has correctly diagnosed your trouble as mental. Medicine will not permanently heal a pessimist, who is dissatisfied with his Creator as well as with his fellowman. A person of a complaining disposition would benefit by a change of association, as he would not talk so freely of his supposed troubles. As you are an unbeliever in what is known as "divine healing," we hesitate to make a suggestion on that subject, but would commend to your attention the subjoined remarks by a writer on metaphysical healing. An experiment along the lines indicated could hardly do you harm, even if it did not do you any good:

"Take the thought: 'God loves me and approves of what I do.' Think these words over and over continually for a few days, trying to realize that they are true, and see what the effect will be on your body and circumstances. First, you get a new exhilaration of mind, with a great desire and a sense of power to please God; then a quicker, better circulation of blood, with a sense of pleasant warmth in body, followed by better digestion, etc. Later, as the truth flows out through your being into your surroundings, everybody will begin to manifest a new love for you without your knowing why; and finally, circumstances will begin to change and fall into harmony with your desires instead of being adverse to them. . . . If you turn your thoughts away from the external toward the spiritual, and let them dwell on the good in yourself and others, all the apparent evil will first drop out of your thoughts and then out of your life. Paul understood this when he advised the Philippians "to think on whatever things are true, honest, just, pure, lovely, and of good report."

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Carelessness: In one of the weekly bulletins of the New York Health Department there may be found some information recently given out, that will surprise and disgust many people.

I have many times called attention to the exceedingly filthy manner in which bakers' bread is handled. The delivery boy or man handling the unwrapped loaves with his bare hands, sometimes taking many loaves and piling them up on his arm until they reach his face, where he holds them with his chin, then with another loaf in the other hand he goes from the delivery waggon to the restaurant or grocery store. Then, without gloves, he handles the lines, and, after whipping his hands on the dirty white coat or overalls, goes on to the next store or customer.

The report of my investigations of the health department showed that where the bread was made and handled by machinery, and then wrapped before it left the bakery, but little, if any, contamination was to be found. In fact the findings of the departmen of agriculure showed only 7 per cent. of bread handled in that way showed the horrible colon-bacillus while in the bread that was made and wrapped wholly by machinery, there was no colon-bacillus whatever.

Now comes the thoroughly disgusting part. In samples of unwrapped bread that had been handled by clerks, dishwashers, waiters, cooks and drivers it was found that 66 per cent. were contaminated with the horrible colon-bacillus, a germ that can come from only one source, the fecal discharges from human beings. In some of these experiments the covers were removed from bread that had been wrapped by machinery and known to be clean and free from any contamination. It was passed through the hands of those who usually handled it, clerks, dishwashers and stablemen and again examined and the colon-bacillus was found over every one of them.

Bread was not the [illegible] of food examined. You have [illegible] seen all kinds of clean [illegible] vegetables and fruits, just as they came from the garden and unless they had been lying on the ground where chickens are allowed, you know they were clean and sanitary. You do not hesitate to pick an apple or plum or other fruit from the trees and eat it if your hands are clean, but after these fruits and vegetables have been handled by the farmer, picked over by a few customers, been exposed to the dust of the street, crawled over by flies and then handled by the clerks and deliverymen nearly every sample will show disease producing bacilli.

If the germs themselves were all, there would be no danger. They are, when freed from the toxins in which they flourish, harmless, but if your physical condition is not perfect then you have within you the suitable soil in which they grow and multiply, and presently, without in the least knowing where the infection comes from you are stricken with typhoid or some other disease and you must pay for the carelessness of other people.

I would not have you afraid to eat of various wholesome foods, but you should insist on strict cleanliness, and especially in the handling of bakery goods and other prepared foods, then see that all fruits and vegetables are thoroughly washed before they are served upon your table to be eaten in the raw state.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill. Send full name and address with four cents postage.

SPLITS FIFTY-FIFTY WITH HIS WIFE

"When I was a youngster," began the young married man, "I once heard a great lawyer say to my father:

"'Women are wonderful! I have been married 30 years and still I don't understand how my wife is able to accomplish all she does and keep her serenity. I have worked pretty hard myself, but if, in addition to my hard work, I had to keep up our social status in the community, and to bear children and raise them, I think I would have proved a brilliant failure if I had retained my mind at all.

"I have often thought of what that lawyer said," continued the young married man, "but never really understood it until some time after I was married. I've been a benedict now for three years and I'm beginning to feel just like that lawyer felt.

"My wife has been through some pretty hard times with me," he reminisced. "I'm prosperous now to what I was the first year of our marriage—and my weekly stipend still ought to be speeled 'weakly.' I really don't make enough to give a very good time to a wife and baby in these days of high prices, though we're plenty thankful for what we have.

"We've seen the days, though when we literally starved together. When I lost my job in Illinois and got one in this city I had just enough money to cover car fare to this town.

"When we got here the sum total of our cash on hand was 30 cents, and I couldn't get another cent till pay day on my new job. We got a furnished room that that 30 cents bought our food—peanuts. Peanuts may be nourishing—I have no doubt of it. But I never want to look a peanut in the fact again. My wife shared with me and never whimpered. That's the stuff she's made of. And before she was married she had an indulgent dad who gave her everything her little heart desired!

"We've tried all sorts of financial arrangements. At first I gave her my pay envelope and she attended to all expenditures. But finally she said that didn't seem just right, somehow. She thought I ought to have more to say about it.

"So then, I took to handling it all myself. But that didn't seem to work out satisfactorily.

"There were so many things I didn't seem to work out satisfactorily. There were so many things I didn't understand. Then we tried the allowance system, but something new was always starting up that the allowance didn't cover.

"Last night we had another business session, trying to reach some amicable division of our income. We couldn't seem to agree.

"'Why all this fussing, anyway?' I finally wanted to know. 'You know I am going to support you all right and that you'll get just about what you want, anyway. It's my duty.' And I emphasized the word 'duty.'

"'Your duty—your duty!' shot back my wife. 'You make me absolutely sick, talking about your duty. I want you to know in the future that you have no duty around here. When it gets that far you can get out. You came to me and begged for the privilege of buying my hats, my clothes, my shoes and taking care of me, and I gave it to you. Now you can go to blazes with your duty!'

"And it struck me just about then" remarked the young married man, with a wry smile, "that she was pretty near right. At any rate, I have now accepted the privilege of splitting my pay 50-50."

THE CHILD THAT EATS PROPERLY HAS A START

One fact which has become ever clearer as medical knowledge has advanced concerns the nutrition of the child.

Faulty feeding in infancy and early childhood may lead to such impoverishment of the tissues and such stunting of growth that the ill effects can never be recovered from in later life.

A considerable proportion of the intellectual and moral inferiorities among our people is fairly attributable to imperfect nutrition at this early age. Fortuntely the public is now being so thoroughly educated to the importance of breast feeding for infants and of liberal and suitable diet during the early years of life, by family physicians and others on the care and feeding of children that it is not necessary to dwell at length upon the subject.

Plenty of good, simple food, including milk, meat, vegetables and fruit, with avoidance of condiments, coffee, tea and alcohol is approved by all authorities.

Many parents make the mistake of allowing the caprice of the child to influence its diet.

We now know the foods that are suitable for children and knowing these, the children should be provided with them in suitable amounts and should be required to eat of them, largely independent of choice.

The child that learns to eat and digest all wholesome foods and who is not permitted to cultivate little food antipathies makes a good start and avoids one of the worst pit-falls of life with which medicinal men are very familiar, namely a finical anxiety concerning the effects of various foods, all too likely to develop into nervous state.

TO CLEANSE THE CARPET SWEEPER

When a carpet sweeper gets full, remove all waste collected, take out the brush and carefully pick out all lint, etc. Then apply kerosene on a woollen cloth and rub the ends of the bristles thoroughly with the cloth. It prevents dust rising when the sweeper is used, and brightens the carpet. A drop of machine oil in the holes where the ends of the brush revolve will do as much as any one thing to preserve your sweeper.

Stand 60 Years of Experience and Progress

THIRTEEN years before Confederation John Redpath turned out "Ye Olde Sugar Loafe"—the first sugar refined in Canada.

In 1880, thirty-five years ago, the Redpath Refinery brought out Canada's first Granulated Sugar, known ever since as the best.

Again in 1913, the Redpath Refinery introduced the third great improvement in Canada's sugar supply—the Redpath 2 and 5-lb. Cartons.

DURING all these years of leadership, the Redpath aim has been QUALITY—the quality on which the national preference for Redpath Sugar now rests so solidly.

Such quality is the result, not of modern machinery alone, but of experience, modern methods, and a fixed determination to produce nothing unworthy of the name Redpath—to maintain in every pound of our product the reputation of "Canada's Standard Sugar". 120

Orchard and Garden Notes

Plan the garden now.

Rhubarb may be started in the cellar and will soon give good stalks for sauce.

Plan to plant some of the herbs, such as dill, anise and caraway, this spring.

Hotbed stock and soil should be made ready. In many regions hotbeds may be started next month.

Plant a few hardy gaillardia. No plant is more showy or can be used to better advantage for its cut flowers.

Bird houses may be made and put in convenient trees. The birds seem to prefer boxes that have weathered a little.

The old-fashioned bleeding-heart makes a good plant at a corner of the shrubbery and as it is a perennial will return each year.

See that the shrubbery or perennial border does not become bare during the early thaws. It is a good plan to scatter straw or even manure over it.

Do not set seed-flats directly on manure in a hotbed. There should be three or four inches of soil to absorb the odor and steam from the manure.

Send for seed catalogues and make up the seed-list early. Try a few novelties, but make the main garden of standard sorts. Order seed early.

Summer cypress (Kochia) makes a good annual hedge. It grows about two feet high, is quite dense, and changes from a light green to crimson in autumn. Sow the seeds indoors in April. The plants will re-seed year after year.

One of the quickest-growing dwarf annuals is sweet alyssum. Sow the seeds as soon as the ground can be worked in spring and you will be rewarded with an abundance of snowy-white, sweet-scented flowers.

The clover-head flowers of rhodanthe attracted much attention in the garden last year. It is an everlasting, coming in mixed colours, and may be lifted and used as a pot plant in autumn.

Now is a good time to take down the advertising placards that adorn the fence, trees and buildings. No advertising signs should be carried on farm property except those advertising the farm products. These are better placed on a bulletin board convenient to the entrance.

HOMESICK WARRIORS

Scientists Recognize as Real Malady the Yearning For Native Land

Homesickness, or nostalgia, as the doctors term it, has long been recognised as a military disease, which is especially liable to attack recruits and even seasoned soldiers, if they serve for long priods in foreign climes. A French scientist has published a book on the malady. He says, "The symptoms of homesickness are great mental dejection, loss of appetite, indifference to what is going on around, and irregular action of the digestive organs."

The bad effects of homesickness in an army were first noted among Swiss soldiers. The men were forbidden to sing or listen to their native melodies for fear of rousing in them an overpowering longing for their mountain homes. A doctor writing at that period cited many instances of the serious results of sentimental music on soldiers campaigning far from their own shores.

An English physician recently stated that homesickness is a prevalent disease amongst prisoners of war, who display such symptoms as hysterical weeping, fever, and a rapid thinning of the face.

SWITZERLAND'S SOLDIERS

Every Male Trained From Boyhood For Military Service

The statement made by a German officer that it was only by a majority of two votes that the General Staff decided to cross the Belgian frontier rather than invade Switzerland calls attention to the magnificent fighting force which Switzerland is able to place in the field. The Kaiser and his Huns, in fact, would have found Switzerland a hard nut to crack; for, apart from the mountainous condition of the country, which would make the task of the invader particularly arduous, every man and boy in Switzerland is a soldier, and, barring cripples and imbeciles, is trained to defend his country. Only physical disability excuses a man from military service and those excused or rejected are made to pay certain taxes towards the upkeep of the army.

Every male really begins his military training when he is ten years of age, when for two years, as part of his school work, he is put through rigid physical training which includes scientific drills. In his thirteenth year he becomes a cadet, and when he is fourteen he receives his rifle and instructions in how to use it.

During the next three years he has an hour of military drill every day, and two hours' rifle practice a week, and after his seventeenth birthday joins a military unit in his town or canton, and receives training under the direction of active and reserve officers of his community. This means about five hours a week given to military drill.

Actual service commences at the age of twenty, and from then until he is forty-eight every man is systematically trained and held in readiness for war.

Altogether Switzerland within three days can mobilize 250,000 trained and thoroughly equipped soldiers. Within another seven days she can raise her first line of 300,000, and still have in reserve 150,000 soldiers past the first service age, and 200,000 cadets in training.

ARE HOWITZERS FAILURES?

Ponderous Weapons Too Heavy For Field Use—Soon Wear Out

Are the much-vaunted German howitzers, like the Zeppelins, huge failures? Experts are inclined to answer this question in the affirmative, for little has been heard of the doings of these mighty engines of death since the early days of the war, when they caused a sensation by crushing like eggshells the steel forts at Liege and Namur. It is confidently believed in military circles that the Germans have discovered that their 100-ton howitzers are altogether too ponderous to be of use in ordinary field warfare. They have to be dragged so slowly across country that they cannot keep pace with an army, and should their mechanism go wrong they cannot be repaired in the field, but have to be trundled back to the factory at Essen. After firing a dozen of its 5-foot shells the howitzer practically destroys the rifling in the barrel, and the weapon has to be returned to the repair shop for an overhaul. A German big gun is a mass of mechanism, and possesses such apparatus as hydraulic brakes to lock the wheels before firing takes place, great pistons to elevate the stumpy barrel, hydraulic jacks to support the gun when in action, and all manner of electrical contrivances for igniting the bursting charge when the gun crew have retired to a spot 50 feet away to be safe from the atmospheric disturbance created by the discharge of the weapon. It is not surprising that some of this delicate machinery smashes nearly every time the howitzer sends its 1,650-pound shell on its nine miles journey through space.

Over rough country it is almost impossible for a howitzer to travel at any speed, and the only way it can be quickly transported is by railroad. The gun itself weighs 100 tons, and it is accompanied by an armored ammunition wagon, a sleeping car for the gun crew, and a crane for hoisting shells, which brings the total weight of the equipment up to 400 tons. It is obvious that few bridges would prove sufficiently strong to allow such weighty vehicles to be trundled across them, and on a soft road the massive howitzer is in as sorry a plight as a traction engine would be in a quagmire.

CARDINAL FACTS

This is Canada's war.

What will the harvest be?

Increase of knowledge means increase of production.

The first essential for the highest yield is good seed.

Not only grain growers, but breeders and all producers are making history at this juncture.

All grain intended for seed should be cleaned and graded, in order to retain only the strong kernels.

Farmers who have separate houses for their laborers have no difficulty in securing help.

If labor is scarce now, it will not be more plentiful in another year, so it is wise to encourage present help.

Austria has decreed that every acre must be utilised for production. Wasting land is the worst form of extravagance.

Canada is many times larger in area than Belgium, but in population there is not a great deal of difference, that is, considering Belgium before the war. Britain is the protector of small states. The greater the area and variety of area, the more protection is needed when emergency arises.

SPEED IN HIGH ALTITUDES

An Aeronautical Theory That is Borne Out by the Migrations of Birds.

The statement that a flying machine with a normal speed of 40 miles an hour would travel at a height of 5 miles at 160 miles an hour—made by Dr. Graham Bell, is supported by an ornithologist. Doctor Bell's view, which depended on a prolonged course of scientific inquiries, was that the speed of an aeroplane increased in more or less definite ratio as the height from the earth increased. The thinner the air the faster the aircraft.

That birds use this quality of the air now seems probable. Some of the migrants arriving in England have been observed to dive down from an incalculable height, as has often been observed in Heligoland. That the weak flyers should cross the North Sea in one dash has seemed an insoluble mystery, because it has been stated the theory that they are endowed at that moment with a sudden access of power. May it not be that then only they find themselves in the thinner higher air? Swifts, which are the most rapid flyers of all, for the most part fly higher than other birds.

Cranes have been seen to cross the sun's disk at an estimated height of 5½ miles, and others have passed over clear the highest mountain ranges. The verdict of one of the best students of migration is that "without ascending to a considerable altitude the migration of many birds would be simply impossible." That very poor flyer, the corn-crake, has traveled the seemingly impossible distance of 5,000 miles.

It is true that many birds have been observed to fly low during migration. Swallows especially have been seen migrating at a low elevation, and even to cover 100 miles an hour.—London Mail.

Tommy's Good Heart

It is quite a common sight to see a homeless little child marching along beside its mother, munching a large slice of bread-and-jam, while the mother carries a tin of bully beef, given to her by Tommy Atkins, and a letter written by Corporal Giles, R.A.M.C., to his mother. I have known numbers of men—myself included—who have gone without food for a day, or days, on purpose to cheer some homeless refugee. The people everywhere adore the British Tommy. Corporal Giles was decorated with the Distinguished Service Medal by King George personally.

London's Alien Enemies

When the war broke out, and the registration of aliens was completed, there were no fewer than 4,966 alien enemies employed in the hotels of London.

The entire white population of the British Empire is less than the population of the German Empire, and rather larger than that of Japan.

MANY CASES OF RHEUMATISM NOW

Says We Must Keep Feet Dry, Avoid Exposure and Eat Less Meat

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water, and above all, take a teaspoonful of salts occasionally to keep down uric acid.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, called uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

Origin of Field Guns

Of all the world's great battles Crecy possesses a unique interest. The English used only three pieces of field ordnance. They were small cannon made of trees bored, and bound with iron hoops, and the missiles were of stone, scarcely larger than cricket balls. Doubtless this rude artillery made far more noise than it effected damage. It was the longbow and the broadsword that won the battle, but nevertheless gunpowder was henceforth to play an ever-increasing part in the strife of nations.

Use the Enemy's Vessels

Captured German ships are put to a good use by the British Government. They are run as coasting traders, and each bears a number along with the broad arrow—the Government's stamp.

Some of the French landed proprietors have arranged for the permanent care of the English graves on their estates.

Secreting Art Treasures

During the war of 1870, when the German army drew near the French capital, one of the first measures the Parisians took was to place the art treasures of the Louvre in safety, as they did in the present war. The paintings of Raphael, Titian, Paolo Veronese, Rembrandt and Rubens were carefully packed and shipped to Brest. There they could, if necessary, have been put on shipboard and taken from the country.

It was not so easy to save the pieces of marble statuary, for their weight and fragility made them difficult to handle; but the French determined that the famous Venus of Milo, at least, should not fall into the hands of the Prussians. So they took her down from her pedestal and laid her in a casket carefully padded and wrapped. At night the casket was taken out through a secret door and hidden securely in the cellar of the police prefecture, at the end of a secret passage.

They walled in the casket and cleverly gave the wall an appearance of great age and dilapidation. In front of this wall they laid a number of valuable public documents, so that if they should happen to be found their importance would lead the discoverers to think there was nothing else hidden there.

Curved plate glass used in a New York store window to prevent reflection has been found to so polarize the light that enters it that the colour and texture of fabrics in the window are emphasized.

How to Care for Your Complexion

There is no truer saying than that "beauty is only skin deep." Good features lose their charm under a sallow or blotchy skin and poor features are glorified by a beautiful complexion.

It can be had for the asking at the Nyal Agency Drug Store and you should call or telephone for it. Among other things it points out is that diet, sleep, ventilation, and a thousand other things we cannot escape are continually warring against our complexions. Get a 25c or 50c jar of Nyal's Face Cream and convince yourself of its cleansing and refreshing and beautifying qualities. It is greaseless, oxygenated and quickly absorbed by the skin, leaves no shine, and gives a pleasant, smooth, cool sensation, quickly removing the irritation produced by wind and weather. 1192

ITCHING ECZEMA SPREAD OVER WRIST

Would Burn. Suffered Great Pain. Grandchild Also Afflicted. Used Cuticura. Now Perfectly Well.

Parliament, N. S.—"I had eczema on my right wrist for over a year. It broke out like a rash. It would itch and burn and I had to scratch. The skin was broken and the blood came through. Sometimes it spread all over my hands and I suffered great pain when I put them in water. I began to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they gave me quick relief, healing my wrist and hand in a few months.

"My grandchild was also afflicted with that trouble. He had it on his head, face and hands. We began to treat him with Cuticura Soap and Ointment and he began to improve. So we continued the treatment for a few months and he is perfectly well." (Signed) Mrs. Joseph Fougere, May 26, '14.

Von Der Tann To Aid.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., April 7.—Reports that the German battleship Von Der Tann was on her way to America to assist the Prinz Eitel were revived yesterday, but this time it was rumored that the battleship was accompanied by two submarines. Smoke poured from both stacks of the Prinz Eitel yesterday, showing that all her fires were going, but there was no other indication that the ship was preparing for a dash to sea.

Germans Repulsed In Congo.

HAVRE, April 7. — Fresh attacks by German forces against the Belgian Congo have been repulsed, according to a report made by the deputy governor-general of Katanga to the Belgian Minister for the Colonies. An assault made on Mount Nebu, north of Lake Kivu, was driven back with heavy losses to the Germans, who were pursued into their own territory (German East Africa).

The Feeding of Countess Carrie Mercedes

And Some General Notes on Feeding by Mr. Samuel Lemon, Lynden, Ont.

COUNTESS Carrie Mercedes calved on January 21st, 1913. On the 22nd she was taken down with milk fever, and was given the oxygen gas treatment. She recovered nicely, and we started her on her yearly work on the 23rd. I believe that if a cow has milk fever and is taken in time and comes around all right, that she will do better work afterwards than she ever did before. We worked Carrie up gradually until she was getting 20 pounds of meal a day; by that time she was milking from 70 to 75 pounds a day. The meal was composed of three pounds oil cake, seven pounds bran, and 10 pounds chop, the chop being four parts oats and one part barley. When she had been running six or seven weeks, we started feeding gluten feed, changing the gluten for the chop, reducing the chop as we added on gluten, until she was getting five pounds of gluten a day. By that time she was averaging three pounds of milk more a day. The gluten was worth about the same price as the chop. She was fed 40 to 45 pounds of ensilage a day and 50 pounds of feeding sugar beets and what hay she would clean up nicely.

She was fed in this manner until she went to grass. Then she received mostly rolled oats and bran. She did not seem to care for the other feeds then. She got about 15 pounds of meal a day, that being all she would clean up nicely. If she would eat any hay we gave it to her until we had green corn big enough to cut, when she was given an armful twice a day. As soon as we fill the silos we start feeding it.

She was in better condition when she finished than she was when she started. She was milked three times a day for the full year. If we are milking three times a day we feed the calves three times, starting them with 14 or 16 pounds a day, and when they are one month old they get about 18 pounds a day. At eight weeks we start to give skim milk, and in two weeks more they are getting all skim milk, being fed only twice a day. We never give any gruel of any kind in the milk.

When they are three or four weeks old we start to give them a handful of meal, bran and rolled oats and a little oil cake; also a handful of ensilage and some clover hay or alfalfa as soon as they will eat it. We sell cream, so have lots of skim milk for the calves, and give it to them until they are one and one-half years old, if they will take it. Our heifers are nearly as large as cows when they are two years old, and we have them freshen when they are two years to two years and three months old. We always try to milk them a full year the first year.

GIVE HER EQUAL PAY.

If a lassie wants the ballot
To help run the town.
And a lassie get the ballot,
Need a lassie frown?

Many a laddie has the ballot,
Not so bright as I.
And many a laddie votes his ballot
Overcome with rye.

If a lassie works for wages,
Toiling all the day,
And her work the laddies' equals
Give her equal pay.

If a body pays the taxes,
Surely you'll agree,
That a body earns the franchise,

SPRING REMINDERS OF RHEUMATISM

Raw, Damp Weather Starts the Pain, But the Trouble Lies in the Blood

Spring weather is bad for rheumatic sufferers. The changes from mild to cold, the raw, damp winds start the aches and twinges, or in the more extreme cases, the tortures of the trouble going. But it must be borne in mind that it is not the weather that causes rheumatism. The trouble is rooted in the blood—the changeable weather merely starts the pains. The only way to reach the trouble and to cure it is through the blood. The poisonous rheumatic acids must be driven out. Liniments and rubbing may give temporary relief, but cannot possibly cure the trouble. The sufferer is only wasting time and money with this kind of treatment and all the time the trouble is becoming more deeply rooted—harder to cure. There is just one speedy cure for rheumatism—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They act directly on the impure, acid-tainted blood. They purify and strengthen it and thus root out the cause of the rheumatism. Here is strong proof of the above statements. Mr. J. Routley, Sydney, Man., says: "It was so badly crippled with rheumatism in my hips and knees that I could hardly go about. I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which I took steadily for a couple of months, by which time all traces of the trouble had disappeared. I can most strongly recommend the Pills to all rheumatic sufferers."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Beauty In Hollyhocks

When sending her contribution to our Special Horticultural Number, "Housecleaning in the Garden," our good friend, Miss Alice A. Ferguson, York Co., Ont., also enclosed the photos reproduced herewith and a few ideas on how to beautify the home surroundings by using hollyhocks. Here are her suggestions:

Have you a neglected corner which is an eyesore, or an old fence you wish to hide? Try growing hollyhocks. When we came to our farm, there was a most disreputable corner between the pump and the old garden fence. There was the remains of an old bob sleigh, the branches of a defunct shade tree, and burdocks growing through the mass.

I cleaned that corner, and planted dahlias. The soil was good, and the bloom was abundant. In the autumn I planted a bed of bulbs, but the pigs found it a good place to root, and the hens in summer found it an excellent dust bath. So I tried hollyhocks, sowing the seed generously. They required little attention, only digging out those burdocks, and keeping down the weeds, and the bloom of the second year was reward for all the labor expended. After that they sowed their seed, and multiplied. Each year there are young seedlings and mature plants. The blooms are of varying shades, and the bees and wind have mixed them, so that the variety is wonderful. In hollyhock season that corner is a thing of beauty, and a joy.

GERMAN FLEET'S REFUGE

All of Kaiser's Warships Can be Accommodated in Kiel Canal

Kiel Canal is sixty-one miles long from its entrance at Brunsbüttel on the North Sea to its exit at Kiel Bay, on the Baltic.

The German people are very proud of their canal, and there was great rejoicing when it was opened in 1895 by the present Emperor, and named by him the Kaiser Wilhelm Canal in memory of his grandfather.

Although the canal was principally intended for military purposes, the needs of merchant vessels were not forgotten. The passage was made wide enough and deep enough to allow two of the largest liners of the time to pass each other with ease and safety, and the voyage to Russian ports has been shortened considerably by the use of the canal.

There is accommodation in the immense harbors within the canal for the whole German fleet, and there are also naval dockyards and floating docks, by means of which repairs can be executed with great despatch.

Lloyd George's Speeches

It has been said of Mr. Lloyd George that he speaks staccato. This to a great extent is true. Examine any of his speechs, and you will find in them many sentences of less than a dozen words. "Treaties are the currency of international statesmanship." "Poor old mailed fist. Its knuckles are getting a little bruised." "Courage in defeat, moderation in victory, in all things faith." Such are the apt phrases with which Mr. Lloyd George punctuates his speeches.

Was Troubled With Choking Spells and Shortness of Breath.

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, and dizziness and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

Many men and women drag along with weary step, and become worn out and haggard, when otherwise they could be strong and healthy if they would only pay some attention to the first signs of heart or nerve trouble. On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be given a fair trial and you will find that they will soon correct both these organs.

Mr. James Leard, Tryon, P.E.I., writes: "Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had choking spells, and was troubled with weakness of the heart and shortness of breath. I tried three doctors but they all failed. A neighbor recommended me to try your pills, so I get a box and they helped me so much I have taken six boxes. I highly recommend them to all who are troubled with their heart and nerves. I was not able to do any work for over two years; now I can do quite a bit."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

She Admired Bravery

By F. A. MITCHEL

It was in the late autumn. Edith and I were walking in the woods kicking up the dead leaves, for there were only a few left on the trees. We were both young, I twenty-two, Edith eighteen. I was sweet on Edith, and when a man of that age is sweet on a girl the first idea that enters his head is that she can only love a heroic personage who combines every manly attributes. When a man of forty gets sweet on a woman he fears that she won't consider that he has money enough to make it worth her while to marry him.

While Edith and I were walking along to the pleasant sound of the kicked leaves I was thinking about how many virtues I must possess to win her. It was in wartime, and I naturally supposed that military glory would count for a good deal.

"We're getting quite a number of instances of bravery from this war in Europe," I remarked.

"Yes," she replied, "they're splendid. Just think of a young earl not yet thirty years old, with the life of a nobleman before him, giving his life for his country."

"Would you like to be the widow of such a man?"

"I would grieve for him, but I would glory in having had such a husband."

This was not encouraging for me, a man of peace. It was some time before I tried to find out any more of those traits I did not possess, the absence of which would induce Edith to turn me down.

"I read an account some time ago," I said, "of a Belgian soldier who was placed in front of a company of Germans who were attacking his countrymen. Seeing him, the Belgians lowered their rifles. 'Fire!' he cried. 'For heaven's sake, fire!' A volley swept the Belgian and the Germans away together."

"What a noble sacrifice!" exclaimed Edith fervently.

"Do you suppose," I said, "that if you had been that Belgian's wife and a witness of the scene and his countrymen had looked to you to approve his order to fire you could have made the sacrifice yourself?"

This was a poser. Edith made no reply for quite awhile, then she said that she would have preferred to compromise by having them fire on her. I was not disposed to let her out in this way and persisted in having a direct answer, whereupon she said that she was afraid the test would be too much for her. She might be able to make the sacrifice and she might not. Of one thing she was certain. Her heart would be buried with that noble Belgian.

It was apparent to me that to win Edith I must do something heroic.

"Do you know," I said, "I have concluded that this war is a struggle between reaction and progress. I consider it the duty of America to join in it on the side of progress."

"So do I," was the prompt reply.

"What is true of a nation is true of one of its individual citizens."

"What do you mean?"

"That it is my duty to fight for the world's progress. I'm going abroad to enlist."

Edith looked grave.

"Don't you think it my duty?"

"No; I don't."

"Why not? Haven't you agreed with me that it is our duty as a nation to fight on the side of progress, and what is the duty of a nation is the duty of its individual citizens?"

"Yes; I suppose so. But I think it would be very foolish for you to go all the way over there to—to get your self shot."

I looked down sidewise at Edith. The idea of my making myself food for powder evidently troubled her.

"I sail next week."

There was no comment on this for awhile. Presently Edith asked me in a faltering voice why I had said nothing of this before. I was some time framing my answer. When it came I spoke in a choked voice:

"Because I dread a parting."

"With whom?" She kept her eyes bent on the ground.

"You," I faltered.

I went on to tell her that I loved her, and she confessed that my love was returned.

"How hard for us to part," I said, "on the eve of our betrothal!"

"We will not part," she said firmly.

"My duty calls."

"What duty?"

"To progress, civilization, the cause of freedom."

"Let it call."

"I might have an opportunity to die one of those noble deaths we have been talking about."

"You'll do no such thing. You'll stay at home."

"But think how proud you will be of your soldier lover."

"I don't want a soldier lover."

"Must I go unsupported by the knowledge that you are willing to sacrifice"—

"You'll not go at all."

We were sitting on a low horizontal limb of a tree. Edith threw her arms around me to hold me from going to fight for an idea which I had no idea of fighting for. I gave in at last and consented to remain at home.

After we were married one night we heard burglars below. My wife in order to prevent my going down to attack them locked the door and threw the key out from the window.

Swiss Glaciers.

As the Matterhorn is the grandest object to be seen in Switzerland, so also are the glaciers above Zermatt the most magnificent. In the Oberland and at Chamonix the glaciers are frozen rivers and cataracts. From the Gorner Grat the glaciers are vast seas of ice, with ledges of rocky beach, over which the frozen breakers are beating. The Aletsch and the Rhone glaciers are grand frozen torrents of immense volume, and the ice fields of the Mont Blanc range are of vast extent, but it is from the Gorner Grat, where the spectator is surrounded by frozen seas, out of which the snow peaks rise, like islands, that the imagination is overpowered by stupendous glacial effects.

Here are some of the many features applying exclusively to Dunlop Traction Tread Bicycle tires—the only tire with a built-into tread—the V-shaped top of the tire is made by iron moulds after the tire proper is completed. That means a skid-resisting surface which cannot tear off, as so often happens with ordinary-made bicycle tires.

The only bicycle tire that is practically puncture-proof. Your wheel is getting revolutions on a basis of "V's" which contain no air. Thus the air-containing portion of this tire is kept clear of the ground.

Three Boxes Cured His Rheumatism.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

Newbury, Ont. April 20th.

"My father has been troubled with Rheumatism for a number of years, having tried two doctors and getting no relief. He was finally advised by a friend to try Gin Pills. ## THIN PEOPLE CAN INCREASE WEIGHT

This men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should try eating a little Sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or feel or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman can easily add from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple direction. And best of all, the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it turns the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten, into rich, ripe fat producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepares it in an easily assimilated form which the blood can readily accept. All this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat-producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive.

Senate Threw It Out.

BE KIND TODAY.

Less spent on the dead and more spent on the living would bring about many happy results. Hearts are breaking, loved ones walk and tears flow all because of the withholding of kind words unspoken and letters never sent. Behold the sad mistakes of others, their remorse, and profit by the same before it is too late. Today, now, speak the loving word, send the tender message, write the letter you put off day by day, and don't wait until you forget it or until bitter memories haunt you.

WAR TAX GETS ASSENT.

Provisions Will Come Into Effect on Thursday, April 15th.

OTTAWA, April 9.—The special war revenue act received the royal assent yesterday and is now the law of the land. Its provisions, by the terms of the act, come into force on Thursday, April 15, so that on and after that date a war tax postage stamp of one cent or a one cent postage stamp in lieu thereof will have to be affixed on all letters and postcards before mailing. The extra cent will not, however, have to be placed on circulars.

If the stamp is not affixed to a letter or postcard the only penalty is that the letter or card goes to the dead letter office.

While special inland revenue stamps with the words "War Tax" upon them have been prepared, and will be found on sale with inland revenue offices and with postmasters in many centres, postage stamps will serve the purpose, if the war stamps are not readily available.

WORKMEN NOT INSULTED.

Lloyd George Says He Only Charged Minority With Drunkenness.

LONDON, April 9.—David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, replied yesterday to a charge made by James Keir Hardie at the meeting of the Independent Labor Party at Norwich, that the Chancellor had maligned and insulted workmen, and that as a result word had gone around the world that "the working classes were a set of drunken wasters."

The Chancellor declared that he particularly said it was a minority of the men against whom the charge of excessive drinking was made and repeats the statement that "the drinking habits of the minority have the effect of seriously diminishing the output of war materials at a time when the success of the allies depends entirely upon that material being largely increased."

INFLUENCING SEX OF CALVES

"Bull" luck is a variety of luck practically every breeder of pure bred cattle wishes to avoid; hence the widespread interest in every theory of sex control. Writing in a recent issue of the New England Homestead, Dr. Raymond Pearl, of the Maine Experiment Station, tells of some investigations into sex control in his state as follows:

"One of the primary purposes for which the cooperative cattle breeding record plan was undertaken in Maine was to get comprehensive statistics to show whether any definite effect on the proportion of male and female calves born could be observed when service occurred at different times in the heat period. Work at the station some years ago indicated that when service occurred very early in the heat there was likely to be born a larger proportion of heifer calves, and when service occurred very late in heat there was likely to be born a larger proportion of bull calves.

Early Service For Female Calves

"The results we have secured to date have been very gratifying. Exact records show that when service was given early in heat, there resulted 243 heifer calves, as against 160 bull calves. On the other hand, when service was late in heat, there were 52 heifer calves and 97 bull calves. When the service was in middle of heat, the difference was not so pronounced, as shown by 69 heifer calves and 79 bull calves.

"From this work it seems clear that there is a very striking difference in the result according to whether service is early or late in heat. The difference is already beyond the bounds of probability of accidental occurrence. It is proposed, however, to continue the cooperative breeding record scheme for two or three, or possibly more, years until a sufficiently large number of records have accumulated to make the conclusion beyond doubt."

In Case of Emergency

One Saturday a small boy arrived with an important air at the penny savings bank of a college settlement and withdrew two cents from his account.

Monday morning he promptly returned the money.

"So, you didn't spend your two cents?" observed the worker in charge.

"Oh, no," the lad replied, "but a fellow likes to have a little cash on hand over Sunday."

Sometimes when we are in a hurry to fill the salt or pepper shaker, we cannot find the little funnel with which to fill them. A good substitute is to cut off the corner of an envelope, then cut off the tip of the corner and proceed to fill the shaker.

"Woe To Our Country" If Prussians Win

TORONTO, April 9.— "Woe to our country if the Prussians should win," write Mme. Julia Cusin from Lausanne, expressing the attitude of the Swiss to the present conflict, in a letter to her cousin, Mr. James Cusin, of this city, received this week. The letter describes in a vivid manner Switzerland's part in the war and the interchange of prisoners between France and Germany, which the Swiss people have been successful in arranging since the beginning of the new year.

Describing the arrival of a train load of wounded Frenchmen the letter says: "Although it was in the middle of the night and although the weather was bitter, the station was thronged by all classes of our citizens, carrying parcels of clothing and food, and bottles of milk and wines. As the cars rolled in we heard them shouting 'Vive la Suisse.' From one of the cars a man said: 'We are seven in this car, but there are only seven arms among us.' Others had no arms at all or have lost their legs and their eyesight. They all are resigned to their misfortune, and at times seem almost gay, which makes us feel all the sadder."

Mlle. Cusin, telling of the prisoners who have been sent to their homes through the efforts of the French committee, states that the German people being half starved themselves are glad to get rid of numbers of these people.

"We can't understand," she writes "why those barbarians should have taken away to Germany such a multitude of old men, of women, and especially of children. A large number of young men they have not returned, but have retained them as labourers, particularly for work in the mines. These people are being continually sent through. Long trains containing 500 persons pass day and night, but whenever they come the people of Lausanne in their endless charity crowd the station as the train approaches, with comforts."

The letter describes the joy of the prisoners at hearing their own language again after spending seven months in Germany. In the case she mentions the people have been travelling for six days and have been four days without food. Some of them had pieces of "K. K." bread, which was the food given them in Germany, and which the writer describes as "a horrible mixture of corn and potato." She tells of seeing a man holding a two-year-old child in his arms which was dying from starvation, "another victim of these monsters."

Through the harbouring of refugees and the continual arrival of wounded Switzerland, the writer says, fears that the resulting contagion means months of disease and misery. She tells her cousin of letters received from German relations in Munch, Mannheim and other centres. "They all write the same tale, 'God is with us.' What can we answer?"

The letter gives a graphic insight to the wonderful generosity of the Swiss, which in addition to the instances quoted have been lavished on the Belgians, thousands of whom are still being cared for by private citizens there.

After a few applications all dandruff disappears and the hair stops coming out.

Refugees Housed In French Barges

PARIS, April 8—The "floating villages" are proving a boon for the French and Belgian refugees. Everyone knows of the enormous barges which float alongside the banks of the River Seine and other rivers in France. For some time after the outbreak of the war, six or eight thousand of these boats were idle, until the Paris journal, Le Matin, had several of them converted into hospitals. These floating hospitals are taken up the rivers as near as possible to the front.

The plan of Le Matin to utilize the barges was modified by M. Hector Lievre, a prosperous wood merchant, who conceived the idea of using them to accommodate refugees. Several thousand refugees have been provided for in this way and they live comfortably in these boats, which are moored along the banks of the Seine in Paris. Each family is allotted one or two little cabins. Food is supplied but the cost is met by an allowance of the 1 franc 25 centimes per day for each refugee from the Government.

Want English Nurses.

An appeal for nurses to go to a French hospital in the Pyrennes has been made to a number of Englishwomen here who have associated themselves for the purpose of making bandages for use in the hospitals. Ther are 500 beds in the institution, we were told, and five English women are already on the nursing staff. They were so satisfactory that the Doctor in charge of the hospital sent a woman to Paris to try and secure more English volunteers. Trained nurses were not asked for and the chief qualification, we were informed, was ability to use the bandages and follow the doctors' orders.

Classes for instruction in medical massaging have been opened in Paris as the massage treatment has been found invaluable in so many cases where the soldiers' muscles are stiffened and otherwise affected by exposure.

End of the Chameleon.

"She wuz playin' wif him one day, puttin' him on red to see him turn red, an' on blue to see him turn blue, and on green to see him turn green, and so on. Den de fool gal, not satisfied wif letin' well enough alone, went an' put him on a plaid, an' de poor little thing went an' bust himself tryin' to make good."

Earthquakes Hit Desolate Regions

Now, there are two curious points well worth noting about earthquakes which are not generally known.

In the first place, the more overwhelming the consequence of an earthquake may be in a human and material sense the less interesting is it usually to the seismological expert; in the second place, the range of the shock is in inverse ratio to the amount of destruction which it causes on the earth's surface.

For the scientist who has specialised in the investigation of seismic disturbances will tell you that the really big earthquakes occur most frequently, not in populous countries like Italy and Japan, but in desolate regions far from the familiar centres of civilisation or down in the depths of the ocean.

The fact that so many thousands of lives have been lost in an earthquake has less significance for the expert—who is concerned with the scientific rather than the human consequences of the convulsion—than the effects which may have been made on the rock formations of the earth we inhabit.

Then the shocks which have visibly been the most violent have been the most restricted in actual range of earth-movement. Take the recent disaster. Although the Avezzano disaster was telling its story on that delicately-sensitive instrument which is known as the seismograph in England long before the news of the latest earthquake had reached the country by cable, the writing on the tablets of the seismograph was less pronounced and definite in character than are many records made by shocks of which you and the rest of the newspaper reading public have never even heard, since they cause no damage either to life or property.

There are, you must know, such things as earth-waves as well as ether-waves. But while the ether waves have, by the genius of a Marconi, been harnessed into the service of mankind, no scientist has yet discovered any uses for earth-waves, or even any means of utilizing them.

The shock of a seismic disturbance travels in waves at the rate of two miles a second in the actual vicinity of the disturbance, and this rate rapidly diminishes as the distance traveled by the earth-waves increases.

The deeper the originating movement happens to be the farther the shock travels; but the deeper the movement, on the other hand, the less extensive, and usually the less serious, from the point of view of loss of life, is the visible effect on the earth's surface.

Thus we have the apparent contradiction that the Herefordshire earthquake of 1896—so called because it is believed to have originated in that border county, if not in the bowels of the black mountains of Wales—was, from a scientific point of view, a bigger affair than the Avezzano, or even Messina.

The largest recorded displacement of land surface was that consequent upon to Indian earthquake of 1897, when an area as big as the whole of Yorkshire ws turned, so to speak, completely upside down.

Yet who can give a name to that earthquake to-day, though every schoolboy has heard of buried Pompeii of the Lisbon and San Francisco earthquakes!

TO MEND PIPES OF THE FURNACE

When the furnace fire must be started in the fall, one may find that the pipes are rusted in spots and unsafe to use. By applying strips of wet asbestos paper on the hot pipes the paper wil ladhere closely and so seal the pipes. This has been found a great economy, as the furnace pipes last a year longer without repairing them than they otherwise would.

If the kitchen range contains an ugly crack, you may fill it with a cement made by beating one egg, to which add sifted ashes and stove polish until thick enough to spread. Work the paste smooth with an old knife and press into crack, then smooth over the top. This will harden almost like iron and will take a polish that will render the break unnoticeable.

BRITISH ARMY HAD NO CHOICE

Front Forced by War's Circumstances to Occupy Low Ground—Battle Near Ypres

British General Headquarters in France, April 5.—Although the present conditions give no accurate idea of what the British army has suffered during the winter, nevertheless the state of the ground and of the front trenches renders it easy to understand the hardships of the winter months. The question is often asked why was the long British front placed on such low ground, and often in the beds of rivers and through marshes? Why was not a good position chosen on high ground and along more commanding positions, where it wouud not have been necessary to keep so many men in the front line and where a greater measure of security from attack might have been attained?

The answer is that the line was not chosen at all. It was simply forced on the British by the accident of war. For instance, the front occupied by the British army at the present time is most irregular in its manifold twistings and turnings, and looks as if it had been drawn across the map by a blind man in a fit of drunkenness. It follows no rules. It embraces points which the enemy, apparently, ought to have, and it misses tactical position which anyone versed in the most elementary principles of war would have occupied had they been left a free hand to do so.

The line which the British armies occupy has altered in no material fashion since last October. It will ever remain in the annals of the British historic landmark, drawn in the blood of thousands of brave officers and men.

This battle-front is the high-water mark of those desperate German attempts to break through and command the Channel. When the inner history of those critical days comes to be written, when all the facts are known, and when all the reports are at hand, the whole will make one of the most amazing stories in the history of war. The desperate stand of the Seventh Division in front of Ypres has never been surpassed.

It will be remembered that the British army was then gradually being transferred from the Aisne to kll in the gap between the French left wing and the Belgian army, which retired on the line Neuport-Dimhude after the fall of Antwerp. The Seventh Division held the gap absolutely alone for several days. Then the other corps gradually began to arrive, the third, the second, and finally the first.

But even when all were assembled the line was so thin that there were no reserve men, and even the cavalry had to be dismounted and thrown into the firing line. The troops as they appeared on the battlefield entrenched themselves just where they could. At that time no one thought that the army would remain on the same line for six months at a stretch.

It was the object of battalion commanders to hold any point which seemed the most favourable for defence.

The Germans' overwhelming superiority in artillery rendered some sort of cover essential, unless the British infantry was to be annihilated. Thus the low-lying ground was selected for preference. The dry beds of rivers, ditches, dikes, anything, in fact, which offered a measure of protection from shrapnel and howitzer fire.

No one then had time to think of the winter and of the mud. Each battalion commander was merely occupied in holding on to the few hundred yards of Flanders or France which had been entrusted to him by his commander-in-chief. Sometimes aportion of the line would give, and the troops would have to fall back to another field or river bed or dike.

This accounts for the extreme irregularity of the line at the present day. When the German attacks were finally repulsed they did not fall back, but also entrenched their front at the high watermark of their advance. They, too, occupy a position just as irregular and, in many sections, on ground just as unfavourable.

I asked several generals if it would not have been wiser to have fallen back to ground which was drier and more favourable for defence when it became evident that a long stay through the winter was inevitable. A few hundred yards here and there seems such a small matter in a war of such a vast extent, when the whole of Belgium and most of the northern provinces of France are still in the Germans' hands.

All were, however, unanimous in their reply that they much preferred to stick out the winter under the most awful conditions of discomfort rather than yield another foot of French soil to the Germans. Thus the river beds and ditches were converted into trenches, the ploughed fields fortified, barbed wire placed across the front, and for five months the gallant British army has sat tight, often up to its waist in mud and icy cold water.

Harassed by snipers, blown out by mines, under constant shell fire, frequently attacked in force, suffering every imaginable discomfort, but never losing heart and never losing cheerfulness, holding the line whilst time was given to their comrades at home to prepare themselves for the struggle which must come in the spring.

The greater part of the trenches along the front is completely isolated during the day. The ground is so flat that anyone or any body of troops attempting to approach them would be annihilated by the enemy's rifle fire long before they covered half the distance. But at certain oints, notably in woods or where the ground gradually rises to the French line, it is possible to enter them unobserved by the enemy's marksmen, although you alawys have to run the risk of meeting bullets or shells.

A NEGLECTED COLD WILL VERY OFTEN TURN TO CONSUMPTION.

Never neglect what at first seems to be only a slight cold. Perhaps you start to cough, a little irritation in the throat ensues, then it gets lower down, settles on the lungs and bronchitis sets in, and you start to raise phlegm of a greenish, yellowish color, and you cough persistently.

If you let the simple cold run it will surely develop into something very serious, and perhaps consumption.

On the first sign of a cold or cough go to your dealer and procure a bottle of

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

A few doses will convince you that it is just the remedy you require.

Mrs. J. W. Pearsons, Amherst, N.S., writes: "Some time ago my daughter had a very bad cough which settled on her chest. She had no rest day or night. I gave her everything I could think of, but without doing her the least bit of good. At last I thought of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I got a bottle for her. She had not taken half of it before she got relief, and with the remainder she was completely cured. Now when any of the family have a cough we always know what to get for it."

Dr. Wood's is 25c and 50.

CARRIED LAST TRENCHES AT POINT OF BAYONET

French War Office Says Capture of Final Line of Defences at Eparges Was Accomplished by Fierce Charges in Which the Germans Recoiled From the Ferocity of the Cold Steel of the French Troops.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, April 10.—Official communique.—The carrying of the final line of German trenches about Eparges, was accomplished by fierce bayonet charges, according to the official despatches this afternoon. The French troops rushed the enemy impetuously, and the ferocity of their cold steel made the Germans recoil after a brief but sanguinary struggle.

THE FUTURE OF THE RACE

LONDON, April 10.—(By mail to New York.)—The thousands of pre-battlefield marriages in Britain since the war began, are not only honourable but patriotic, and the girl who accepts her soldier lover in marriage, and sends him to slaughter, should be an example to others, acording to Dr. C. W. Saleeby, the eminent London physician. It is a stupendous problem, keeping up the race, said Dr. Saleeby to-day. "We should do more to encourage such marriages. Prominent London society women approve, too. The girl who dedicates herself to bring up the next generation alone, if her husband fails to return from France, or to care for him to the end of his days, if he returns maimed and broken, is Britain's real heroine, they say. Certainly it is better for a man to marry, even though he has perhaps but a week's happiness, with the woman he loves before he leaves for the front," said Lady Tree, wife of Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree. "When one thinks of the future of the race it is to be deplored that not more of the brave fellows who have been killed, were not married before they left for the battlefields."

"England's future should outweigh every other consideration," said Lady Mond. "It is a very difficult matter, indeed," she added. "The parties concerned should know just what they are undertaking. There is a war fever, and young girls are very excitable. They should not be permitted to be carried away by enthusiasm, and then left to repent for the rest of their days."

Not only among the lower and middle classes have war marriages preceded the departure of the troops for the front. In some quarters in London many weddings have found the groom garbed in Kitchener's khaki.

PREPARING FOR WAR

LONDON, April 10.—The Austrian engineering corps are rushing the construction of lines of trenches from the Italian frontier to Fiume, according to a Rome despatch received here this afternoon, in preparation for the expected opening of hostilities by Italy.

The same form of trench construction employed in stopping the Russian advance on Cracow, is being used. Trains are bringing military supplies into Austria almost hourly, according to the Rome despatch.

BERLIN, via wireless, April 10.—The great battle between the Meuse and the Moselle is being waged "with undiminished violence," according to an official statement from the war office this afternoon.

All the French onslaughts against the German positions on the plateau of Combres have been repulsed, according to the war office despatches. The engagement at this point is continuing with renewed fierceness.

LONDON, April 10.—Four battleships and four cruisers convoying several transports, were seen yesterday from Dedeagatch steaming towards Enos on the Gulf of Saros, acording to a despatch to the Times from Sofia. The warships opened fire on the Turkish positions at a distance of what appeared to be three miles. After the bombardment had continued for about two hours the squadron withdrew in the direction of the Daranelles.

A despatch from Rome says: "Admiral Bettolo, who several times has been the Italian minister of marine, is quoted in an interview as declaring he has always believed, and still believes, the Dardanelles can be forced, although difficulties to-day are naturally greater because of improvements made in the defences under the direction of the German officials."

Peterboro' Liquor Stores Closed at 7 O'clock

Last evening the liquor stores in Peterborough closed for the first time at seven o'clock under the new license law.

With the prorogation of the Legislature official sahction was given the liquor law of Hon. W. J. Hanna, which calls for the closing of all shops at seven in the evening. According to the law, such shops should have closed at seven on Thursday evening. Technically, all shops remaining open committed a breach of the new Act, but there is little danger of penalties being imposed.

Few people were aware of the early closing rule judging by the number that sought admittance after seven o'clock. One after another walked up and tried the door, looked at the drawn blinds and wondered what had happened. One man who tried to enter a George Street Street liquor store carried a quartette of "dead soldiers" which dangled between his fingers. Quite a number of women were also disappointed.

Street Work to Begin Next Week

Foley & Gleason expect to resume their street paving contract on Monday, April 19, on Charlotte street from Bethune to Park. The Street Railway Company find it necessary to get under way several days ahead of the paving and may begin their work as early as Wednesday next. It is also understood that the Radial people are going to push forward their extension on Charlotte street, although Mr. Munro's absence from the city prevented the securing of definite news on this point. Speaking of the reconstruction of the line on Charlotte between Bethune and Park, Mr. Harry Beal told The Examiner it was likely work would be undertaken about the middle of the week.

WITH THE BATTERY BOYS AT KINGSTON

Peterborough Artillerymen Form A Section of the 26th Battery—Will Enter a Ball Team in the Kingston City League.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

KINGSTON CAMP, April 8.—The men of the 26th Battery are fast rounding into shape. That is, in so far as physical condition is concerned. Early to bed and early to rise, with lots of hard work in between, is working wonders with the men. Rolling out at 6 a.m., the one hundred and odd men perform their ablutions and line up for a route march at 6:30. A stiff walk out the Lake Shore road as far as the penitentiary and back sends the mto the breakfast table at 7:30 as hungry as wolves.

Good Grub.

Bacon and eggs, bread and butter, and tea are served to the men, and at 8:30 they line up for parade. Foot drill, physical exercise, and a six-mile route march complete the morning's work. Dinner at 12:30 provides beef, potatoes, and turnips en masse, bread, no butter, and coffee.

At 2 o'clock they hit the parade ground again, and are put through their paces up to 4:30, with two intervals of 10 minutes for rest. Then nothing to do till to-morrow.

The boys are picking up their drill very fast. They know their work, and are improving daily. They lack finish, however, and this it what the officers are drilling into the men at the present time. It is the little things they fall down on. Falling into line smartly, silence when marching at attention, and other little incidentals, all of which are of the utmost importance in acquiring perfect discipline. A few of the men have been to the stables, and now a dozen or so are sent there daily to look after the 26 horses here for our use.

Learning to Ride.

The men are being sent alphabetically. It is said most of the 'Varsity men ride with both hands on the saddle. One got tangled up with a baker's waggon, and another whose place was in the rear of the section, had a "nag" that insisted on heading the parade.

The battery is at present located in the Richardson Building (the old Regiopolis College). The officer commanding is Major G. R. Hall, of Peterborough; second in command, Captain Carruthers; Lieutenant Hilliard, of Peterborough, and Lieutenant Lawson, of Ottawa. Liemenant Lawson is at present attached to the battery as riding instructor.

The battery has been divided into four sections, A, B, C and D. The Peterborough boys form A Section. The 'Varsity men comprise C and B, while the balance of the Toronto men are in section B.

Three new non-commissioned officers were attached yesterday as follows: Sergeant-Major R. A. Fraser (fourth year Arts, McGill); Quartermaster-Sergeant H. C. Beatty is also a McGill man, as also is Sergeant T. A. Williams (fourth year Science). These men have all taken a sergeants' course, R.S.A., Kingston. Sergeant J. G. Margerison, Brantford, 32nd Battery, formerly 2nd Lancashire Brigade, 5 years' service, has also taken the course.

Time for Sport.

Even with the hard work, the men find lots of time for sport. We are trying to scrape up a basketball team to play Kingston "Y." next Wednesday night, but a practice held last night was not encouraging. During the ten-minute intervals at parade, baseballs pop from pockets and finger gloves come out from under cover, having been packed around under tunics.

A baseball team is being formed, and we will likely enter the City League and play as long as we are here, as Saturday afternoon is a holiday. D'Arcy Smith, the former T.R. and A.A., and Melville, goal-keeper, is getting the team together. By the way, D'Arcy Smith holds all records as a forager. The way the big fellow lifts a pot of jam from under the cook's nose is worthy of a Jimmie Valentine.

At the club we have a smoking room, which is really the hallway. A few of the boys have reported sick, but for the most part it has been slight colds and sore feet. Five of the men had to be operated upon before they could pass their physical examination.

Lindsay Post: The many friends of Private Howard Chambers, son of Mr. Harry Chambers, Lindsay, will regret to learn that he is seriously ill with spinal meningitis at Belleville. The young man enlisted with the 45th Regiment and left with the local detachment for Belleville, where he joined the 39th Regiment. His father tel-

BRINGING IRELAND CLOSER TO EMPIRE

In His Weekly Letter T. P. O'Connor Shows What a Remarkable Effect the War for Freedom Has Had on the Situation.

THE AMERICAN NOTE

Copyright 1915 Central News by T. P. O'Connor

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, April 10.—I must confess that I looked forward with considerable apprehension to the appearance of the last American note coming as it did at a time when the newspapers were ally filled with reports of Germany's piratical enterprises, and at a moment when the war passion of the country, already fiercely ablaze, was fanned to a white heat by the toll of more than 100 murders, which included some women.

I feared the people here might share the feeling of the quiet man who contrasted the frequent reproaches of a having an exacting wife over an occasional glass of whiskey and a mild game of bride, with the blind and passionate devotion of the wife of an apache in the slum around the corner, who varied his profession of murder and highway robbery with the occasional amusement of wife-beating.

However, my apprehensions were untirely unfounded as the notes not only cleared, but even purified, the air. This was due in the first place to the friendly tone of the notes and also to the friendly tone adopted by the ambassadors in connection with the matter. It was felt that the great embarrassments to American tardd, although we believed that we were justified in our departure from the ordinary blockade rules, forced the United States government to establish her position by a timely protest.

America Admits Provocation.

It is evident that underneath the protest America admits our extraordinary provocation and makes demand for only such mitigations as our necessities of fighting a savage enemy permit. These mitigations will certainly be conceded and just claims will be handled with expedition and ample compensation awarded. With the war costing nearly two million pounds sterling daily the country is no mood for haggling, especially with a friendly commercial nation.

Above these two great factors accounting for the entirely favourable reception of the American note by British public opinion, there are three outstanding facts in connection with the relations between England and America. First, despite the gigantic, subsidized and audaciously mendacious German campaign, American opinion is still overwhelmingly in favour of the cause of the Allies as a fight for freedom and democracy. Second, again despite the German agitation, America maintains the right to supply arms and ammunition. Third, there is the generous outburst of passionate reprobation of German piracy in the American press last week.

Campaign Against Drink.

The war operations this week occupied less attention than the campaign against drink. The example of the King has already produced widespread imitation, public men of all parties rushing into print with the announcement that they have become teetotalers until the end of the war. The battle still rages over prohibition, opinion being largely divided, partly because of self-interest and partly because of class. The liquor trade naturally demands compensation if its livelihood is destroyed. On the other hand the working people insist that owing to the terrific overwork they now endure they must fine solace in an occasional glass of beer. To the student of sociology the main interest in the discussion is the extraordinary transmutation of the whole public opinion regarding the drink traffic. Every side is willing to concede much in order to effect a reasonable compromise and for the first time it looks as if the terrific problem might be settled without provoking the irreconcilable extremes of party interest and passion.

Amid the many changes in the whole political and social point of view that the war has produced, I see nothing more remarkable than the attempt of such fiercely divided parties to get together on this most difficult of problems.

Russians Hold Stage.

Concerning the war I need only say that the present Russian operations hold the centre of the stage. The rapidity with which she perfected her organization for the advance against Austria has surprised everybody. Signs of the approaching break-up of Austria and of still bigger events, in-

THREE LOCAL NURSES HAVE BEEN CHOSEN

Mrs. Douglas, Miss Roberts and Miss Smith Will Accompany Queen's Hospital to the Front

LEAVE THIS MONTH

Three Peterborough nurses will go to the front with the Queen's Stationary Hospital Corps which leaves some time this morning. The three are Mrs. Mabel K. Douglas, Miss Frances M. Smith and Miss Eva P. Roberts. In connection with the hospital the Kingston Standard says:

"The staff of Queen's stationary hospital corps has been completed, and recommended to Ottawa. The establishment of the hospital will be 120, and will be known as Queen's College Stationary Hospital No. 3. The corps will be commanded by Lt. Col. Etherington and will leave the city some time between this and the 1st of May. Lt.-Col. Etherington, Officer Commanding; Surgeons, Captain C. E. Kidd, Lieut. Ballantyne, Lieut. Polson; civil surgeons, Dr. Anglin, Dr. W. T. Connell, Dr. Garfield P. Quigley; quartermaster, Hon. Capt Sparks; radiographer, Lieut. J. P. Quigley; qurtermaster, Hon. Captain James Wallace, chaplain of the 45th regiment.

Captain Wallace is a graduate in arts and theology from Queen's and is at present the chaplain of the 45th regiment. It is said that he will make an ideal quartermaster. Both civil and military surgeons on the staff are among the best that Kingston could produce and it is felt that they will do credit to the city and the corps."

OPPOSING ARMIES STOP FROM SHEER EXHAUSTION

Temporary Lull in the Carpathian Operations After a Fortnight of the Most Desperate Mountain Fighting the World Has Ever Known—Still Battling in the San Valley.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, April 10.—Through sheer exhaustion the opposing armies in the Carpathians have halted operations after a fortnight of the most desperate mountain fighting the world has ever known.

Saturday afternoon despatches to the war office indicated a lull in the fighting except in the Long San Valley, southeast of Smolnik. Here the Russian left wing is in clash with the Austro-Germans, 15 miles west of the railway leading through the Usiok Pass, but the fighting is mostly between small gorups in the moutain passes.

The Germans are again displaying some activity in the Pilica-Rawka region in Poland, according to the despatches from Warsaw.

GEN. HUGHES INTERVIEWED

TORONTO, April 10.—Major General Sam Hughes, passing through here to-day on his way to Ottawa, said that he had no intention of curtailing recruiting in Canada. At present Canada had one hundred and one thousand men under arms, an there were enough offering for a fourth contingent at any time. In his opinion the war was just commencing. German militarism was not nearly crushed yet. Regarding the recent revelations before the Public Accounts Committee, General Hughes said that nothing in the way of real crookedness had been proved, except in the case of the binoculars, and he had taken drastic action in regard to that. The horses as a whole he said were the best ever purchased for army purposes. He was non-committal regarding the prospects of an election, and would not say anything regarding the boots investigation.

ALLIES ESTABLISH A NEW POSITION NEAR WESTENDE

ROTTERDAM, April 9.—Messages reaching me from the front state that the forces of the Allies have been making vigorous attacks in the region of Lombaertzyde, and have succeeded in establishing a new position further north towards Westende. At points between Dixmude and the coast the opposing infantry are separated only by the River Yser, while south of the town the trenches are only 50 yards apart. The Germans have resumed the throwing of hand bombs in this region.

MANIFESTATIONS FOR GREEK PREMIER

LONDON, April 9.—The Times says in a despatch from Athens:

"Mr. Venezelos has convoked a meeting of his friends, for to-morrow morning to whom he will communicate his intention of giving up active politics and retiring to Samos, where he will live as a private person. There is, however, some probability he will not persist in his intention if in the meantime some justice is done to his position.

"Though the government forbade the holding of political demonstrations during yesterday's celebrations of the national fete, there were manifestations in many parts of sympathy with Mr. Venezelos, who passed the day at Cephissus."

EARL OF CRAWFORD, PREMIER EARL OF SCOTLAND, ENLISTS AS A PRIVATE IN MEDICAL CORPS

LONDON, April 9.—The Earl of Crawford, aged 44, and the Premier Earl of Scotland, has enlisted as a private in the Royal Army Medical Corps for the duration of the war. Before succeeding to his titles he was the chief Conservative whip of the House of Commons.

Boys Who Want To Hustle and Make Money!

Here's a "Battery" [of Genuine Prizes in Money and Watches for Selling the Examiner

The newsboys are anxious for another "live" prize contest, selling The Examiner; and as the spring is a good time to start one, the manager of the circulation department of The Examiner has made arrangements for an interesting competition which is to start Monday evening. The particulars will be found on another page of to-day's paper, which the boys should read over carefully, and get busy.

The "Examiner" has never countenanced a Newsbays' Competition that did not provide legitimate reward for honest work. The contests have always been productive of stimulating the boys to fair-play efforts in their own behalf. Not only for the purpose of earning pocket-money for themselves, by their own endeavours, but in encouraging pluck and strengthening them to develop some of their best qualities. The result of The Examiner contests have always been satisfactory to the boys themselves, and decidedly helpful in increasing the circulation of The Examiner, for the benefit of our advertising patrons.

It will be seen that the attractiveness of The Examiner's Spring Newsboys' Contest should be sufficient to start a "grand rally" of the boys on Monday evening—the prizes being either in spot cash, gold and silver watches, or suits of clothing. Read the Advt. boys.

PROPRIETOR OF LOCAL PAPER IS CHARGED

An information has been laid against Thos. W. Whalley, proprietor of the Review, by Chief of Police Thompson, charging that the defendant permitted to be published in the Review the statement that "Chief Thompson permitted friendly relationship to exist between the Peterborough Police Force and the management of the Brock Street Rink, and owner of the under world." The information is laid under the section of the act in regard to libel.

Swimming In The River

The swimming hole at the east end of Dalhousie Street once more claims the attention of the small boy. Yesterday afternoon a number of them congregated on the west bank of the river, and for upwards of an hour indulged in one of the greatest joys of a small boy's life. Few of them, if any, ever give a passing thought to the calendar once the snow disappears. The first fine days sets the blood tingling in their veins and brings to life the spirit of the swimming hole that has lain dormant all winter.

Another thing that is cheering the small boy no inconsiderable concern is the fact that the season is approaching when the suckers will commence to move upstream. A number of them have already armed themselves with hook, line and sinker, and a mental picture of their first trip down the river.

TO BE REMEMBERED.

Our contemporary, the Review, is right for once, even if it expresses a platitude. It says that "to bring in religion into a campaign clouds the issue, arouses prejudice, and prevents the voters from judging sanely and dispassionately of the questions before them." This is all very nice, and the Review should remember its declaration. If it does so and lives up to it, it will be the first time in its history, or in the history of the leaders of the party it supports.

A POINTER.

Doubts sometimes arise of Uncle Sam's official neutrality. The deference paid to the interned German pirate craft, the Prince Eitel, is construed as an excess of official complaisance. But whatever diplomatic considerations influence the United States, it is plain that the great mass of the people are in sympathy with the cause of the allies, as shown by the mayoralty contest in Chicago, which was fought out on the racial issue direct.. One Sweitzer was the candidate of the pro-German element. An appeal was issued by leading Germans, Austrians and Hungarians, to vote the Sweitzer ticket, as representative of the Austro-German cause, and the electors were told that a vote for Sweitzer was a vote for the cause of the Vaterland and for the triumph of German "kultur." In spite of the large proportion of these nationalities in the electorate, the electors at large solidified themselves against these appeals and Sweitzer's opponent was elected by the largest majority ever recorded for a mayoralty candidate in Chicago. Official Uncle Sam for reasons of his own, may coquette with Germany, but the mass of the people are with the allies, as they must be necessarily, for the allies are fighting for the integrity of the foundations upon which the liberties of the United States people rest—the democratic principle in its largest aspect.

THAT BELLEVILLE ARTICLE.

The Review is still agitated over The Examiner's article in regard to conditions at Belleville. Our contemporary remarks last evening "We are pleased to know at this late date that The Examiner's investigations at Belleville were undertaken in the public interest." There is nothing surprising in this, inasmuch, as it is a habit of the Review to know practically everything "at a late date." After this candid opening the Review states that The Examiner came to the same conclusion as Alderman Dobbin, and then refused to retract a "violent letter libelling Mr. Dobbin." The letter referred to in no way libelled Mr. Dobbin, but merely disagreed with his views, and Mr. Dobbin has had no complaint to make. Of course, the Review has had some recent experience in connection with what constitutes libel, and also in regard to retracting letters, and probably is capable of speaking with some authority on such subjects. Certainly there were no "faltering steps" about our contemporary's quick retreat under fire in regard to a certain Brock street amusement place. Speaking of investigations in general, there has been a consistent lack of success attendant upon any agitation that our contemporary has stirred up. Its attitude in regard to a recent sad case had no other effect than to keep the tongues of the gossips busy, and in other matters there has been the same failure to produce beneficial results. Even the "magistrate's dog" flourished in the face of the Review's onslaught. As to The Examiner's investigation at Belleville, we may quote from a letter from one of Peterborough's soldier boys: "Everything points to a desire to make our lot a comfortable one. The agitation has done no harm." These boys are going out as our representatives in the fight for liberty. If we have done anything to make their condition more comfortable, we are satisfied. The soldiers themselves must be the judges, and they say that we have been successful. Can as much be said for the Review?

WAR GRAFT MUST GO.

The revelations at Ottawa in connection with the purchase of army supplies call for drastic action on the part of Sir Robert Borden and his government and the Conservative party. They must dissociate themselves with any wrong-doing, with any attempt to take advantage of the country or of our soldiers in the field. They cannot stand for graft, for unfair profit, or for worthless or inferior goods. If members of parliament did wrong, they must take the consequences; if officials were parties to fraud or were lax in duty, they must be dismissed and punished if within the power of the law, and wherever contractors acted unfairly or took undue profit they must make restitution. In other words, the department of justice must be put in operation in the most vigorous way, and more than anyone else the cabinet must be held to strict accountability.

The Conservative party as a party must clear itself before the country. They have an active opposition in front of them, and the people will await an immediate statement and the action that must follow. The system of purchases by way of a patronage list, no matter how long in use, must now be wiped out forever. There must be open competition, and every contractor must be compelled to put in a declaration as to his good faith in every respect in filling any and every contract. War graft of every kind must go, and The World believes the Conservatives have the opportunity and the duty of saying so now.

This has the right ring. The demand for restitution of stolen public funds; for a return to honest methods, and the punishment of the guilty, should be heeded. The latter paragraph of the above demand is especially significant. It makes damaging admissions... We have been treated with all sorts of excuses. We have been told that some of the thieves who took advantage of the country's necessity and the opportunities afforded by a vicious system of contracting for war supplies, were Liberals. So much the worse for them; that fact does not excuse the responsible parties. It only emphasizes the fact that, by government neglect or incompetence, or both, the door to "graft" was set so wide open that the opportunities for stealing were almost unlimited. A few degenerate Liberals may have dishonestly profitted by the general looting, but the majority of the looting was performed by officials of the government or party friends and supporters of the government. When members of Parliament, supporting the government, head the horse-stealing campaign in Nova Scotia; when a member of Parliament uses as a catspaw an obscure drug clerk in his employ to rob the country by excessive prices for hospital supplies, fattening at the expense of the lacerated bodies of our soldiers, the responsibility is brought closely home to the government. Powell, the drug clerk, comparatively a political and commercial nonentity, could not have accomplished his extortion without the patronage of his employer, a member of Parliament. The sister of the Nationalist - Conservative Deputy-Speaker of the House could not have made the unrighteous profit of 40 per cent., as was sworn by a competent witness, out of drug supplies for Valcartier Camp, without the help of a friend at court, without party help and influence, in this case equivalent to government help and influence.

These things, and scores of others like them, could not have been done without the knowledge of the government. For the government to claim that it did not know is to confess criminal carelessness. It was their duty to know. They were charged with the responsibility of the public funds being spent in an honest way; —a way to give the country the best value for the money expended for war supplies.

The World is right, in demanding a house-cleaning. It cannot be that the present Conservative Government, can be so cynical as to think that the public is so lost to decency and considerations of patriotism, that the government can appeal with success to the electorate, to support them, in the face of such things, to condone the guilt of trafficking in dishonour in discharging the responsibility that rests upon them, as custodians of the country's interests, in this tremendous crisis? Can the government think so basely of the electorate as to think that they will overlook the reeking scandals in the purchase of war supplies, of so bad a character that one of their chief party organs, confesses the wrongs and calls upon the government and party to do works meet for repentance?

Are we so lost to decency and honour that we let the party spirit condone the most cruel of crookedness, cheating the soldiers we send to fight our battles, and those of the Empire, by furnishing war supplies, defective in quality or quantity, through the permitted stealing of the public money?

OUR BEST CUSTOMERS.

The government statement of exports and imports of the United States shows that European nations are still our best customers, with the exception of Canada, and that there has been a remarkable decline in business with South America, of which so much was expected in the early months of the war. Exports sent to all countries in the eight months ended with February last amounted to $1,684,466,017, as compared with $1,695,722,000 in the corresponding period a year ago. But while there was a slight loss in total shipments abroad, European business increased from $1,090,981,074 to $1,189,664,289. There was a shrinkage of $51,000,000 in export trade with North America, though Canada continues to rank with Europe as a purchaser of United States products.

Comparison of the figures for last February with those of the same month in 1914 gives even more significant results. Europe bought $288,000,000 worth of goods, or more than double the quantity purchased last year, while shipments to South America declined from $8,800,000 to $6,800,000 for the month. The most striking gains were in sales to Great Britain, France, Italy and the Netherlands. Russia is buying comparatively little now, but in time she may rank with our best customers in case the United States improves the present opportunity to make a commercial treaty with the Russian government.—Rochester Post.

SHALL THE FLAG SHELTER THE CROOKS AND GRAFTERS?

Sir Robert Borden's speech of Thursday makes an end of pretence. If the holding of an election in June or September, while the Empire is still engaged in a struggle for existence against the most formidable foe it has ever encountered, seems likely to prove advantageous to the Conservative party Parliament will be dissolved. The fact that there is no legal need for a dissolution before the fall of 1916, when the war will be nothing more than a memory and the tens of thousands of young Canadians of both parties now in the trenches or in camps in the Dominion will be back home in their respective constituencies, is not likely greatly to influence the Premier. He has deliberately put the country's interests in a position of inferiority. Party comes first. The whisper of the Hon. 'Bob' Rogers has more influence than the sincere protests of thousands of honest Conservatives who object to the intrusion of party when the supreme need of the nation is harmonious co-operation in measures to strengthen the armed forces of the Dominion.

Not only are we to have an election, but we are to have a political campaign deliberately planned with the object of raising the 'loyalty' cry once more. Laurier and the Liberal party are to be represented as "caring not one whit for the Empire," and the wavering elector is to be implored to vote Conservative because 'Borden back Britain.' Thousands of young Liberals and many of their elders are at the front prepared to shed their blood for the Empire, yet the authorized last-minute Conservative election poster, prematurely discovered at Ottawa, throws upon them and their Parliamentary representatives the odium of following a leader who 'cares not a whit for the Empire."

The Globe calls upon Liberals everywhere to combat actively these slanders against the Chieftain of the Liberal party. There is no need to wait till the writs are issued and the campaign formally begun. Sir Wilfrid has been lied about in a most disreputable way. He and his followers dared to divide the House in opposition to the increase of the taxation upon British goods. The authors of the British preference sought to defend it from emasculation. That is the offence for which they are to be punished. But not openly. There is to be no repetition of Sir Charles Tupper's declaration of 1900 that Laurier was 'too British" for him. There is to be no campaign such as that of 1910-11 in Quebec, in which Laurier was represented as the arch-Imperialist engaged in "selling out" the French-Canadians to Britain in return for a tittle and a riband, and determined to build a navy in which the sons of the habitants were to be sent to fight Britain's battle all over the world. All that is past. Once more the Conservative party is to appropriate the flag as its exclusive property. "Borden backs Britain" is to be the rallying call. Beneath the folds of that flag will march not only the great army of honest, patriotic Conservatives, but the makers of shoddy army boots, the men who sent Canadian officers to the front with inferior field glasses that cost them $20 and the Government over $50, the crooks who bought horses so old that they were rejected for that reason fifteen years ago during the South African war, the purveyors of supplies for the wounded at extortionate prices, the gentry who said they had influence with the Minister of Militia and coined that influence into money, and all the other grafters, rake-off men, and contract jackals who have been sniffing and yelping around the National Treasury during the past eight months. The flag will fly over all.

"Laurier cares not a whit for the Empire," we are told. Yet he has given up the service of his country and of the Empire the years that most men spend in the acquisition of wealth. He has walked unstained through the mire of Canadian public life for over forty years. No man ever accused him [illegible] from his high position. Sir Wilfrid is not facile in flag-waving. To him the flag is something more than a pawn in the political game. It represents great deeds, high ideals, all that is noble in human aspirations. It is with something like amazement that he sees the coarse corruptionists who are sending over soldiers to the front with rotten and inferior supplies taking shelter under the flag they have disgraced, while once more he is to be held up to the reprobation of Ontario as one who cares not a whit for the Empire.

The duty of Liberals is plain. They must drag the crooks and grafters from beneath the shelter of the flag. It must not be allowed to shield their particular brand of scoundrelism.—The Globe.

GERMAN REFUGEE TALKS OF ENGLISH DETENTION CAMPS

The Bulk of the Germany Colony in England Being Some 30,000 or 40,000 Persons Residing in London

Dr. R. J. Oberholzer, a German subject, has just reached this country from England, where he spent some time in the detention camps on account of his nationality. He has written out his experiences there for the New York Times in the following manner:

The world will hear strange stories from the English concentration camps during the European war. To outside appearances everything seems quiet and well, because the authorities have cautiously given an order that "prisoners of war making any complaints are liable to punishment."

The bulk of the German colony in England being some 30,000 or 40,000 persons residing in London, it was naturally impossible to concentrate them all in, or close to, London. The Olympia, where the horse shows are held, served merely as a kind of clearing house where the newly arrested had to undergo a kind of training to make them fit for the hardships of real camps.

In the beginning, when Summertime allowed the establishment of tent camps in fields or meadows, a few days was the usual stay, afterward it was prolonged to four or six weeks. Then they were sent into the country where the different camps had been established. It, as the Home Secretary lately stated, some 1800 aliens of the hostile nation had been arrested since war broke out there is reason to believe that the vast majority has undergone the training of the Olympia.

After having been presented by the detective, who was in charge of me, to the Commandant, Lord Lanesborough, I passed into the hands of the subordinate officers and was thoroughly searched, if perchance I had a newspaper or some other deadly weapon on me, but was allowed to keep my money. Having passed this examination successfully, I was consigned to Camp 13.

At the first sight Compound 13 resembled an extensive gypsy camp; people in every state of toilet were walking about, and everywhere ropes had been drawn for the drying of linen. The newcomer was hailed very heartily, pumped for news from the outer world, and then provided with some eatables. Everybody tried to accommodate him as well as could be done.

The beds, as provided by the administration, consisted merely of a plank, a straw mattress, and two blankets, the latter bearing the inscription, Hamburg-American Line," showing that they came from some captured vessels. The night being exceedingly cold in the stone-paved room, the fellows who could not get some more blankets or rugs, shivered all night long, although they did not take off their clothes. The consequence was that the majority suffered constantly from colds, rheumatism, etc., More serious cases of illness, however, were comparatively rare.

For getting a breath of air one needed a permit for "fresh air exercise" from the doctors. The lucky ones who obtained such permits were allowed to use an enclosed space about 100 yards long and ten yards broad, in front of the building—that for half an hour in the morning and the same in the afternoon. All the other ones had to take their exercise in the large hall usually reserved for the soldirs.

The food was a calamity, being bad as well as scarce. The American Embassy and Consulate, to whom the prisoners were greatly indebted in other respects, seem never to have investigated this point thoroughly. In he morning three slices of bread and a pint cup of tea formed the breakfast. At noontime the bill of fare consisted of meat and potatoes, he venerable age of which was attested by their colour. At 5 o'clock three slices of bread and a cup of tea again. The inevitable result was a great deal of digestive troubles. We were entitled to buy other things, but the majority of the poor could not afford to do this. Sometimes at dinner they tried surreptitiously to get a second supply; but when found out they were severely punished.

Thus it will be easily understood why food riots have occurred in several camps—for example, at the Isle of Man, where four men were killed and about twenty wounded.

Two letters weekly of two pages each was all the correspondence we were entitled to. Mentioning of treatment, food, and similar topics was strictly forbidden and punished by cutting off the correspondence for a prolonged time. Interminable delays were the result of indifferent censorship. Sending a letter to London and getting an answer took often a week or wo, the communication with Germany and other countries was accordingly slow. Finally, however, the prisoners themselves started a Post Office and the expedition of the correspondence came into better shape.

It must always be borne in mind that the civil population which has been collected in the concentration camps had, for a good part, never done any military service. They were considered and treated as prisoners of war, without having taken an active part in the war. Similar is the situation in the other belligrent countries. I don't think that the fate of the Germans in England has been the worst of all.—New York Times.

Trades and Labour Notes

By The Official Scribe

There was a good representation at the Trades and Labour Council meeting held this week at the Labour Hall, George Street. J. J. Hartley presided. Representatives form the local moulders, pattern makers, printers, bricklayers and masons, theatrical workers, electrical workers, hod carriers, bar-tenders, barbers, carpet weavers and brewery workers answered the roll-call.

The Helen Brown Case.

The local Council of Women asked for two representatives from the Trades and Labour Council to assist in deliberating on methods to be employed in an effort to have the Helen Brown case cleared up. The request was granted, and two good men and true were nominated from the chair.

The Municipal Committee.

The Municipal Committee were on the job last Monday and reported on what they saw and heard at the city hall. No minutes of the previous meeting were read, which the Committee seemed to regard as unbusinesslike. The Salvation Army Band grant was viewed from different points. The Committee did not have one decision on this. The question of non-resident officials was simply carrying the Council's decision to the men higher up. If a day's labour is not given a man residing in the adjoining townships then officials should be treated the same. Some of the teachers under the School Board reside outside the city. Members of the police force, the Sanitary Inspector and probably others. The Council asked the labour men's representatives to supply the names and addresses which shall be done. The insuring its employees seemed good, as also the borrowing of money to run the city till the taxes came in.

The Short-Weight Bag.

The recent letting off of a farmer because his bag of potatoes was full, yet did not contain the 90 lbs., was vigorously condemned. The Secretary was instructed to supply the Attorney-General with a newspaper report of the case and the judgment given. According to this magisterial decision farmers can fill small sacks, sell them as containing 90 lbs., and get away with it. This is too much for the labour man.

Miscellaneous.

The passing of by-laws and business of a personal nature took up a large portion of the evening. President Hartley was given leave of absence till June, as an outside of city contract claims his attention.

Maxwell
"The Wonder Car"

You can own an exact duplicate of "Wild Bill" Turner's or Billy Carlson's record-breaking Maxwells

Think of owning one of these same Maxwells—think of driving it wherever you want to—over any kind of roads—up any kind of hills, wherever four wheels can go, the same car for $925.

Remember, every 1915 Maxwell is an exact duplicate of the regular stock Maxwell Touring Cars in which "Wild Bill" Turner broke the world's record up Mt. Hamilton, 21 7/10 miles in 48¼ minutes, beating the world's record by 16¼ minutes, and "Billy" Carlson broke the world's record up Mt. Wilson, California, making nine miles (up an elevation of 6,000 feet) in 29 minutes and 1 second, beating the previous world's record by 13 minutes.

Now about speed and endurance—here are some recent Maxwell Racing Car records:—

Barney Oldfield in a Maxwell Racing Car broke the world's non-stop record at Corona, California, for 300 miles, averaging 86.3 miles per hour. Think of it—not a stop made!

Then, right on top of this marvelous motor record, along came "Billy" Carlson in his Maxwell Racer and made still another 300 miles non-stop record in the San Diego race. Again a Maxwell Racer ran 300 miles without a stop!

These Maxwell Racing Cars are built by the same Designers, the same Chief Engineer, that build the regular Maxwell Cars; and the same Maxwell Laboratory Tested Steel is used in them that is used in the regular stock Maxwell Touring Cars.

But, aside from hill-climbing and speed, power and endurance records, here are some of the facts about Maxwell comfort,—Maxwell special features,—Maxwell beauty and Maxwell service.

Read This List of Expensive Features. The 1915 Maxwell Has These Features And Many Others.

Attractive Streamline Body
Pure streamline body; graceful crown fenders, with all rivets concealed. All the grace, style and "snap" that you will find in any of the highest priced cars.

A High-Tension Magneto
Nearly all the high priced cars have high tension magnetos. A high tension magneto gives positive ignition. The Simms magneto, with which the Maxwell is equipped, is recognized as one of the best magnetos made.

Left Side Drive—Central Control
Left side steer with gear shifting levers in center of driving compartment—center control—has been accepted by leading makers of expensive automobiles as the safest and most comfortable for the driver; that is why the Maxwell has it. The Maxwell is so easy to drive and control that a child can handle it.

Three-Speed Sliding Gear Transmission
All high priced cars have a sliding gear transmission. It is costly to make, but it is the best. If the motor has the power, sliding gears will pull the car out of any mud or sand. The Maxwell has a three-speed selective sliding gear transmission because Maxwell engineers do not consider any other type to be worthy of the Maxwell car.

Double-Shell Radiator with Shock Absorbing Device
The Maxwell radiator is of handsome design, gracefully curved, and it is built to be trouble proof. It is the expensive double shell type and has ample cooling capacity. The radiator is mounted to the frame by means of a shock absorbing device on each side, which relieves the radiator of all twists and distortions of the frame, caused by roughness of the road. The shock absorbing device also minimizes the possibility of radiator leaks.

The Roomy Full 5-Passenger Body
Adjustable Front Seat
The 1915 Maxwell has a full grown 5-passenger body. The front seat is adjustable, you can move it three inches forward or backward. This makes the car really comfortable for the driver. No cramped legs for tall people or uncomfortable reaching for short people. Most drivers' seats are made to fit anyone—so fit no one.

Low "Up-keep" Carburetor
The carburetor used on the Maxwell was specially designed for it after long and severe tests under every conceivable condition. Economy tests conducted by hundreds of dealers and owners in different sections of the country have proved its efficiency, its quick response to throttle and its extremely low consumption of gasoline. It has been termed the "low up-keep" carburetor.

Irreversible Steering Gear
The greatest margin of safety has been provided in the steering gear of the 1915 Maxwell. The Maxwell irreversible steering mechanism is of the expensive worm-and-gear type and its superiority over every other type lies in its many adjustments. At no time is more than a fourth of the bearing surface of the gear which operates the worm in use. When needed, a new bearing surface may be had by adjusting the gear a quarter of a turn. In short, the Maxwell steering gear has four times the adjustment of any other kind.

Heavy Car Comfort
What surprises most people is the smooth, easy-riding qualities of the Maxwell. The spring suspension of the 1915 Maxwell is the same costly combination of long semi-elliptical front springs and the three-quarter elliptic rear springs that is used on most heavy weight, high priced cars. The Maxwell offers you every essential of the highest priced machines at a fifth of their cost.

One Size of Tire—Anti-Skids on Rear
The Maxwell car is one of the easiest cars in the world on tires. Maxwell owners carry just one spare tire and but one size of spare tubes. Economical 30 inch x 3½ inch tires are used all around. A famous make of anti-skid tires are supplied on rear wheels.

A Dependable Electric Starter
For $70 extra, you can have your Maxwell delivered equipped with the famous Simms-Huff electric starter. This starter is efficient, trouble proof and easily operated.

And the Maxwell is completely equipped from the clear vision, ventilating windshield at the front to the spare tire carrier at the rear. When you buy a Maxwell you have nothing extra to buy.

The Maxwell Company's Guarantee of Service to Maxwell Owners

No other automobile is backed by a more reliable service than that guaranteed every Maxwell owner. Scores of Maxwell dealers in every part of this country are always ready to give expert advice—to make adjustments and to supply new parts at reasonable prices.

This splendid Maxwell Dealers' Service Organization is perfected and completed by the great Maxwell Service Station in Windsor, Ont. The main offices and factories of the Maxwell Motor Company in Detroit, U. S. A., are within comparatively short distance of many points in Canada. This in itself means rapid delivery of replacement parts to Canadian Maxwell dealers and owners. Maxwell Service is one of the great advantages enjoyed by Maxwell owners.

Order a Maxwell from us now, and when you want it delivered, we will give you your car—not an excuse on delivery day

Blue Moulded Beans Formed Change in Diet

Major Bennett Says One of His Subs Who Got a Chicken Deserves a V.C.

The following letter from Major George W. Bennett of Peterborough has been received by Mr. M. P. Doherty of the Public Works Department: "It was with great pleasure that I entered my 'Royal Crawl-in' apartments at 2.40 this morning, and found a letter from you. I was very tired, and, of course, dirty, but these things don't go for much here. Goodness, how I would wallow in a bath if I had a chance! They promise us a bath when we get out for a 'rest' (Heavens, what a name!) and a clean suit of underwear. Some of that we have will soon be able to carry us around. I am living high these few days. I had beans for dinner yesterday, and beans again for supper. My boy Brunton foraged for them in a bean stack. They were slightly blue-moulded, but they were a change from bully beef and hard tack.

Good-Bye Mr. Rabbit.

"I saw a rabbit last night. Good-bye Mr. Rabbit if he sticks his ears up when I get after him to-day. One of my subs, got a chicken the other day. He deserves the V.C.

"We have long ago forgot principles in this war. Principles be hanged. It is very hard to make the uninitiated understand, but if you people at home could take but one look at the devastation, destruction, and suffering of the poor inhabitants of this beautiful, peaceful country—and it's getting worse and worse the further we get into Belgium, caused so wantonly by the Allemandes—you would need no further reason to urge us on than revenge. It may be uncivilized to be vindictive, but God only knows why He allowed these people to be simply crucified by the Germans. Beautiful homes—and they are beautiful in every sense of the word—splendid old red brick buildings, churches, fields, cultivated away beyond comprehension of a Canadian farmer, a land blessed with plenty and a contented and industrious people, positively ruined. Not a building but it is smashed. It would make your heart sore to see the waste, never, never to be restored. Who wants to talk principles? Not me. I'll give it to these destroyers in whatever form it may come, and give it hard and quick.

Good Tidings All Along Line.

"We have good tidings all along our lines. Captured about 500 yesterday and took the town of N. C. (Neuve Chapelle). We are now awaiting orders to go forward. Let it be soon. One of my lads got badly hit yesterday. He went out in front and got a volley, hit twice in the leg, bone badly broken. No deaths last night, thank God. I have been out to-night trying to get some make-shift carts to haul in our supplies. This has been done by carrying on the back, and it is very hard work. I was poking around an old, abandoned farmhouse when I ran across a new Massey-Harris binder with Toronto in big letters on it. I could scarcely refrain from cheering, it was so near home. The Toronto boys enjoyed looking the thing over carefully.

"I was dodging along a communicating trench to respond to O.C. call, when a German battery got shelling our dugouts. It was great fun for us as the shos went high and burst over our heads. A few splinters fell near me. We had a splendid view of an aerial battle yesterday. The Germans were shelling British planes. They never got near one."

TO-MORROW AT ST. JOHN'S.

At St. John's to-morrow, both morning and evening, sermons will be delivered by Rev. J. G. Lewis of Toronto, who will officiate at all the services. Dr. Lewis was the former Rector of a New York Church, who came to Toronto on the invitation of the Bishop, and has been acting as special preacher in several large city churches. He was himself a former well-known Rector in Toronto

The Gladys Seward Recital

Gladys Seward scored a triumph at her piano recital last night in Conservatory Hall. For the good-sized audience that heard her the advance reports we have had of her qualifications as a pianist suggested the experience of the Queen of Sheba—"the half had not been told.". Miss Seward's work was a delightful disappointment, better than her most sanguine friends had expected. She is a pianist of whom Peterborough and Canada can well be proud. She is an artistic production, altogether Canadian and Peterborough. Born in Peterborough, educated in Peterborough, a pupil of the Conservatory of Music, and later of a "Peterborough Girl," Mrs. Alice Roger Collins, she received her later instruction from a noted Canadian piano teacher, Mr. Harry Field. As a pianist, Gladys Seward is an artist to the tips of her capable fingers. Young and of radiant personality, to these charms she adds qualifications of the highest artistic order. By her work last night she showed the possession of the trinity of indispensable equipment of the real musical artist—tone, technique and temperament. Her tone is beautifully round and full, as shown with every note, but conspicuously in the Chopin Berceuse, and in the sober mood of the Chopin Scherzo in B minor. In this number, too, was given an opportunity of displaying her wonderful technique, apparently of effortless adequacy to every demand. Her pedalling is perfect; her phrasing and enunciation clear cut but delightfully smooth. Her musical temperament is warm, quick and intelligently discriminating. Altogether her pianistic equipment stamps her as an artist with a most promising future. Without detailed reference to the programme special merit of performance applies to the second of the Two Bagatelles by Campbell-Tipton; to the Allegretto of the Beethoven Sonata, and the Chopin Berceuse and Scherzo. The Tschaikowsky, Valse Caprice, gave a chance for further display of Miss Seward's brilliant technique, and of some remarkable tours de force. The enthusiasm of the audience grew as the programme proceeded, and during the evening Miss Seward was presented with a sheaf of roses, but these are little to the laurels she won as a brilliant and capable pianist. She was assisted in the programme by Miss Jeannette Killmaster, of the Conservatory staff, who sang with a sweet soprano voice, and in a most satisfactory manner, a group of songs of tuneful quality, composed by Mrs. Roger-Collins. The public is justified in demanding that as a vocalist Miss Killmaster should be heard oftener. The programme is given below as played—with a few minor variations:

Was Wounded In the Face

Brother of Peterboro Man Was in the Battle of Neuve Chappelle

Sergeant Richard Mantell, of the Middlesex Regiment, brother of Sergeant W. H. Mantell, 535 Chamberlen Street, Peterborough, in a recent letter from Hoyle Place, Maidstone, Eng., says:

Sgt. R. Mantell

"The bandages have now been taken off my face, and the hole in it is not as bad as it looks. It still swells, and leaves me with a headache. The watch is none the worse for the shaking up it got at Neuve Chapelle. I am sending you an account of the fight. Well, I am not dead yet, so cheer up."

Sergeant Mantell was shot in the face at Neuve Chapelle, the bullet entering near his nose and emerging behind his ear.

PASSED FORGED CHEQUE FOR $33

Lindsay Man Made His Get-Away After Purchase of Suit of Clothes

The police have been notified to be on the lookout for a Lindsay man, who is charged with forging the name of Thos. Begg to a cheque on the Bank of Montreal for the sum of $30.00. The accused has made his get-away, and his whereabouts is unknown.

It is understood that the cheque was presented and accepted on Saturday at Sutcliffe's store, Lindsay, where the man purchased a suit of clothes. After it had gone the usual rounds it was ascertained that Mr. Begg had issued no such cheque, and that a deliberate forgery had been committed

The Orillia Home Guard

Is Small But Devoted to Its Work —Meet Every Week

ORILLIA, April 10.—Every Tuesday the window cards calling the Orillia Home Guards to the usual weekly drill are hung out along the main street of the town, and every Tuesday night a little band of patriots gathers at the handsome big armoury building for the parade. All winter the same few men, old and young, have lined up on drill night. It is seldom that the company has the attention of spectators, except when a concert or a banquet is held under the auspices of the Home Guards.

Without rifles and without the semblance of a uniform, the town protectors march and counter-march on the floor of the armoury. But they know their drill. They go through all the intricate manoeuvres of regulation drill as laid down for the best regiment in the land. Whether there are few or many on parade, they go through all the movements under the direction of Capt. Mainer without difficulty, except when the command comes to "Form fours" with three men in a section.

On Tuesday night of this week sixteen men, including Captain Mainey, turned out for the weekly parade. There were eleven privates, four sergeants and the captain. The sergeants were not conspicuous until it came their turn to give a command, because they marched in the ranks along with the privates. Company drill was held with four men to a section—excepting one section which had three stalwarts. They marched in columns of fours, and they swung into one long line. They "'bout faced" and they marched in an extended order. But they did not make any mistakes and they kept in step.

WIDESPREAD MOVEMENT IN ITALY FOR INTERVENTION

Resolution Carried by National League Contains Sentence Warning Government of a Great Political Upheaval if Nation is Disillusioned

ROME, April 10. — Political parties favorable to Italy's immediate intervention in the war, comprising Democrats, Radicals, Reformists, Socialists and Nationalists have arranged a great meeting to be held Sunday throughout Italy in an endeavor to bring about the participation of the country in the conflict.

The Courrier de Italia commenting yesterday on the event, says that it has assumed the character of a warning, since the National League, which arranged the meeting, adopted a resolution containing this sentence:

"If, after a long waiting, there are disillusions, no matter of what nature, a profound political upheaval is inevitable."

"In other words, if the monarchy is unable to make a national war the monarchy will cease to exist in Italy, as a profound political upheaval means a change of regime."

Dealing with the recent Austro-Italian negotiations, The Messagero says:

"The negotiations show that Austria, notwithstanding the pressure of Germany, refused to take into serious consideration the just wishes of Italy. Therefore the negotiations are destined to be interrupted the moment one side or the other believes that further delay would serve the enemy better than herself."

Despatches from Switzerland have heightened the excitement here. A Geneva report, via Paris, yesterday, says:

passenger trains arriving in Switzerland yesterday from Italy, were crowded with German families.

A Basel despatch says: British and French cruisers, according to advices received here, have taken from Italian mail steamers 2,100 bags of German mail addressed abroad and containing letters, postcards, money, cheeks and small packages.

Bags coming from abroad intended for Germany will be treated in the same way and confiscated. This course on the part of the allied countries, it is understood, is being made in response to Germany's submarine war against non-combatant merchant and passenger ships.

British warships recently captured on a Norwegian vessel confidential letters forwarded by Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German Imperial Chancellor, to Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador to the United States.

That section of the Italian press favorable to making terms with Austria for the preservation of Italian neutrality lays stress on the statement that there has been a lack of negotiations on the part of London, Paris and Petrograd with a view of giving Italy concessions to which, according to this section, she is entitled by the service rendered the allies through her not joining the central empires.

Officials say that such negotiations were not initiated by the Italian Government because it was desirous that Italy should not be accused of having waited for an opportune moment to take advantage of her ally. They assert history must recognize that Italy did all possible to avoid war, which will be justified only when it is proved that it is inevitable. . .

To Prorogue Next Week

Government Promises to Continue Inquiry Into Supply Scandals

OTTAWA, April 10.—It is the intention of the Government after the prorogation of Parliament to continue the inquiry into the war contracts and supplies. The Justice Department will continue the inquiry said Hon. Dr. Reid. The Minister of Customs, who has been in charge of the investigation which the Government has been carrying on in the public accounts committee, but pointed out that this course would delay the prorogation of Parliament for another month. However, it was thought that the Justice Department would be able to conduct the inquiry more conveniently and accordingly the committee will conclude its sitting to-day.

Prorogation of Parliament will take place next week after the reports of the public accounts and boots committees have been tabled and the debates have taken place.

Hon. Dr. Reid assured the committee last night that wherever wrongdoing was even suggested the Government would continue the work of investigating. He said that when war broke out there was a great rush, the officials were overworked and perhaps some things were not as right as they should be. A similar state of things had existed in nearly all the belligerent countries and he did not think Canada was any exception. Th Government had no desire whatever to stop inquiry and flung the door wide open. He was sure Mr. Carvell and Mr. Kyte who had been the most active members of the Opposition in the committee, would frankly admit that the Government had assisted in every way to bring out the facts before the committee.

The committee will meet to-day to hear Arthur Dewitt Foster, M.P., and Dr. Chipman regarding the purchase of horses in the county of Kings, N.S.

Capt. Green Honoured

Distinguished Service Cross Given to Skipper of Vosges

LONDON, April 10.—The Government's intention to encourage merchantmen to resist or dodge submarine attacks is emphasized by an official announcement yesterday that Captain John Richard Green of the steamer Vosges, which was sunk off the Cornish coast on March 27, by the shell-fire of a German submarine, has been granted a commission as lieutenant in the royal naval reserve, and awarded the distinguished service cross. The other officers of the steamer have been given gold watches and each member of the crew has received three pounds ($15).

The Vosges was under fire for more than two hours before she was sunk, her chief engineer being killed and two other officers and two members of the crew as well as a woman passenger being wounded. By skillful handling of his ship Captain Green prevented the torpedoeing of the steamer and the submarine opened fire on the ship with her guns. The steamer was getting away from the submarine when a shell hit her funnel and her speed was reduced. As the Vosges was making water the captain ordered his passengers and crew into the boats, which were subjected to heavy fire.

Much like a painter's jack is a seat patented by a Pennsylvania woman to be fastened outside windows for the use of cleaners.

It has been estimated by engineers that one waterfall in Iceland can be made to produce 60,000 horse power and another 50,000.

SPEAKER IS ON STRIKE

Senator Landry Will Not Sit Until Powers Are Decided

OTTAWA, April 10.—A situation has arisen on Parliament Hill, unprecedented in Canadian Parliamentary annals. On Thursday, the committee on internal economy in the Red Chamber brought in a report, and Senator Power moved its adoption. Speaker Landry ruled the motion out of order on the ground that all changes in connection with the internal economy of the Upper House must be initialed by the Speaker. Senator Power appeal from the ruling and the appeal was upheld. Senator Lougheed, the Government leader, voting against the Speaker. Speaker Landry is of course an appointee of the Government, and the situation was thus created of the Government leader opposing the Government's own appointee.

This happened in the morning. When the Senate met in the afternoon, Speaker Landry was absent, and on motion of the Government leader, Senator Boldue was elected temporary presiding officer.

Last night there were rumors in the corridors that Speaker Landry had gone on strike, refusing to act until his status and jurisdiction were established beyond question.

ASKS UNITED STATES TO INVESTIGATE

Treatment of Crews of German Submarines Held in England

BERLIN, via wireless, April 10. — The German Government has again asked the United States to investigate the treatment of crews of German submarines held prisoners in England, to determine whether they are being treated as prisoners of war. The newspaper Lokal Anzeiger to-day demanded immediate retaliation if it is found the Germans are not receiving proper treatment.

Notice is Never Sent Unless it is Necessary. Says Inspector Spence

The Year 1915 Must See More Marked Progress in Sanitary Conditions Than Past Years — Sanitary Inspector Spence Makes a Few Observations Respecting Sanitary Conditions in Peterboro'—Sanitary Work Has Passed Its Kindergarten Stage.

With the spring-like conditions prevailing at the present time it should be no difficult task to have one's premises in a clear and sanitary condition by the first of May this year and it behooves the citizens to start right away to attain this end and not to wait for a notice from the sanitary inspector.

The year 1915 must see more marked progress in sanitary conditions than past years, says Sanitary Inspector Spence, and the Board of Health notices must be treated with greater respect than heretofore, or unpleasant results may accrue. A notice is never sent unless it is necessary and if not complied with will be followed by legal proceedings much as this course is distasteful to the sanitary inspector; sanitary work has passed its kindergarten stage in Peterborough, and citizens should accept the administration of affairs in the interests of the public health, with a broadminded and progressive spirit.

A Poor Principle.

It indicates a poor kind of principle when a man refuses to fulfil certain obligations to his neighbour for which he knows he is morally responsible unless the LAW compels him to do so, and nowhere is this more strikingly illustrated than in the health department of a city.

Of the making of laws there is no end, and while we growl and groan at the yoke of numberless legislative rules that is laid upon us we should not lose sight of the fact that it is our own cussedness that is responsible for the burden. Ther would be less need of man made laws if the community at large would live up to the God-made-law to love thy neighbour as thyself, or the golden rule to do unto others as you would they should do unto you. Just because there is no LAW forbidding your dog to run at large are you justified in not preventing him destroying your neighbour's lawn and flower beds?

Just because there is no LAW against you keeping hens, are you justified in allowing them a free range over your neighbour's garden, or in allowing a crowing rooster to destroy your neighbour's rest and impair his health?

Just because there is no LAW to prevent you keeping a horse, are you justified in allowing stable odours and flies to invade your neighbours house?

And so on ad infinitum

Scavenging Work.

The licensed scavengers of the city have been supplied with receipt books, and when a house holder engages a man to do night work he should see that he receives from the scavenger one of these statements to show the inspector when he calls. Inability to produce this will be considered evidence that the work has not been done, or that it has been done by unqualified persons. It has been intimated that in some cases, to save expense the work has been done by householders themselves. This cannot be allowed; the risk of polluting wells and dis seminating typhoid is too great, and the value of a human life cannot be computed in dollars and cents. Pit closets must be abolished for the same reason.

Garbage.

Where there is no garbage collection remember this summer to keep all your garbage in a covered receptacle where the flies cannot gain access to it and have it removed at regular intervals to the incinerator, or better still burn it at home in the kitchen stove. On no account throw it out in the back yard to ferment and breed harmful organisms.

Stables.

Manure must be kept according to the Provincial Board of Health regulations, a copy of which has been, or will be delivered during this month to horse owners. These regulations will be strictly adhered to.

Slaughter Houses.

All slaughter houses not in accordance with the Provincial Board of Health regulations, or as near as possible in accordance with them, by May 1st, will be closed without further notice. Owners have had ample time to comply since the regulations were issued to them last fall.

Outbuildings.

Stables, fowl-houses, pig-sties, and outhouses should be thoroughly whitewashed with slacked lime, to which has been added some disinfecting agent such as carbolic acid, zenoleum or formaldehyde.

Vacant Lots.

Owners of vacant lots should see that these are cleared of accumulations of rubbish, tins, papers and weeds. While not perhaps directly injurious to health, weeds are a menace as they are convenient hiding places for obnoxious and offensive things such as dead cats, hens, etc.

Yards and Lanes.

Owners or persons having common rights in yards and lanes must be collectively responsible for the sanitary condition of same, and must come to some mutual arrangement with regard to keeping them clean, otherwise the innocent will be liable to be fined with with the guilty.

Garbage Cans.

While deploring the decoration (or desecration if you prefer the term) of our streets with garbage receptacles, it is an evil that cannot be helped under the present system, yet can be minimised by removing the cans as soon as possible. It spoils the look of the whole block when a garbage can and barrel are allowed to stay out on the sidewalk day after day as is often done even in the best residential districts. Attention to the foregoing observations will improve healthful conditions and prevent disease.

The following hints are issued by the Cleveland Health authorities in connection with its clean up campaign:—

The Alley.

The alley should be as clean as any other part of the premises. Waste paper causes more litter and unsightliness than any other one thing, unless it be tin cans. Do not allow them to disfigure your street or yard, either back or front.

A Short Lesson on Dirt and Disease Germs.

Contagious disease is caused by germs.

Germs live and breed in dirt.

If you allow dirt in your yard it will get into your house.

If you allow dirt or dust in your house it will be breathed into your lungs and will get into your food.

Germs which enter your body in either way may cause tuberculosis, diphtheria, smallpox, grippe, colds.

A Few Remarks About Flies.

Flies breed in manure and filth.

Flies carry disease germs on their feet.

Flies leave disease germs on food and dishes.

A Point or Two About Spitting.

If such persons spit on sidewalks, floors, or in street cars, the spit dries up and the germs are blown out in the air.

These germs will be breathed into the lungs and cause disease in others who are not strong.

Two Do's and a Don't.

Do clean up your house and yard.

Do kill the fly.

Don't spit in public places. Use a handkerchief.

Cleanliness Means Health.

Clean homes. Clean bodies. Clean food. Clean workshops. Fresh air. Sunlight. Exercise.

BEE-KEEPERS WILL MEET

Annual Convention Will Be Held Next Saturday

The annual convention of the Peterborough County Bee-Keepers' Association will be held in the Public Library next Saturday, April 17, at 2 p.m. A feature of the occasion will be an illustrated lantern address on the care and management of bees, which will be given by Prof. Morley Petit, of Guelph, the Provincial Apiculturist, and the Secretary of the Ontario Bee-Keepers' Association.

This is a year when prices for honey should rule high, and it is felt that there should be a large attendance at this meeting, which will be free. The annual election of officers will also take place.

Found Intact

PARIS, April 8—President Poincare, on his recent visit to his homestead at Lampigny to inspect the damage done by the bombardment of his property by the German, had the satisfaction of finding intact statute of the "Soldier of Marathon," presented to him by the inhabitants of Bar-le-Duc when he was elected President. It is not only a precious souvenir, but a work of considerable artistic value by the sculptor Collin.

The party found the village of Lampigny a mass of ruins. Of President Poincare's villa there remained only four blackened walls. Furniture and ornaments, personal and historical souvenirs, all broken and blackened, lay in heaps, with stone, slate, tiles and mortar.

The statute of the "Soldier of Marathon" was the only object left intact by the enemy's shells.

Canada Has Not Done Her Full Share, Said Mr. Dancey

Returned Canadian War Correspondent Makes a Plank Attack On Canadian War Lords Interesting Lecture In Victoria Hall Last Night

TO SPEAK ON BELGIUM TO-NIGHT

Mr. Stanley N. Dancey, war correspondent, entertained a large audience in Victoria Hall last night with an illustrated lecture on the war, that drew numerous bursts of applause. To-night he will deal particularly with the invasion of Belgium showing pictures of the destruction that has been wrought in many towns. Mr. Dancey spoke in the highest terms of the valor of the British and French soldiery, and to the people of "little Belgium" he gave first prominence for their share in the war. After being driven from Antwerp they were reduced to disorder. However, their remnants were quickly gathered together again, and held the Yser Canal against every assault. They are now in that section of the line, their British ally alongside them and the French farther west. Mr. Dancey also spoke of the manner in which the Irish turned to aid the Mother Country. He showed several good slides of Sir Edward Carson's army which, he said, had 17,000 recruits in the trenches and 23,000 in reserve, one of the best records in the army. And while a few Fenians in the south had endeavoured to stir up trouble they had met with slight response, and the whole island has answered the call.

And swinging round the Empire, Mr. Dancey expressed his opinion that Canada had not done her duty in the same measure as Australia and New Zealand. "I ask you," he said, "has Canada contributed as she should in proportion to her population." One hundred and thirty thousand men from a country whose population is about nine million was Canada's share. He did not mention, however, that there were more Canadian men volunteer than were required for the complement of the units outlined by the militia authorities.

'Round the Stores

AT RICHARD HALL & SON'S

"The Spring desire is on me,
For the shops are all athrong;
And the longing to be spending
Is a fever and a song.
There shall roses be and ribbons
Round the hat that I shall trim;
Oh, a laughing hat to crown me,
With a shadow in the brim!"

It has been frequently stated by visitors to the city, as well as by others whose experience in larger cities would entitle them to be good judges, that the general all-the-year-round window dressing of Peterborough's principal stores will compare favourably with any window dressing in the land. Perhaps no better example of this fact could be found just now than is to be seen in the artistic trim of the large plate-glass show windows of the Messrs. Richard Hall & Son's departmental store, George Street. The tone of the whole background dressing partakes of a lovely blue, generously interspersed with rich floral garniture, producing a beautiful rich Spring-like effect. The series of partly open French windows, fitted along the back wall and hung with a rich, mellow shade of coon-coloured drapery, is splendidly worked in. Other mechanical effects with illusive ideas so ingeniously developed as to harmonise with the fashion features portrayed in the window, add to the charm and interest of the exhibit—the whole setting forming a bright and fascinating picture which has been the cynosure of all eyes durring the week.

AT OAK HALL.

The local representative of the Oak Hall Clothing House, George Street, is to be congratulated on the attractiveness of his store premises. The preliminary displays of the new features in men's fashionable spring garments and haberdashery have been well appreciated. The smartest styles in men's suits and light-weight overcoats are evidence of the correct fashions from the new season's plates. The product of Oak Hall carries with it a fine custom of quality with that individuality in every line which professional and business men admire. To be ultra stylish does not mean to be extreme. The Oak Hall models are not extreme. The human body does not change with the fashions. When the fashions change the idea of Oak Hall is to produce the new fashion without causing extreme effects.

AT CAMPBELL & BEST'S.

A particularly attractive and seasonable window display is a feature this week at Campbell and Best's Hardware, Hunter Street. This window is of special interest to poultry fanciers, of whom we have a large number in Peterborough. The display features a number of poultry accessories of the latest and most approved kind, including brooders, feed boxes, drinking fountains, wire nests, electric welded wire fencing, etc. Three handsome specimens of Cochin Bantams supply the necessary touch of realism to this very effective display, which is a constant source of interest, and has elicited much favourable comment. See this window, by all means.

Called Husband But No Response

W. T. Whitnell, 132 Hunter Street Found Dead in Bed This Morning

Calling her husband to get up, as usual, this morning, at a quarter to six, Mrs. William Thomas Whitnell, 132 Hunter street, was surprised to find no response, and a few minutes later, on summoning her brother-in-law, who shook his brother, in an effort to wake him, was shocked to find that he was dead. Dr. Baker was called immediately, and on his arrival, stated that the late Mr. Whitnell had succumbed to heart failure and probably had been dead for half an hour. The deceased some months ago had been told by his physician that he had an enlarged heart, but for the past few months he had been in splendid health, and last night retired, feeling quite well.

The late Mr. Whitnell was in his thirty-seventh year. He was born in Kent, England, where his father still resides. He came to Canada ten years ago, and settled in this city. During the summer he had always been employed at Curtis' brickyard, but at the time of his death he was with the Peter Hamilton Co. He leaves to mourn his loss a widow and three small boys, as well as his father, six brothers and one sister. One brother, a member of the Royal Scotch Fusiliers, war killed last September at the Battle of Aisne. The surviving brothers are: Messrs. Archie, of Peterborough; Frank and Herbert, Toronto; Philip, of Niagara Falls, and Stanley and Daniel, in England. Mrs. Nicholls, of this city, is a sister.

The deceased was a member of the A.O.F.

The funeral will take place on Monday, announcement of which will be found in another column.

Bringing Ireland Closer to Empire

cluding the advance by the British and French armies, continue to multiply. Intervention on the part of the still hesitating neutrals seems to await mainly for the approach of warm spring weather.

Irishmen have had the most exciting week since the beginning of the war. Many felt considerable anxiety concerning the probable success of the great volunteer demonstration announced for Easter Day as heretofore volunteer movements have had to hack their way through innumerable difficulties including the idiotic faction difficulty, the arming and equipping of tens of thousands of men with merely private subscriptions and above all the difficulty of obtaining guns at a time when the world war makes every gun subject to a rival offer.

When the original volunteer force before the war was reduced by the 25,000 men they went to the front, most of the regiments were robbed of their drill sergeants, as these men were mainly reservists and were called. Nevertheless it was a demonstration of extraordinary success, even admitted by the Tory Journals of London, when 27,000 men marched in perfect order, most of them both armed and uniformed. Special honour was shown the Belfast regiment, every man of which was uniformed and carried a gun. It was given first place in the procession and was everywhere received with enthusiasm.

Still One Difficulty.

One difficulty is still outstanding, however. Redmond, again and again, has asked for the adoption of this splendid force as a garrison for Ireland, to enable the regular forces to go to the front. The question will probably remain unsolved until Parliament meets. In the meantime two epoch making facts have been established without opposition and without even protest. First, for the first time in more than a century a vast body of Nationalists marched with arms freely through the streets. Second, the new Irish parliament and the new Irish liberties have a good armed force to defend them. Considering that up to last week every attempt on the part of Irishmen to get a freeman's privilege of bearing arms failed and that when establishing volunteer territorial forces in the United Kingdom, Ireland was expressly excluded, this marks the biggest step forward for Irish liberties with the exception of Home Rule, during the century.

By a happy coincidence this enlargement of Irish liberties came simultaneously with a remarkable demonstration of the reconciliation of Ireland to the Empire. When the band of the famous Irish Guards arrived at Dublin from London in the midst of the volunteer demonstration, it was received with enthusiasm everywhere. It was tendered banquets, marched through cheering crowds and brought popular emotion to a climax by playing "God Save Ireland" and "Wearing of the Green." Recruiting in Dublin jumped to nearly three hundred a day. Thus has the war for freedom brought England and Ireland together.

POTATOES WERE PLENTIFUL AND RATHER WEAK

Price Held Around 50c. But Was Not Strong—Butter and Poultry Held Firmly

A MARKET MENACE

Potatoes were quite plentiful on the market this morning and there is every evidence that the farmers still have large supplies. Prices were 50 and 60 cents a bag and the market was weak at the lower figures. Only a slight influence is needed to knock off another ten cents and at ten o'clock to-day there were indications of lower prices before the noon hour.

Eggs were numerous at 17 to 19 cents a dozen. "I pick out all the small eggs and use them at home," said one woman who on that account quoted a two cent higher price than that which prevailed.

A dollar bill would buy one of the most likely looking chickens on the market. The general price ranged around this figure, with only a small supply offering.

Butter sold at 34 and 35 cents at ten o'clock and showed no signs of weakening. It is held by some that there are butter purchasers who do not know good butter. This is difficult to believe especially when one remembers that the sense of taste is common, although the qualities of the sense are not. In other words tastes vary, although it is difficult to understand how they can differ in butter. But accepting the statement as true the question arises which butter governs, the good or the mediocre. The idea is thrown out for the consideration of the efficient butter makers, not for the others. For instance in Otonabee there are many good butter makers who have regular customers and who should receive a standard price. But if butter of poor quality is knocked down in price it would seem that the price of good butter is weakened. In other words, its main selling quality is wholesomeness, does not support it. The result is that if the price is weakened in this way, butter becomes merely butter, quality is not rewarded. In the opposite direction, inferior butter is held up by the good. Selling for its actual worth it might bring 10 cents a pound. Some consumers would not carry it home. In short, is there any market protection or discrimination in behalf of quality butter makers? And you will find practically every citizen say, "Why the market is all right. Let it alone. What is there you can do?" Behind the administration of the market is a spirit of "we should worry," "let bad enough alone," or "laissez faire." There certainly is no initiative and no evidences of a desire to place the market on a proper basis. True it may be as good as the average town market, but that is nothing to our credit. And in the meantime supplies are falling off, and if co-operative selling becomes successful there is a probability that butter and eggs will almost disappear. A periodic shot in the wrist with this subject may cause the officials—there really are responsible officials—to realize what might and should be done.

Prisoner Was A Little Deaf

But He Heard Sentence of One Month at Hard Labour

Herbert J. Hodgins got one month hard labour at Castle Nesbitt this morning on a charge of having stolen a suitcase containing a black coat and vest, pair of trousers, two pairs of men's boots, a pair of men's drawers, and a hammer, valued at $12 in all, the property of Jas. Howden.

Hodgins could not hear and had to be brought closer to the Magistrate. He explained that he took the suitcase from the King George Hotel in mistake for his own, which was very much like it. He did not notice the mistake until he was nine miles from the city. He had no opportunity to bring it back for a couple of weeks. When he got off the train he gave it to an express driver to take to the Grand Hotel, and intended to get a meal and look up the owner. Before he could do this, however, he was arrested.

The police did not seem to know anything about this side of the question this morning, and Hodgins went down for a month.

Hodgins also explained that one pair of trousers and one pair of boots found when the police opened the suitcase were his property. This would not go with the police, however, who did not find any more clothes than their list called for. The pair of drawers were missing, but Hodgins denied any knowledge of them, remarking that he had the same clothes on that he had worn all winter.

STEALING A RIDE.

Arthur Bessercr was on his way to Ottawa on a C. P. R. train without a ticket. He got on at Windsor. He was arrested at the local station and spent the night in jail.

He pleaded guilty before Magistrate Dumble this morning to a charge of "Entering a C. P. R. train without the knowledge or consent of an officer of the said company with the intent of being fraudulently carried," and was fined $5, to be paid forthwith, and in default, 10 days in jail.

Canuck Gunners Turned Up a German Battery

Gunner Geo. P. Colquhorn Says That the Peterboro' Boys in the 4th Battery Have Been in Action Two Weeks and Shell Trenches Every Day.

THE COOK CHASED

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Colquhoun have received an interesting letter from their son, Gunner Geo. P. Colquhoun, one of the 24th Battery boys in the 4th Battery, 1st Brigade, C.E.F. Gunner Colquhoun, writing on March 18, says:

We have been in action for two weeks just to-day. When the first shells came near us I did not know how I felt, but I know it set me thinking for a while. They shelled the house we were in and it did not take some of the fellows long to get out. The Germans have the range of all the houses around here and drop a shell one in a while just to see how they can shoot. We had one fellow slightly wounded. Our battery turned up a German battery. We shell the trenches daily. Quite a number of German shells do not burst. The Sunday they shelled the house they broke up all the cook's crockery and of course he removed himself to the back of the house in a hurry.

Rod. Cameron Gets His Pony

Presentation Made at the Empire Theatre Last Night

The pony was presented to Master Rod Cameron at the Empire Theatre last night. Between the performances, one of the merchants on behalf of the others made a few brief remarks, outlining the recent pony contest. The boys of to-day will soon be men of the city, and the fight put up to be the successful boy, and others in this contest, is excellent example in the training of their younger years. He complimented the winner, and also spoke in excellent terms of the next boy, Percy Harrison.

Mr. W. H. Walkey, auditor, outlined the work of checking over all votes and announced he had audited all the merchants' books and personally supervised all counting of ballot and announced that the majority of votes were in favour of Rod Cameron, and then called on Master Rod and stated the pony and outfit were at the door, and congratulated him on his success.

The speech of the evening was from Master Rod. He thanked all those who helped him to be the owner of the pony. He promised to be kind and feed him well, and that he would have to teach him some manners yet, and that he would keep him for his own. If he had to dispose of him he would consult the merchants who donated the pony.

The Court ecided that a combined social concert and progressive euchre party be held at the next meeting on Thursday evening, the 29th inst., which will be free to the members and their friends. The ladies undertook to provide refreshments, and prizes will be awarded in connection with the euchre party. All members and their friends are cordially invited to attend.

The Bye-election In The North

Ward Will Be Contested by Three Candidates—Mr. G. O. Cameron Dropped Out

The bye-election in the North Ward has narrowed down to a three-cornered contest between W. S. Dodd, Dr. W. T. Holloway and ex-Alderman Langford. All three candidates have filed their declarations with the city clerk. As was expected Mr. G. O. Cameron did not qualify. He would like to have had the election go by acclamation in favour of ex-Alderman Langford, and was sorry when it was decided otherwise. There is not a great deal of interest being manifested in th issue, and present indications point to a quiet election with a small number of votes polled. All three men are well-known in the ward in which they are running, and it is likely to be a close fight for first place. Whoever is elected to fill ex-Alderman Johnston's place in the City Council, will find they have no sinecure as the wants of the North Ward are many, and when the ratepayers want anything they usually want it bad.

Mr. Gordon And Deputations

Mr. W. H. Hill Refers to Matter in Communication to The Examiner

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—One of the planks of Mr. G. N. Gordon's platform upon which he appealed to the electors of the City of Peterborough to be elected a member of the Board of Education read as follows:

"If I am elected I will see that "expensive deputations do not go "out of town on the people's money "with the suggested object of im- "proving the knowledge of the de- "putation in educational matters "when the benefit to these members "is nil."

Mr. Gordon had a short history while he was a member of the City Council in carrying out this plank of his platform, and the following cost of deputations of the City Council while he was a member of it will bear investigation:

EXPENSES OF DEPUTATION OF CITY COUNCIL

| | |
|---|---|
| During year 1912 | $557.53 |
| During year 1913 | 618.25 |
| During 1914 | 446.85 |
| Making a total expense for 3 years | $1,622.63 |

EXPENSES OF G. N. GORDON DURING THE TIME HE WAS A MEMBER OF CITY COUNCIL

| | |
|---|---|
| During 1912 | $34.38 |
| During 1913 | 40.55 |
| During 1914 | 43.35 |
| Making a total expense for 3 years | $118.28 |

The expenses of deputations paid by the Board of Education will stand favourable comparison and are as follows:

DURING THE YEAR 1912

| | |
|---|---|
| January— | |
| Deputation to Lindsay to inspect new school | $7.75 |
| April— | |
| Deputation to Trustees' Convention in Toronto | 26.20 |
| December— | |
| Deputation to Convention in Toronto re Feeble-minded Children of Province | 9.00 |
| Deputation to Toronto re Establishment Penny Bank | 12.00 |
| Representative in Toronto to attend meeting Executive Council Ontario Educational Association | 7.85 |

| | |
|---|---|
| March— | |
| Deputation to Toronto re Feeble-minded Children of Province | $9.00 |
| April— | |
| Deputation to Trustees' Convention in Toronto | 26.10 |
| | $35.10 |

| | |
|---|---|
| April— | |
| Deputation to Trustees' Convention in Toronto | $49.50 |
| Representative to meeting Technical Association, Toronto, re Industrial Classes | 5.00 |
| | $55.50 |
| Making in all the total expense of deputations for 3 years | $152.40 |

It will be observed that Mr. Gordon's expenses alone in attending deputations while he was a member of the City Council amounted to nearly as much for these three years as the whole expenses that were incurred in deputations by the Board of Education.

Since Mr. Gordon has been a member of the Board of Education he has approved of a deputation attending the Provincial Convention of Trustees and Teachers held in the City of Toronto. It is quite evident that Mr. Gordon's deputation plank is a fiercelict and its quality will compare favorably with the ring-boned, spavined and knee-sprung horses or paper-soled boots about which so much is written at the present time.—Yours, etc.,

W. H. HILL.

THE CITY BASEBALL LEAGUE HAS BEEN SUCCESSFULLY LAUNCHED

Officers Elected at an Enthusiastic Meeting in the Oriental Hotel Last Night—Mr. C. G. Graham is Elected President.

MEET ON MONDAY

Any doubts as to the success of the City Baseball League were dissipated last night by the large attendance and great enthusiasm shown at the meeting in the Oriental Hotel to organise the League. Chas. Paton, President of the Mercantile League last year, presided, and J. F. Milloy acted as secretary of the meeting. The following clubs were represented:

Empire A. C.
East City Baseball Club.
Classics.
Thistles.
South Ends.

In opening the meeting Mr. Paton gave a short report on the operations of the Mercantile League last season. In spite of many handicaps he considered that it had been a success.

A motion that a City League be organised was carried unanimously and the election of officers proceeded with, the following being elected:

Hon. President — J. H. Burnham, M.P., and G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P.
President—C. G. Graham.
Vice-President—J. J. Howden.
Secretary—J. F. Milloy.
Treasurer—D. Shook.
Executive—The President, Secretary and Treasurer, with one representative from each club.

There was a long discussion over the number of teams. Some of those present advanced the opinion that four teams were enough and that more would lower the class of the ball played. A motion that the matter should be settled at last night's meeting was defeated and it was decided to hold another meeting on Monday night at the Empress Hotel to decide how many and what teams shall constitute the membership of the League.

The admission fee into the League was fixed at $25 and it was decided that it should be paid on or before April 23rd.

All teams wishing to enter must have two representatives present on Monday night.

Old Country Football News

Manchester United's chances of remaining in the first division are fast slipping away. Middlesboro are due at Old Trafford to-day, which is another stiff proposition for them. Tottenham Hotspurs will fight hard at Blackburn to improve their chances of remaining in the charmed circle, but if the Rovers are in anything like form they should further increase their points total. West Bromwich are coming down the straight at a gallop, and look as if they meant to be in at the kill at all events.

Preston at Clapton and Derby at home to Bristol City in the second division both give promise of keeping themselves well in front. Nothing must be given way, however.

In the Southern League West Ham are due at Plymouth, where they'll find the going hard. Watford are at home to Norwich City, and if they display the form that has characterised their efforts of late should gain a valuable couple of points.

In the Scottish League Celtic appear to have victory assured against Aberdeen at Celtic, while Hears will have a hard row to hoe at Greenock against the strong Morton Club.

NEW YORK WELCOMES WILLARD TO-NIGHT

NEW YORK, April 9.—A public welcome and demonstration in honour of Jess Willard has been arranged for the arrival of the new world's champion heavyweight here to-night. A reception committee of men prominent in the sporting world will meet him at the railroad station and an escort of paraders headed by a band, and including a detachment of boy scouts and members of the Kansas Society, and other organizations, will lead the champion's progress up Seventh avenue and Broadway to the St. Nicholas Club.

Next week Willard will begin a two weeks' engagement at a local vaudeville theatre. As boxing exhibitions are permitted only in licensed athletic clubs, the champion will appear in a sketch.

According to an announcement today, Willard will make a theatrical tour of the country, which will prevent him from boxing again for nine months or a year. In the meantime it was thought the real contenders for the title will be reduced to one or two.

U.S. District Attorney Marshall said to-day that if the films of the Willard-Johnson fight are brought to New York from Havana they will be detained until a judicial ruling has been given on the question of admitting the films of the Ritchie-W ch contest, which were brought here from London recently. The collector of the port, Dudley F. Malone, said he would exclude the films from entry.

'HER HUSBANDS' EXTRAVAGANCE "UNCONCEIVABLE"

NEW YORK, April 8—Dr. John R. Hopkins who made a fortune in the patent medicine business and for years has been one of the most picturesque figures in the South, lived "a dissolute life," according to Wm. C. Arnold, who, as referee, yesterday recommended in the Supreme Court that a divorce decree be granted to Mrs. McKie Bennet Hopkins. Mr. Hopkins. Mr. Hopkins, who is living at the St. Regis, is said by Mr. Arnold to have practiced an extravagance which is "unconscienable."

Dr. and Mrs. Hopkins have been married for thirty-three years. Both are known in this city and Atlanta, Ga., where the physician lives, in a $140,000 home. Russell Hopkins, their only son, eloped in 1906 with Vera Siegrist, then seventeen years old, a granddaughter of the late Dr. J. J. Lawrence of No. 1060 Fifth Avenue. When Dr. Lawrence died he left $1,000,000 to their baby daughter and left his Fifth Avenue home to the wife.

Mr. Arnold's report goes into detail regarding Dr. Hopkins' alleged acts of misconduct. Until seven years ago, says the referee, Dr. Hopkins prospered in business and his tastes grew luxurious, so that their gratification more than offset his prosperity. His habits, says Mr. Arnold, "culminated in reckless extravagance, even measured by his conditions in life."

Part After Twenty-Five Years.

Although Dr. and Mrs. Hopkins were married at West Point, Miss., on May 16, 1881, and lived together for more than twenty-five years, they finally became estranged over money matters, it is said. She left their home in Atlanta, Ga., following a period of disagreement, during which says the referee, "she failed to recognize the obligations of a wife under the defendant's roof."

Dr. Hopkins began "to imbibe intoxicating liquors" soon after his wife left him.

During the absence of Mrs. Hopkins her husband kept three servants in his home in Atlanta, and their testimony is said to have been coupled with that of women who were entertained at the home. One woman is said to have "detailed the events with great particularity," and the servants are said to have verified the particulars.

"While it is hard to understand," says Mr. Arnold, "how a man enjoying a good reputation in a community in which he resides could have committed the acts alleged, under the circumstances shown to have existed, yet the testimony is so clear and uncontroverted as to leave no doubt in any reasonable mind."

Mr. Arnold says that while Dr. Hopkins did not endeavour to deny the accusations, he attempted to justify his conduct by asserting that his wife's treatment of him and her extravagance forced him into such a condition of mind that he was unmindful of his acts. Mr. Arnold says of the physician's defence:

Refers to Extravagance.

"I am not prepared to differ with him for the extravagance of the plain tiff seems to me to have been unconscionable.' He asserts that the proofs submitted indicate that Mrs. Hopkins has spent in the last seven or eight years an average of $35,000 a year, which, says the referee, "indicates her wanton waste of money, and her utter disregard for mere martial obligations."

Mr. Arnold finds that Dr. Hopkins now is worth about $11,277. His income for 1914 was only $4,882, he says, although for the preceding six years it was between $12,000 and $24,000 a year. The sudden drop is attributed to the fact that the physician has entered in late years the business of "loan broker, and a business of that character has been greatly impaired by public opinion and governmental restrictions; this is to say nothing of the financial depression."

Since 1907 Mr. Arnold finds that Mrs. Hopkins has spent $50,000 more than the total income of her husband, and that Dr. Hopkins has been forced to dispose of his property to meet the obligations incurred by her. His home, which is valued at $140,000, Mr. Arnold considers all out of proportion to the rest of the estate.

The referee recommends $2,000 a year in alimony for Mrs. Hopkins, to be paid monthly.

In the Control Station of the "Queen Elizabeth"

Cordite Charges Are Contained in Big Silken Bags—Leviathan Warship Queen Elizabeth, Her Sailors and Her 15-in. Guns That Talk

"I wonder how old Baggybreeches 'll like Lizzie's first words?" quoth Number One.

"He'll soon learn that it's no use chippin' back again when Lizzie speaks," replied Number Two, looking admiringly upon the huge breech of a 15-inch gun.

The "Lizzie" thus referred to is officially known as H.M.S. Queen Elizabeth. But sailors have their own names for warships, and these do not always tally with the Navy List designations. Thus the Queen Elizabeth has become "the Lizzie," and as such bluejackets will know her as long as she floats.

She was preparing to open fire upon the Dardanelles forts. From the control station in her maintop an officer watched a seaplane that was climbing like a condor in the air, flashing back messages to the ship meanwhile. In this frail structure of canvas and wood that was humming away in the clouds were two men, a pilot to drive the machine, and an observer whose duty it was to give the Queen Elizabeth's gunners information that would enable them to pour with deadly accuracy a crushing avalanche of steel upon a fort they could not see, and from which no one could see them, as it lay on the other side of a steep hill. So wonderful a thing is modern gunnery that the marksman does not need to see his objective. Direction and distance are enough for him.

The Gun's Crews.

Inside the turret stood the gun's crews, surrounded by an array of levers, dials, and other instruments. A jerk from a lever, and half the floor disappeared. Then out from the black depths of what looked like an oubliette came a huge steel projectile weighing nearly a ton. The breech of the gun opened and the projectile disappeared into it. Next up bobbed the cordite charges in big silken bags, and they too were swallowed by the gun.

No one touched them. Right from the bottom of the ship they came automatically until they reached the place where the great gun opened its mouth and gobbled them up, with the aid of an automatic rammer, which slid forward and gave the charge a push into the capacious maw. Then the ponderous breech swung to and clamped fast—the gun was loaded.

In the spotting station aloft the range-finder trained his instrument in accordance with the information which came from the hovering seaplane, whilst the clockwatcher kept a keen eye upon his dials. A succession of orders passed from the "spotters" to the silent cabinet below, and were thence transmitted into the turret, where director trainers, sight-setters, and captains of the turrent acted promptly upon them.

When "Lizzie" Speaks.

They were bringing a 15-inch gun to bear upon a target some 15 miles away.

As the sensitive instruments worked, the great gun moved quickly, easily, in response to their directions. The formidable muzzle rose slowly upward until the right elevation was obtained, then swung left and right, as though smelling around for its prey.

At last it "pointed" accurately, and "all ready" was passed.

Then, in the directing station aloft, an officer pressed a small key. Instantly an electric spark crackled in the breech of the gun, whilst from its muzzle there belched a sort of volcanic eruption, a big flash of peculiarly bright flames and a dense volume of heavy smoke, from the midst of which a huge projectile flew spinning and screaming away over the distant hilltop, whilst the gun slid slowly back, from the force of the recoil, then moved forward, ready for loading again.

Lizzie had spoken—and very hard and bitter to their ears was the "word" she dropped amongst the surprised enemy in the place far away behind the hill, where they had fancied themselves secure from any such conversation.

WAR HAS PUT FEW FRENCH OUT OF WORK

"The war has put very few wage earners out of employment in France says Secretary Jouhaux of the Federation of Labour syndicates of the department of the Seine.

"Of the six million workmen in France," he added, "it is estimated that between one and one-half and two million are in the army. The rest find plenty to do. Building is at a standstill, but other industries absorb the help thus made idle. Machinists and metal workers generally in the unoccupied regions, are working to the limit. Nearly all the little local machine shops, as well as the large establishments, such as motor-car works, and engine building plants are doing something for the army, making shells or cartridges, or repairing motor cars and other parts of the equipment.

"For a general revival of commerce a full revival of industry is necessary," says Monsieur Jouhaux, "and that can come only with the end of hostilities; consequently the shopkeeper suffers far more than the worker."

Monsieur Jouhaux, who is one of the conspicuous militants of the revolutionary wing of the Socialist party and in close touch with Socialists of all European countries, predicts that the issue of the war will have a greater repercussion upon internationalism than upon nationalism, supposing the allies were victorious. "It is this eventuality" he says "that has had a deterring influence upon Italy. The shaking of imperialism, represented by the German allied empires, is necessarily disturbing to crowned heads already alarmed by the growth of Socialism in their kingdoms. The Czar understood what it would mean and has suddenly become liberal.

"As to France, a militant victory will be worth only its economic triumph; the so-called political reforms we have fought for are really economic since the necessary justice to the man whose effort produces the wealth of the nation will prove an economic advantage. We are done with politicians and politics; their elimination from our movement, and the war, will put an end to an equivocal situation.

"The syndicates, whose anti-patriotism was feared in case of war, have proven in the trenches what they are worth in the country, and their influence will be so much the greater. The struggle between capital and labour will doubtless be resumed after the other great battle has been won, but it will be conducted with less passion than before.

Briggs—"What did your wife say about your staying out so late the other night?"

Griggs—"Don't ask me yet. When she gets through with the subject I'll condense it for you."

A cubic mile of river water weighs about 5,205,650,000 tons and carries in solution an average of 420,000 tons of solids.

"MADE IN CANADA"

Ford Touring Car Price $590

No advance in the price of the "Made in Canada" Ford will be made because of the additional 7½% War Tariff. We as loyal Canadians will gladly absorb whatever increased duty we are forced to pay on such raw materials as cannot be obtained at home. The Ford is manufactured in Canada—not assembled in Canada.

Amendments Accepted By The Government

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 10—Sir Robert Borden, in the House of Commons this morning on behalf of the Government, accepted the amendments made by the Senate to the resolution providing for an increase in the representation of the Upper House in Western Canada. The amendment provides that the legislation shall not come into effect until after the dissolution of the present parliament.

Sir Robert, in the course of a short speech, said that the Senate amendment was practically the same as the one of last year, and which had not been accepted by the Government. The only difference was that it did not refer to the representation of the provinces in the Lower House. He regretted the attitude of the Upper House, remarking that it had again insisted on passing this amendment for reasons which were quite obvious.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who followed, took exception to the statement of the Prime Minister, that the Senate had again made this amendment "for obvious reasons." He did not think there was any justification for such a slur on the Upper House. The inference from the remark was that this had been done by the senators in the hope that in event of a general election the Liberals would have the opportunity of appointing these Senators.

Hon. Robert Rogers said that never in the history of a Canadian Parliament have representatives of the people been feed with more humiliating conditions. Although elected to represent the people, he said we are not allowed to carry out a democratic form of government.

Mr. MacDonald, in reply, said that this government had been in power for four years, but it had during that period not taken any steps to reform or abolish the Senate.

In regard to the matter of its own representation Mr. MacDonald thought that the Senate had a particular righ to express its views.

PETERBORO COUNTY FARMERS PLOUGHING

Two farmers in Smith Township were out ploughing yesterday. This is the first of the season, so far, and it will not be long before there is more if the present weather continues. The farmers who ventured forth yesterday report an absence of frost with a tendency to dryness. The latter condition will probably be taken care of by the spring rains. At the present time it looks as though the spring work will open up about the same time this year as last.

Land in Fine Condition.

Winnipeg, April 10—Reports continue to come of seeding starting at various points throughout the prairie provinces. The ground is in xcellent condition for planting. Land is in the best shape that it has been for eight years, says a despatch from Sterling, Alta. There is apparently plenty of moisture for the present at most points.

A LITTLE CORRECTION

Editor, The Examiner:

Sir,—The Review on "the mayoralty election in Chicago" is contemptible. Its editorial closes with the assertion that 'the electoarte was not to be swung by a distorted appeal to religious motives and prejudices."

That is probably quite true of Chicago, but the editor of the Review distorts the facts and appeals to prejudice. It would have its readers believe there was a fight between Catholics and Protestants and that the woman's vote had a marked effect upon the result.

The truth is that the racial issue was the one involved. Candidate Sweitzer was backed by the leading Germans, Austrians and Hungarians, who issued a signed circular calling upon their countrymen to vote the Sweitzer ticket as an endorsement of the war policies of Germany and Austria-Hungray. This circular was adorned with photographs of Kaiser Wilhelm and Emperor Francis Joseph and stated that a vote for Sweitzer was a vote of confidence in the Teuton alliance of Europe. This inflamed the American spirit in Chicago and gave 136 thousand majority to Mr. Thompson.

The English press will see the significance of the Chicago incident and give it a little higher value than the Review.

"Protestant."

A Quiet Campaign.

By all accounts there will be very little campaigning in the North Ward. It is a big ward to cover, and the issue does not present the same interest as it does in January.

EMBARRASSING TO NAVY DEPARTMENT

Arrival of German Cruiser Kron Prinz at This Time is Confusing —Will Enforce Neutrality

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The arrival of the German cruiser Kron Prinz Wilhelm at Newport News just at this time, was distinctly embarassing to the Navy Department. It means that during the entire time that the British blockading fleet is held off the Virginia Capes, which may be thirty days, if the Prinz Eitel precedent is followed, it will be in the way of the Atlantic fleet now in the Roads, preparing for spring target practice in the Tangier Sound. The fleet steaming in and out must watch out for British and French blockaders, and the possibility of an American warship being mistaken for a German raider will always be present. The Navy Department, however, is better prepared than ever before to enforce neutrality. Officials here declare they have no doubt that the Kron Prinz put in to Newport News to intern, in accordance with the precedent. However, Commander Thierfeldt will not do so until he has exhausted every excuse to remain.

WAR ODDITIES

LONDON — A corporal's letter told how he was about to bayonet a German when the latter frantically waved a union card showing his membership in the British Engineer's Union, of which the corporal was a member. It saved the German's life.

AMSTERDAM — A German landwehr private who had 66 wounds, including 18 shrapnel bullet holes, was operated on, losing a leg and an eye. He will live.

LONDON — Every time the superdreadnought Queen Elisabeth shells the Dardanelles forts for an hour it costs the taxpayers of England $1,000,000.

PARIS—German soldiers who were toy-makers before the war propped up in their trench a dummy, facing the French. The French fired and at every hit the dummy raised a hand and curled his moustache.

RUSSIAN TROOPS ARE NOW WITHIN 4 MILES OF VALLEY

Last Hill Held by Enemy in West Carpathians Has Fallen --Battle is Desperate

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, April 11.—Having secured all the summits of the Carpathians in the western range, including Hill 909, around which solitary crest the Austro-German forces for some days had been making a desperate stand, the Russians now are fighting for the possession of the Uszok Pass, the last and strategically the most important of the several gateways to the Hungarian plains. According to Saturday's and Sunday's official reports from Petrograd, Russian troops, advancing over a country where the snow lies seven feet deep, at latest reports had reached a point within four miles of the Uszok valley, where the pass runs out of the mountains on the Hungarian side.

Several more of the heights defending the pass have been lost by the Austrians, after severe fighting, in which the Russians took 1,000 prisoners.

The Russian forces already on the southern slopes of the Carpathians further west are defending their recently-gained positions against persistent and violent attempts by the Germans and Austrians to throw the Russian invaders back upon the summits of the range. The passing of the crest and the beginning of the present actions on the Hungarian slopes was marked by the capture of Hill No. 909. The Austrians and their German reinforcements at once began a series of counter-attacks in an effort to stem the onrush of the Czar's forces from the crest of the ridge, but this effort so far has been unavailing. The Russians have captured one battalion of the troops which were engaged in these attacks.

AUSTRIAN COUNTER MOVE.

An Austrian offensive movement is being prosecuted in the direction of Stry, in Eastern Galicia, according to the Russian official report, but nothing is forthcoming in the way of details as to this engagement. Little activity is reported in Poland. Isolated encounters have occurred in the region west of the Niemen, but no general movement.

Without definite figures upon which to base the assertion, military observers in England believe that more than 3,000,000 men are now fighting over a battle front of about 100 miles in the Carpathians. It is not a direct alignment, but winds in and out of the mountain passes from Bartfeld to south of Uszok. Masses are descending the valley of the Laborcz by way of Bartfeld and wedges are coming forward from Lupkow.

Of the number of men in the field the Austrians and the Germans combined have 1,200,000 men, while the Russians have many more than that. Just how many more no one knows but they are in sufficient numbers to take every height they come to no matter how well it may be defended. They hlod the advantage at every point and if it were not for the deep snows they would move more rapidly towards the plains of Hungary.

Before the Russians get out of the foothills of the Carpathians on the southern slopes, as they are called, the fighting will be terrific. Enough is known to say that as they retire the Teutons fortify more heights, and to reach these the Russians must go down into valleys or force narrow passes. There is nothing but the highest praise for the tactics followed by the Russians in this latest campaign. They have not taken one step that has not been carefully planned beforehand. Their supplies have been where they are needed and their munitions also. Their men are fed and their wounded are taken care of. Their advance between Polianka and Bartfeld, for instance, squeezed the Austrians out of Dukla Pass. Once that was held another thrust compelled the Austrians to withdraw from Mezo-Laborcz, and this process repeated from west to east turned over to the Russians all the important passes of the mountains and permitted them to begin the descent.

One fact seems to strike the observers in London most favourably. The two great armies of the West and the East are now acting in harmony.

The French offensive on the Meuse and in the Champagne district comes at the same moment the Russians are plunging down towards Ungvar and the key to the Hungarian plains. There will be no time now for the Germans to shift army corps from one zone to another, no matter how good the transportation facilities may be.

400 GERMANS CHARGED IN MUD BUT STUCK AND WERE SLAIN

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, April 12.—"We are still at the same old game, and in the same old place, killing a few of each other each day, and no one really can tell what is going to happen," writes Company Sergeant-Major S. J. Jones to his mother from the firing line. C. S. Major Jones is connected with the 1st Battalion, the King's Regiment, 1st British Expeditionary Force, 6th Infantry Brigade.

"We do know that there is going to be some very big move on in a few days' time, and God only knows what we shall suffer, as we have to go over ground that is mined, and I really don't look forward to getting out of this without getting wounded. I shall be lucky, as there are so many killed now, and the Germans seem to make a set at N. C. O.'s and officers. Anybody who wears any sort of a distinctive badge appears to get shot."

In another letter to his mother he states that they are in a terrible mess, covered with mud. "We do 24 hours in the forward trench, which is waist deep with mud and water. We then go back about a mile for 24 hours' rest. We change over at about seven each night, and I am sure that the Germans will get us yet as we change.

A Charge That Failed.

"We are only 80 yards from the German trenches, and on the 6th we started to sing to them 'Has Anyone Seen a German Band?' We must have got their 'rag' out, for about 400 charged us. They got about 30 yards and then stuck in the mud. Didn't we have some fun. We gave them about 40 rounds rapid fire and then went out to mix it up with them. I bayoneted seven myself. They cried 'Merci, monsieur,' which in French means 'Thank you, sir.' They didn't mean it that way, but we dare not show them any mercy.

German Treachery.

"The other day 70 of them came up to the English trenches with their hands above their heads, saying 'We surrender.' When they got to the trenches each one had two hand grenades in their hands, and they threw them in, killing and wounding about 300 of the King's Royal Rifles." He mentions that a friend of his from the old country was got by a sniper while standing by his side.

In another letter to his mother and father he thanks God for the response from Canada and all the colonies. "Now we know that, whatever happens, our loved ones are safe from Teutonic rule. If I go under I shall have my face towards Berlin and know that I have done my duty to my country. I have been recommended for the distinguished service medal and the documents are not back yet from England."

"KRONPRINZ" PUTS IN AT AMERICAN HARBOUR

Last of the Enemy's Warships on the High Seas is Accounted For---Sank Fifteen Vessels

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

NORFOLK, April 12.—The last of the Kaiser's sea raiders, the Kronprinz Wilhelm, steamed into Hampton Roads shortly after six o'clock yesterday morning and dropped anchor off Old Point Comfort. The United States' submarine G-1, which had sighted the Kronprinz in the mists off Thimble Shoal Lightship, escorted the converted cruiser to her anchorage.

According to Captain Thierfeldt and his first lieutenant it was sickness among prisoners—beri-beri, from eating too much rice and drinking bad water—together with the poor condition of the cruiser that forced the Kronprinz to abandon her daring exploits. In the past eight months since she left New York harbour she sank fifteen vessels, thirteen of which were British. Time after time she operated under the very noses of the fast and powerful cruisers whose one aim was to catch and sink her. And once she fought her way out of a dangerous predicament when she stumbled under the British cruisers Berwick, Suffolk and Bristol. Her career of eight months was all touch and go adventure, but in all the time Captain Thierfeldt never accomplished a bolder exploit than when his alertness took him safely through last night. Unless, as is probably the case, officers of the British warships patrolling the coast knew that there were British prisoners on board and deliberately allowed the Kronprinz Wilhelm to pass unchallenged to port.

CAPTAIN TO INTERN.

It seems certain that Captain Thfeldt will follow the course taken by Ceutain Thierschen, of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich, and consent to the internment and dismantlement of his ship until the end of the war. Of course, that cannot be taken for granted, but now that the Kronprinz is in an American port it is hardly likely that she could again evade the swarm of cruisers that will gather off the coast.

A glance at the great bulk of the Kronprinz—it will be recalled that before the war began she was a 21,000 ton luxuriously appointed and very fast North German Lloyd liner—disclosed that her long cruise had put the ship in very bad shape.

Her gray war paint was scarred. Streaks of rust showed upon her plates. She was, for all of her four funnels and imposing bulk, as disreputable as an ancient tramp that had weathered months of gales and pounding seas.

Almost her last exploit prevented the British cruisers, very likely, from destroying the Prinz Eithel Friedrich, Thierfeldt and Thierschen, talking by wireless weeks ago—the only means of communication they had—arranged a scheme by which the Eitel could slip into port safely. It was simplicity itself. The Kronprinz apparently permitted the fact that she was in a certain general position to reach the British ship.

There was a scurry for her—all anxious to send her to the bottom. And in the meantime the Eitel freed from the vigilance of the British by the Kronprinz's stratagem, slipped into Newport News and tied up.

Ontario Winter Wheat Down 30c a Barrel Only Temporary Drop

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs will appear in Canadian Grocer this week:

Office of Publication, Toronto, April 9.—Ontario Winter Wheat Flour is down 30c a barrel this week in the Toronto market. This is because business has been rather slow the last month that millers find themselves under the necessity of going out and getting it by hook or by crook. It would not appear, judging by the prices of wheat on Chicago and Winnipeg Exchanges, that any reduction in flour of any sort is justifiable just now, but millers feel it necessary to have a reduction. It is to be noticed, however, that this is only a temporary condition. Flour at $7.20 a barrel when May wheat is quoted at $1.56½ on the Chicago Exchange and $1.58½ at Winnipeg is incongruous. And if wheat prices continue to reach up to the high level they have now resumed, flour will probably jump to higher prices than are quoted now.

The cereal business is quiet all through. There is some demand just now for rolled oats and barley, both pearl and pot, but it is not anything like normal. Mill-feed business is a little better, but in the case of this latter it is the last rally before the thing breaks up. Grass will begin to grow pretty soon and we shall undoubtedly see a slump in the price of mill-feed.

The wheat market both in Chicago and Winnipeg has become interesting. Wheat is quoted at the time of writing in Chicago at $1.56¼. In Winnipeg it is $1.53½. These are getting back to the high prices we saw two or three weeks ago, and they are as high almost as any during the last six months. Apparently the feeling is that while vague and indefinite rumour puts the end of War a great deal nearer than was at first supposed, there is nothing definite to go upon. There is, apparently, a growing feeling among operators that while everything may be working toward an approaching Peace, they have no absolute guarantee of this. Under war conditions the present prices of wheat seem justified. Experts claim that the United States has already sold all the surplus wheat for export and that it is now awaiting shipment. If this is so the cash situation in May will be very tight. This in its turn will mean higher prices for new crop wheat. The present comparison between May and July wheat is $1.56 for the former and $1.55 for the latter. This is a disparity of 82c. That is not at all out of the way if the War is over by the time of the new crop. If not we shall expect to see higher prices for July wheat even than this 1.55 now quoting.

Fishmen both in Montreal and Toronto report an unusually good Easter trade and also that the week after Easter has not fallen off—as it has done some previous seasons—in the amount of business done. This is all the more singular when it is taken in conjunction with the enormous sale of new-laid eggs, which have been so cheap over Easter. The Fish Market is usually pretty strong all the way through Lent, but afterwards it generally falls off to its pre-Lenten level. Fresh fish is now a good deal in demand. Most people are still pretty heavily stocked with frozen lines, the man who has fresh fish to sell getting the business. There is a general preparation, however, for stocks of fresh fish this next week and thereafter it will have the larger sale.

There is the usual difference to be found in the prices of poultry this week and last. Most lines, fowls, chickens, turkeys, geese, so on show a decrease this week over last week of about 3c. Occasionally this is more; sometimes it is less. The Jewish Passover last week meant an immense sale of poultry, and prices towards the end became very firm indeed. Deliveries were exceptionally light, and on is led to suppose that the farmers instead of shipping poultry into the town made he Jew go out after it. There seems to have been a feeling among farmers that it is a better thing to keep hens as egg-producers rather than sell them as live poultry.

Larger Area Will Be Seeded

In Germany—May Be Crop Shrinkage in Europe

Special Cable to The Examiner:

CHICAGO, April 12—Latest cable advices from the Liverpool Corn Trade News say that journal's advices from Berlin and other points in Germany are of good crop prospects and of a larger area seeded than could have been hoped for a few months ago. It is said that careful measures have been taken by Germany to seed all the available land in the invaded district of France.

Broomhall, however, says that Europe normally raises the greater portion of the world's wheat, and that it has been learned by careful investigation that the crop shrinkage from the loss of acreage and otherwise will be greater this year.

The movement of wheat to primary markets keeps up to good proportions as compared with last year, the total last week being 2,841,000 bushels compared with 2,992,000 bushels the week before. Farmers are not only in the northwest, but in the southwest are holding their wheat firmly, and it is likely that they will continue to do so until they are prepared to say as to the final outcome of the crop.

"THE GRELL MYSTERY"

By Frank Frocst

"Now," he said sternly. "Tell me if your father signed the cheque you cashed, or whether you put his signature to it yourself?"

Her lips moved dumbly and the room seemed to quiver around her. Finely as she had held herself in control hitherto, she was now thoroughly unnerved. She covered her face with her hands, and her frail figure shook with dry sobs. Foyle waited patiently for the outburst to pass. Suddenly she sprang to her feet and faced him with clenched hands.

"Yes, I did sign it," she blazed. "My father was out, and I wanted the money at once. He will not mind — he would have given it to me had he been here."

He checked her with a deprecating movement of his hand. "Don't excite yourself, please," he said soothingly. "I felt bound to let you see there was a serious reason why I should press you to give an account of your movements to-day. Sit down quietly for a moment."

He waited patiently while he resumed her seat. He had foreseen that while she was on her guard he was unlikely either by threats or coaxing to induce her to speak. The hint of forgery had been deliberately intended to throw off her balance. She could not know that her blotting-pad had betrayed that and more. Nor could she know that without the evidence of her father and the bank officials—neither of which was likely to be willingly given in the circumstances—she was not amenable to a criminal charge. "Will you tell me now why you were so anxious to obtain that money—why you could not wait for an hour or two until your father returned? Don't hurry yourself. Think. Remember that I shall be able to check what you say."

"I—I——" She choked and gulped as if swallowing something.

"Will it help you if I tell you that two of the notes which were given in exchange for the cheque were changed at a tailor's shop at Kingston, where a rough-looking man bought an overcoat and a suit of clothes?"

"You—know—that?" she gasped, the words coming slowly one by one from her lips. The accuracy of his knowledge, and the swiftness with which it must have been gained both astonished and astounded her.

"I know that," he repeated. "And I know more. I know, for instance, that Mr. Grell went to Sir Ralph Fairfield before applying to you. Did he tell you that?" he waited, but she made no answer. "I know too that he has left London. You know where he is making for. Where is it?"

Slowly she shook her head. "I can't tell you," she cried vehemently. "You cannot force me to. He is an innocent man. You know he is. You can expose me—tell all the world that I have been guilty of forgery if you like—you will not get me to lift a finger to hound him to his death."

Foyle had failed. He knew it was of little use pushing the matter further. He picked up his hat and gloves and mechanically passed a hand over his forehead. But there was one thing that had to be done before he left. "I will not trouble you any further now," he said in a level voice. "I may take it you will tell your father of the — the banking episode. That will relieve me of a rather painful task."

"I will tell him," she said dully.

"Then good evening, Lady Eileen."

"Good evening."

The superintendent drew on his gloves as he passed out of the street door. "She knows her own mind, that girl," he said to himself. "She won't give away a thing. Either she's very much in love with him, or ——"

He rounded the corner into Berkeley Street.

CHAPTER XLV.

The first part of the commission given by Heldon Foyle to Chief Detective-Inspector Green was simple to execute and cost him no effort of ingenuity. A straight drive through into Kinaston, a call at the tailor's shop where Grell had refitted himself with clothes, and a few minutes' conversation with the assistant who had served him, gave him all the facts concerning the appearance of the man he was following.

"I'd better take these two notes away," he said, beginning to fold up the flimsies. "I shall want you to keep a note of the numbers, in case you are called upon to give evidence."

The tailor scratched his head doubtfully, and cast a glance on a policeman passing slowly on the other side of the street. He was beginning to suspect the tall stranger who asserted he was a police officer, and so calmly appropriated money. He was wondering whether, after all, it might not be an ingenious schemes of robbery. He had heard of such things, and the composure of the detective did not comfort him. Green had given no proof of his identity beyond his bare word.

With some mumbled excuse the tailor stepped to the door and beckoned to the policeman. With much volubility he explained the situation and his suspicions. The constable listened gravely. He was very young to his duties, and remembered the cautions that had been given him not to accept any one's word where actions were suspicious.

"He didn't show you a warrant-card, did he?" he asked. "All right, Mr. Jones, you leave this to me." And he marched importantly into the shop.

Green, who had just lit a well-worn briar pipe, and was waiting for the assistant to return in order to pay him the value of the notes, smiled grimly at the apparition of the constable in uniform. He guessed exactly what had happened.

"This is the man?" asked the police officer. The tailor nodded, and the went on, addressing Green, "What's this about you taking money and pretending to be a police officer?" He had produced an official notebook and looked very important as he loomed in the doorway, gazing sternly at the detective. "Don't answer any questions unless you want to. You know I shall have to take anything you say down in writing, and it may be used as evidence against you."

The situation had a piquant humour that tickled Green. The constable was strictly within his duty, as he had been called in, but the pomposity of his manner betokened that he was very, very young in the service. In a deliberate silence the detective felt in his pocket for a warrant-card that would clear up the mistake. A moment later he was wildly searching all his pockets without success. For the first time in a lifetime in the service he must have been careless enough to leave it at home.

He flourished a number of envelopes inscribed "Chief Detective-Inspector Green, New Scotland Yard, S.W.," but the knowing look of the young constable was emphasized by the cock of the eyebrows. Green never carried official documents except when he was obliged to.

"That won't do, old chap," said the constable, in the manner of one well used to the ways of the criminal fraternity. "You don't come that on me. You might have written those envelopes yourself. You'll have to come along."

If the letter had failed to impress him, Green felt certain that his visiting-card would be of little use. Since he had decided to visit the police station in any case, it did not much matter. It was humiliating, in a way, but it did not much matter.

"All right, my man," he said authoritatively. "I'll see the station officer. Send for a cab."

"Cool hand, isn't it?" whispered the policeman to the tailor. "See how he's dropped trying to pull off his bluff on me. Just hop out and see if you can find a cab. I'll keep an eye on him."

So it was that a high official of the Criminal Investigation Department reached an outlying police station under the conduct of a young constable whose swelling pride was soon reduced to abject misery as the divisional-inspector, who was leaning on a high desk and chatting with a station-sergeant, sprang forward to greet the suspect.

"They 'phoned through from headquarters for me to meet you here, sir. There's one or two messages come through for you."

The local man stared from Green to the policeman, and from the policeman to Green. Some notion of what had happened began to occur to him. "What the blazes——" he began, but the chief inspector cut him short. "That's all right," he said. "I was careless enough to come out without a warrant-card, and this young man has made a little mistake. Don't you worry about it, my lad. Only, next time, don't put so much zeal into a doubtful case. Cut along back to your beat and give that chap this." Some sovereigns chinked. "Now, Mr. Malley, I'll be glad to have those messages, and to put a call through to Mr. Foyle."

He followed Malley into an inner room, and the local man handed him a couple of messages which had been telephoned to Scotland Yard by the county police and one sent by Foyle immediately after his interview with Dutch Fred, giving amplified particulars of the car. Green made his report over the telephone and then replacing the receiver, turned to Malley. "This last messages shows he's got a good start. He passed through Haslemere an hour ago. Can you get away yourself, or have you got a man you can lend me?"

"That's all arranged, sir," was the answer. "Mr. Foyle said that I was to go with you if you wanted me."

"Right. We'll have to rake out a good car somewhere. You see to that. We'll pick up any fresh news at the county police station as Haslemere. This man may have been stopped by now."

Malley was already speaking into the telephone. He paused for a moment. "Will a chauffeur be necessary, sir? I could drive if you liked."

Saskatoon Detective Committed.

SASKATOON, April 10. — Chief of Detectives W. H. Springer was sent up for trial yesterday on a charge of inciting to crime. Yesterday morning, at Springer's preliminary hearing Frank McMillan, alias Burton, and Charles Pierson, two men under conviction for a series of yegg jobs in Alberta and Saskatchewan, told circumstantially of making Saskatoon the haven from which they attacked safes at Sutherland, Prince Albert, Edmonton and other places. They were arrested at Edmonton, McMillan said Springer was really the operating head of the gang at work in Saskatchewan.

Wilhelmina Case Nearly Settled.

LONDON, April 10.—The famous case of the Wilhelmina, which for weeks has been occupying the attention of two Governments with frequent representations to the Foreign Office from the American Embassy is on the verge of settlement. The Wilhelmina's cargo, which was consigned to Hamburg and seized here, is in reality before the prize court, but the adjustment now contemplated, will obviate court proceedings. It will be in the nature of the purchase of the cargo by the Government.

Dutch Puzzle Continues.

THE HAGUE, April 10.—The closest inquiries made yesterday in diplomatic, ministerial and military circles failed to discover the reason for the alarming rumors printed Thursday in London newspapers relatively to the possibility of hostilities between Holland and Germany or for the charging of high insurance premiums. Nothing appears to have arisen recently at any point along the frontier which would cause Holland to cease to maintain her position of strictest neutrality.

Alleged Spy Had Passport.

LONDON, April 10.—A man giving the name of Kuepferle arrested here on a charge of having sent military information to Germany, was found last night to have in his possession an American passport. This passport gives Kuepferle's address as 1,664 Dekalb avenue, Brooklyn.

"D & A" or "La Diva" Corsets retailing at $2.50 are equal in style, material and workmanship to imported corsets costing $3.50 to $5.00; the duty and extra profit—for which you get nothing, explains the difference.

Quite aside from your natural wish to encourage Canadian workmen, it is worth your while, for the saving it involves—to buy a "D & A" or a "La Diva" Corset.

A woman four feet 10 inches in height will find 33¼ inches a satisfactory working surface height for kitchen tables, etc., says a correspondence study instructor in home economics of the University of Wisconsin Extension division. Above this, an addition of half an inch in table height for each inch of increase in human stature will usually be about right.

Low sinks, tables, ironing boards, etc., are responsible for many tired, aching backs. By a little thought in purchasing, these pieces of furniture may be of such a height that an upright position may be maintained while the housekeeper is working at them. In any case it is well by some means to adopt all kitchen furniture to the height of the user.

Tables that are too low can be raised an inch or more by castors. Failing that, it will be well worth the money to lengthen the table legs. The sink can be raised by lengthening the waste pipe and raising the faucets. But a simple and effective device is to raise the dish pan by setting it on an inverted pan.

By the use of a partial vacuum the United States Department of Agriculture has developed a hydrocyanic acid gas process for fumigating imported seed more rapidly than heretofore.

TWO OUT OF HELL NO TORMENT THERE

The Bible Hell Not the Hell of Theology.

Jonah's Escape From Hell — Jesus Was Delivered From Hell — Everybody Goes to the Bible Hell Jesus Redeemed All From It—Hence All Are to Come Out of It —The Rich Man and Lazarus—Is It a Parable or a Narrative?—Unreasonable as a Statement of Facts — Very Reasonable as a Parable—The Rich Man Soon to Be Let Out of Hades.

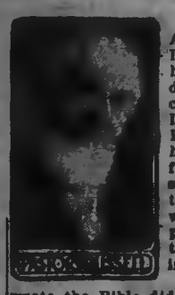
[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]



Boston, Mass., April 11.—Pastor Russell spoke here twice today. His discourse, based on Luke 16:23—"In Hell he lifted up his eyes" — set forth a most reasonable explanation of a parable which has long perplexed Christians. He said in part:

Those who wrote the Bible did their duty well. The Old Testament, covering the history of over four thousand years, tells us that all mankind at death go to Sheol—the tomb. The New Testament, written in Greek, tells the same story, using the word Hades as the translation of the Hebrew Sheol. It is in modern translations of the Bible that difficulty is encountered, particularly in the English. Nearly all these translations have been made within the last five hundred years. For 1,300 years before the Bible had been little known, because not translated into the languages of the people, and because few could have read it if it had been translated.

In the second century the theory prevailed that the bishops were as much inspired as the Apostles and Jesus; for they were called Apostolic bishops. Bible study was considered unnecessary because these Apostolic bishops were on the spot to give up-to-date information and communications from God. Then followed thirteen centuries of no Bible study, during which time, as the Apostles had forewarned, grievous wolves came into the flock, making merchandise of the sheep for their own profit. (Acts 20:26-31.) Gradually the doctrines became so mingled with errors that the false teachers enslaved the people with fear, and then extorted money for the relief of the fears.

When Bible study revived in the Fifteenth Century, the errors were so intrenched in men's minds that their thoughts were colored respecting every feature of faith. Those who translated the Bible doubtless did their best to set forth its meaning, but unconsciously gave little twists, in their endeavor to have the Bible say what they thought it meant. As an illustration, note John 5:29. There the translators have given us the expression, "resurrection of damnation," when nothing in the Greek justified the word damnation. The Revised Version renders it properly, "resurrection of judgment"—trial.

When the Hebrew word Sheol was being translated, Hell was the nearest word to fit their ideas. Hence they translated it Hell as many times as possible; and only when this was impossible did they give something approaching the proper translation—the grave. There is another word for grave—qeber, a sepulchre, a mound, a monument. But do their best to make Hell out of Sheol, they could only so translate it less than one-half the whole number of occurrences. The Revised translation retains the Hebrew Sheol and the Greek Hades, saying, Let the reader find out what it means, doubtless he will think that Sheol is the "hot place": and so the common people will not know what an egregious blunder was made by the theologians.

Good men, who know better, permit their congregations to think that they believe in a burning Hell of torture, when privately they confess to the contrary. But they say, Let us not do good, lest evil follow—let us not tell the people, lest fewer would then come to church, and the power of superstition, which holds so many, be broken. Poor men! They seem blind to the fact that these devilish doctrines are driving intelligent people away from God, from the Bible, and from the churches.

The Bible tells of several who were released from Sheol, but of two the very word is used. The Prophet Jonah, swallowed by the great fish, was in its belly parts of three days. He calls it his tomb-belly, a sheol-belly. While there entombed, he cried unto the Lord in prayer, and the Lord delivered him. Jesus tells us that Jonah's experiences typified His own—that as Jonah was buried in the sheol-belly of the fish, Jesus would be buried the Sheol of earth. As Jonah came forth on the third day, so Jesus came forth. St. Peter points out that this was prophesied of Jesus, saying, "Thou wilt not leave My soul in (Sheol, or) Hades"—the tomb. He says that God fulfilled this by raising Jesus from the dead.—Acts 2:27.

Whoever gets the proper focus will see that all, good and bad, go down to the tomb—to Sheol, Hades, called in our Bibles Hell. The Scriptures very distinctly tell us that "the dead know not anything"; that "their sons come to honor, and they know it not; and to dishonor, and they perceive it not of them." Why? Because, as again the Scriptures say, "There is neither wisdom, nor knowledge, nor device, in Sheol, whither thou goest"—whither all go. This exactly accords with the Divine statement, "The wages of sin is death"; "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." There is not a word in the Bible for the commonly accepted thought that those who die go to Heaven or Purgatory or eternal torment. All these teachings are found in the various creeds; the Bible alone tells the simple story, reasonable, harmonious.

It is true that Jesus used the word Gehenna fire, and that our translators mixed up the English reader by translating this word Hell, the same as Hades. But as all scholars will admit, Jesus used the word fire here symbolically, just as we use it, to represent destruction. Thus our newspapers tell about the great conflagration in Europe—not literal fire, but war, causing great destruction.

So Jesus pointed out that, although He had come to save men from death, and eventually by a resurrection to lift up all who had gone down to Hades, nevertheless the relief would be only temporary, except to those who would conform to Divine Law. All others under that Second Trial would be condemned as unworthy of everlasting life and would die again. This Second Death would be everlasting, because Christ would not die again for those who would sin wilfully after being released from the first sentence.

Pointing to the valley outside of Jerusalem, used as a garbage furnace and called in the Greek Gehenna, and in Hebrew Valley of Hinnom and also Tophet, Jesus declared that it illustrated the fate of all wilful sinners. Dead cats and dogs, etc., were thrown into the Valley of Hinnom, Gehenna, where fires were kept burning, and where brimstone was burned to kill the germs.

It is said that criminals of the worst type, after execution, were thrown into that valley, as intimating that they would not share in the resurrection. This thought Jesus emphasized—the utter destruction, in the Second Death, of any found incorrigible after having received full opportunity of return to God through the merit of Christ's sacrifice. The Bible everywhere holds out the thought that the Church now, and the world in its trial Day future, will be in danger of Gehenna destruction — the Second Death. Speaking of wilful sinners against full light, St. Paul says, "Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction." (2 Thessalonian 1:7-9.) St. Peter says they shall perish "like natural brute beasts."—2 Peter 2:12.

Bible students know that Sheol and Hades could not be places of eternal torture; for the Scriptures say that they shall be destroyed. If Sheol and Hades are to be destroyed, how could anybody be tortured there everlastingly? The clergy know these things very well, but hide them from the people. Hosea 13:14 reads, "O grave (Sheol), I will be thy destruction!" 1 Corinthians 15:55, "O grave (Hades), where is thy victory?" Revelation 20:14, "Death and Hell (Hades) shall be cast into the Lake of Fire. This is the Second Death."

These Scriptures mean that the grave shall not always triumph over the human family, that mankind will be delivered by Messiah's Kingdom from the power of the tomb, that we can rely upon God's promise that ultimately Hades, the tomb, will be destroyed in the Second Death, symbolically represented by the Lake of Fire. Note that the symbol is explained—"the Lake of Fire, which is the Second Death."

In other words, all that are in their graves, in the tomb, the prison-house of death, shall ultimately be set free by the great Deliverer, the glorified Christ, who already has laid down His life as the Ransom-price, that sinners might not perish, but have the opportunity of everlasting life.

This opportunity has yet come only to the Church, and to her by promise. Her covenant is to follow in her Master's footsteps unto death; and the promise is that she shall have a superior resurrection, because of greater trials of faith and obedience to sacrifice. "The gates of Hell shall not prevail against her." (Matthew 16:18.) That is, as the Heavenly Father raised up Jesus Christ from the dead, so the gates of death shall not prevail against the Church. —1 Corinthians 15:42-44.

With the world it will be different. Everything under the New Dispensation will prove that the reign of Sin and Satan has terminated, that the Reign of Righteousness has begun. They will find themselves, not only coming back from the tomb, "every man in his own order," but gradually raised out of imperfection and weakness back to all that was lost in Adam and redeemed at Calvary, if they will follow instructions. The great prison-house will give up the prisoners; for He who died on Calvary obtained the keys of Hades, as He tells us.—Isaiah 49:9; Revelation 1:18.

The parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus would seem very simple if our minds had not been perverted with error; but, filled with the perversion, many find this parable difficult to understand and are inclined to throw away the entire Bible because of it. We hope to make the matter very plain. To be thorough, we must note the fact that lovers of the eternal torment doctrine insist that this is not a parable, but a literal description. Let us see. Does it seem reasonable to say that with nothing said about his character as being either moral or immoral, but simply on account of his fine clothes, his sumptuous food, and his riches, a man should be eternally roasted? Is that a logical interpretation?

Similarly it is not said that Lazarus was moral or immoral, but merely that he was poor, ate crumbs at the rich man's gate, and was full of sores, which dogs licked. Is it reasonable to suppose that sores and destitution, without character, would be qualifications for Heaven? Surely not! If all rich people go to eternal torment, if all people who wear fine linen and purple clothing and have plenty to eat must suffer to all eternity, what an aristocratic place Hell would be, and how full it would be! On the other hand, if only those who have sores and dogs to lick them, who lie at a rich man's gate and eat crumbs from his table, go to Heaven, how few of us will get there! Moreover, if it is a literal statement, then Abraham here is a literal person, as well as Lazarus; and when Lazarus would get into his bosom, how many more could Abraham hold without letting some drop!

Surely this is not a literal statement, but a parable. Let us treat it from this viewpoint, remembering that a parable never means what it says. For instance, in the parable of the Wheat and Tares, the wheat does not mean wheat, but "children of the Kingdom"; the tares, "children of the Wicked One." Accordingly, the Rich Man does not mean a rich man, but stands for some class; and Lazarus does not mean a poor man, but stands for some class. Let us thus apply the matter.

We suggest that the Rich Man of the parable represented the Jewish nation, rich in God's favor. Their spiritual table was bountifully supplied with gracious promises from God. They "fared sumptuously," as no other people did. To them belonged the promise of the Kingdom, represented by the purple raiment of royalty. As a people they had the purging of their sins, typical justification, accomplished on their annual Atonement Day. This was their "fine linen," representing that righteousness was thus imputed to them as a people.

In A. D. 70, the Rich Man, the Jewish nation, died, when the last vestige of the government was destroyed by Titus, the Roman general. The nation has been asleep in Hades ever since, though the Jews have been very much alive and have suffered many things, especially amongst professed Christians of the tare class. Zionism, which has sprung up within the past thirty years, is the revival of hope that the Rich Man will be resurrected from Hades; and present indications point to this as a matter of speedy accomplishment—as soon as the fulness of the Gentiles shall have come into Spiritual Israel.—Romans 11:25-33.

Lazarus represented outcasts who desired favor with God but were "aliens and strangers from the commonwealth of Israel"—Gentiles. They had no table with Divine promises from which to "fare sumptuously every day," no share in the promises of royalty represented by the purple robes, no "fine linen," representing justification from sin. Those things belonged to the Jew exclusively, until its national rejection and the subsequent opening of the door to Gentiles, that they might become fellow-heirs with the saintly Jews, and followers of Jesus in the glorious things of God's arrangement.

As the Jew died to his favors, so the Gentile died to his disfavor. As angels carried Lazarus to Abraham's bosom, so the early Jewish Church, messengers of God and Christ, received believing Gentiles into full fellowship as brethren of the Seed of Abraham. This, figuratively, is described as Lazarus in Abraham's bosom—treated as his child.

The Rich Man represented especially two tribes—Judah and Benjamin. Proportionately, the five brethren would represent the ten tribes. The parable represents the Rich Man as saying, I have five brethren. May not something be done for them? The answer shows that only Israelites could be meant—"They have Moses and the Prophets; let them hear them." Only the twelve tribes of Israel had Moses and the Prophets. The Gentiles had them not.

The dogs licking the sores, in the parable, represent that the Lazarus class were companions of dogs—indeed, "dog" was a name which Jews commonly gave Gentiles. Jesus Himself used it, and gives an illustration of how believing Gentiles occasionally ate crumbs from the Rich Man's table. The Syrophenician woman requested healing for her daughter; but Jesus declined, saying, "It would not be proper to take the food from the children's table (the Jews) and give it to dogs (Gentiles)." She answered, "Truth, Lord; yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from the master's table." Then Jesus said, "O woman, great is thy faith!" and he gave her the crumb of relief which was not hers by right; for He testified, "I am not sent save unto the lost sheep of the House of Israel." The time had not yet come for giving Gentiles a place in God's family as children of Abraham.

Who cannot see in this beautiful parable a teaching in full harmony with God's Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power as it has applied during this Gospel Age? The parable does not show how God's favor will return to the Jew in due time; other Scriptures, however, clearly teach this, as we have pointed out. May our eyes of understanding open to a true knowledge of God's Word, and to a true appreciation of His glorious character! Then we shall love Him better, and serve Him, not from fear, but as dear children.

I offer free of charge a booklet written with a view to making these figurative statements clear. Whoever will address me — Pastor Russell, Brooklyn, N.Y.—requesting a copy of a pamphlet about Hell, will be promptly served free of charge. That pamphlet will settle all your questions.

SUFFERED FROM BILIOUS HEADACHE.

At Times Thought She Would Go Mad.

Headaches are one of the most aggravating troubles a person can have. They are many and varying; but when the headache starts you may be sure that there is some other chief cause of this most painful difficulty. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but the presence of the headache clearly shows that there is some other baneful disease which is liable to assert itself unless the cause of the headache is removed. Get rid of the headache and thus perhaps save yourself many years of trial and suffering.

Burdock Blood Bitters has, for the past forty years, been curing all kinds of headaches, and has also proved itself to be a remedy that cures where all others fail. It does this by removing the cause of the trouble.

Miss Mary A. Roberts, Hampton, N.B., writes: "For about two years I have suffered from bilious headache. At times I thought I would really go mad. Not long ago a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters which I did, and after taking three bottles I have never been troubled with any kind of a headache. I think that B.B.B. is one of the wonders of the world. I can safely recommend it to all who suffer from bilious headache."

Burdock Blood Bitters is the oldest and the best known blood medicine on the market to-day, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Claimant

By EUNICE BLAKE

On the estate of Lucien Marivaud, in France, lived a poor man named Soubise and his wife, Marie, the couple having a little son, Francois. M. Marivaud had extensive vineyards, from the product of which he manufactured wine. Soubise had charge of the grape growing, and Marivaud not only valued his services highly, but was very fond of him. Soubise's wife died, and he soon followed her, leaving little Francois without a home.

M. Marivaud had a son, Victor, about Francois' age. When the latter was left an orphan he was taken to the chateau and became a playmate of Victor. There was a brother of Victor, Louis, much younger than either of these two boys.

When Victor was eighteen he entered the military school and became an army officer. Upon graduating he was ordered to join his regiment in Tonkin. Francois was anxious to see service and, enlisting in the same regiment, went out with Victor, who agreed to interest himself in his promotion that he might become an officer.

A year later after a fight Lieutenant Marivaud was reported missing. This meant that he had fallen into the hands of the Chinese, in which case it was quite likely that he had been murdered. When nothing was heard from him for several years he was given up by his family, and when his brother, Louis, came of age he inherited the family patrimony, his father having died without a will. M. Marivaud had purposely omitted to make one because he never ceased to hope that his son would one day turn out to be among the living.

Ten years after the departure of Victor Marivaud, when there was no member of the family living, Louis, who had for some time possessed and managed the wine business, became engaged to Hortense Villaret, the daughter of a neighbor. Mlle. Villaret belonged to an aristocratic family, but the estate had been confiscated during one of the many changes in the sovereignty of France, and she was very poor. She and Louis were much in love with each other, and her father favored the match because Louis was wealthy and could enable Hortense to return to the style of living to which the family had formerly been accustomed.

All went happily for the lovers till a few weeks before the day set for the wedding. Then one day a man appeared at the chateau claiming to be Victor Marivaud. Louis was but twelve years old when his brother left home, and, granting that this man was Victor, he would not have remembered him. There was no other person at hand who had been familiar with Victor to identify him.

But the claimant was able to tell of many incidents that had happened on the estate, which went far to prove that he was what he claimed to be. He explained his long absence in this wise: During the fight in which he was reported missing he was knocked on the head by the butt of a musket in the hands of a Chinaman and stunned. When he came to himself he remembered nothing of the past, not even his name. The dead were lying about him; the wounded had been removed. He arose and walked till he came to a city, where he eventually entered the service of a French merchant. After passing through various vicissitudes he was taken suddenly ill and was removed to a hospital. After having been delirious on returning to his former condition he had exclaimed, "You rascally Chinaman, take that for yours!" But seeing a nurse before him instead of a Chinaman he appeared much surprised. He had returned to a normal state, remembering that he was Victor Marivaud.

His appearance was a terrible blow to the lovers, for, according to the French law of inheritance, Victor Marivaud was the owner of the estate, including the wine business. He told Louis so many things that had occurred during the latter's childhood that Louis became convinced that the stranger was his brother. Nevertheless it was not to be expected that he would be pleased to see a brother of whom he had no remembrance and who would dispossess him of his property. But the severest blow was that M. Villaret immediately withdrew his consent to his daughter's marriage unless it could be proved that the claimant was an impostor.

There was an old blind woman living on the place, who, on hearing of the claimant, desired that he be brought to her. She asked him a few questions, which seemed to trouble him, though he answered them correctly. Then the old woman directed that he be uncovered to the waist. This was done, and her hand was guided to his chest. She slid her hand around to his side under his right arm, and it rested on a small lump the size of a pea.

"This is Francois Soubise," she said. "I lived with his mother when he was a little boy and often dressed and undressed him. I know him by this lump."

That ended the pretense.

Louis Marivaud after this attempt to impose on him went to Tonkin and made a search for his brother, Victor. But, although he spent much time on the matter, he failed to obtain any information whatever. Victor never returned.

ATTACKED THE CONSTABLE.

Prisoner In Ottawa Court Wreaks Vengeance on Official.

OTTAWA, April 10.—In the county police court yesterday afternoon Onesime Lefebvre, a 55-year-old resident of Eastview, a suburb of Ottawa, on being sentenced to two years less one day in prison, jumped from the prisoner's dock and struck County Constable Prior a terrific blow in the face, and followed this up by grappling with the officer and biting through his ear. The prisoner was subdued by other constables in the room. Lefebvre and his son Alexander had just been found guilty of burglarizing a butcher shop in Eastview, and had each received the same sentence. The constable was one of the witnesses against the prisoner. There are 60 previous convictions registered against the elder Lefebvre.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, April 9.—Predictions of a decided shrinkage in the visible supply total on Monday tended today to lift the price of wheat. After an early decline, the market closed firm, 8-8c to 3c above last night. Other leading staples too, all scored an advance, corn 3-4c to 1¼c, oats ¼c to 2 3-8c and provisions 7½c to 25c.

According to a leading authority the results of the deficiency of moisture in Ohio, Indiana, southern Illinois and Kentucky have become apparent in the lack of top growth.

Shorts were active buyers of the later months as well as of the May option, which tightened in a manner that suggested something of a squeeze.

Corn trade broadened out tremendously. The strength which developed had back of it a better cash demand and the fact that receipts had dwindled thruout the west.

Rumors of export sales put firmness into oats. On the bulge, however, much profit-taking was indulged in by the longs.

Expected resumption of shipments of hogs from Chicago next week gave strength to the provision market. Packers bought freely.

Crisis of European War Thought to be Near at Hand

Military experts are looking confidently toward the early spring months to bring the crisis of the European war. Indications are that the beardless boys of France, Germany, Britain and Russia will decide the conflict which shall end at Berlin or at Paris, London or Petrograd.

It is beginning to look as though Secretary Grey, of the British government, would have to amend his declaration that the war would be won by the powers which could bring the last million dollars or so into play. His revised remark might very well be that the war will be won by the nation which can bring the last million dollars and the last few hundred thousand boys to the front.

By the middle of the present month it appeared that the winter would descend upon all the hostile armies in deadlock. Both to the east and to the west, experts were saying, neither alignment of forces could expect to obtain decisive advantages. With the paralyzing influences of frost and snow exerted everywhere, only the most radical optimists on either side could see hope of much advance before cold weather breaks up.

As an interesting coincidence, both Germany and France called out their classes of 1915 reserves to mobilize on December 15. This meant at least 400,000 new boy soldiers for France and more than that number for Germany—forces made up of boys 18, 19 and 20 years old. By spring it was expected that the youths would be in first-class trim for an epochal campaign.

Germany's superb military organization enabled her to get her greatest strength into the field first. No one has yet forgotten that avalanche of gray-coat men which rolled across Luxemburg and Belgium, swept down the plains of France, grinding its way relentlessly until the belated French mobilization, seconded by a relatively small contingent of English troops, caused it to pause in the valley of the Marne. Then the Germans fell back to secure positions, which they practically held as long as it appeared desirable to hold them.

Far more rapidly than anybody had dreamed the masses of the White Czar's armies arose in the East. They advanced by millions, with yet other millions to follow and still more millions within sight by the following spring. France, profiting by the check at the Marne, also was able to get its greatest number of effectives up before the winter waiting began. Slow, deliberate, unhurried, unhurriable English alone had not reached its maximum of mobilization at that time—would not reach it for another quarter of a year.

Yet still the commanders cried, "More men! More men!" But where were more men coming from? The workshop and the mine had furnished their quotas, women were gathering crops that their men might be free to fight, offices had been striped of employees, gray-bearded old men were called out and still the mighty Moloch of destruction begged greedily for more food. Nothing was left but to call out the boys. It is hardly probable that the longer the war lasts the more children who ought to be in school will be found lugging muskets to the front.

Most of the 1915 reservists just called out are under, rather than over, the age of 19. Newspaper correspondence of late has been full of stories of schools robbed of their male pupils to recruit the army which ordinarily enlists no one under the age of 20. Some of the boys are not over 16 years of age, lads who are yet, in a few cases, wearing knickerbockers and talking in the squeaky, uncertain voice of that age.

In Germany the training of boys has gone so far as to include school children who may not be big enough for actual service for a year or two yet. It is estimated that fully 12,000 youngsters in Berlin alone are receiving military training at the hands of superannuated drill sergeants and teachers who are too old and infirm to go into the armies themselves.

There are 21 classical High schools in the city, and each one of these has its own company of 100. In addition there are 17 companies in general High schools; 19 in four church clubs, 18 in nine gymnastic clubs, 10 in four Boy Scouts' clubs, eight in seven school districts, six in four commercial societies, five in eight business and trade schools, four in four continuation schools and one in a machine factory, making 120 companies in all.

The professors and teachers in the various schools are deducting time from their classroom work to give it to drilling the boys in marching and the simpler forms of squad drill. Whenever the lads are sufficiently trained in this elementary work they are put into the hands of some old or disabled soldier, who gives them company drill, perfects them in the manual of arms, gives them theoretical instruction in company and battalion manoeuvres and finally engaged them in practical field manoeuvres. These latter are carried out with all the solemnity of actual warfare. The boys enter into the zest of the thing with the keenest enthusiasm. There is not a school in Germany in which the deportments of the students is not modeled upon military precision. The boys as a unit are praying for the time when they can put real cartridges in their pouches, shoulder real army muskets and take their turn in the trenches to fight the enemies of the fatherland. Most of the children have a fair prospect of seeing actual fighting if the war continues as long as the pessimists predict it will.

So far as physical and moral courage are concerned these lads are often the equal of the most tried veterans. Unfortunately, their young shoulders are not always ready to receive the ponderous burden. It is not the fighting that will bother them, the coolness of sharpshooting or the shock and rush of the bayonet charge. What they have to fear are the long and wearisome forced marches, the hours in the rain and sleet and mud, the sleeplessness of day upon day of fighting, advancing, retreating, irregularity and often uncertainty of diet, the strain of severe, unrested toil, the demoralization of slow and often unsuccessful campaigns. At the end it will be a conclusive test of stamina and, all things being equal, stamina in the long run will decide the conflict.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Grey, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the grey hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural colour and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

HARRY THAW TO TAKE A STROLL

NEW YORK, April 12.—Harry K. Thaw, held in the Tombs prison awaiting a decision of the appellate division of the supreme court on his appeal from an order of Justice Page to send him back to Matteawan Asylum, may enjoy his first stroll about the streets of New York in many a day. Under order of Supreme Court Justice Ingraham obtained by Thaw's counsel, Sheriff Grifenhagen was permitted within his discretion to allow Thaw to take reasonable exercise at reasonable hours." The nature of this exercise depends upon the sheriff's judgment.

Reports that Thaw would be seen in places he formerly visited here were denied by Abel I. Smith, of Thaw's counsel, who said that "there would be no parties or joy rides, theatres, or anything of that kind. Thaw, as far as the law is concerned, is an innocent man, and he has a right to proper care, and should not have his health impaired. That is the reason the justice signed the order to allow him exercise."

Peace Gossip Repudiated.

WASHINGTON, April 10. — Published reports that Germany had presented her terms to the United States attracted attention yesterday in official circles in Washington, but both Secretary Bryan and Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, denied that there was any foundation for such rumors.

"There is nothing definite or indefinite," said Mr. Bryan, when asked about the peace talk, "and there has been nothing new on any phase of the subject for a considerable time."

Germany embassy officials declined to comment on whether the peace terms as published represent Germanys' views at present, beyond saying that nothing authentic on the subject had been received.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

John W. Chisholm, aged 60, unmarried, died in the hospital in Belleville yesterday as the result of internal injuries received a few days ago when run over by a wagon.

William Lorimer, former United States Senator, and other officials of the defunct La Salle Street Trust & Savings Bank of Chicago, must stand trial on state charges of conspiring to wreck the institution.

Austria has not agreed to the cession of Trentino to Italy as reported.

In a street fight in Baltimore yesterday between three New York gunmen and the police, Policeman G. S. Sauers was shot and fatally injured.

With nothing to eat for four days, and exhausted from tramping about looking for work, Paul Lalone, a young Frenchman, who arrived in Kingston, a few days ago from Montreal, was found by a carter lying on the lawn near the C.P.R. station.

The earnings of the Panama Canal in March were the largest of any month since it was opened. They exceeded by about $140,000 the previous record, made in January. March earnings were $560,784. The receipts in January were $419,000.

It is expected that the Welland Canal will be opened for navigation on April 15. Steamers Doric, Carlton and Iroquois are in readiness to sail as soon as ice conditions are more favorable. There are large fields of ice off the harbor, with no water visible.

HAS U. S. ACQUIESCED.

Germany Complains of Her Lack of Hostility to the Embargo.

WASHINGTON, April 10. — Germany has sent to the U. S. Government a note complaining that the latter has accomplished nothing in its diplomatic correspondence with the allies to obtain for American exporters the right to ship foodstuffs to the civilian population of a belligerent country. The communication intimates also that the U. S. has virtually acquiesced in the British order in council prohibiting commerce with Germany.

The note calls attention to the fact that the allies are obtaining large shipments of arms and ammunition from the U. S. and declares that the American Government while insisting on its legal right to ship arms to belligerents does not pursue its right to ship foodstuffs and non-contraband articles to the civilian population of Germany. It is urged that irrespective of the formal aspects of the question of shipping arms to belligerents, the spirit of neutrality should be observed.

Nearly Rammed Submarine.

SOUTH SHIELDS, Eng., April 10. —The tug Homer, towing the French bark Colonel Fesais, off St. Catharine's Point Thursday, was attacked by a German submarine, according to reports brought here yesterday. The tug attempted to ram the submarine in the heavy sea, but missed her by three feet. The German then sent a torpedo against the side of the bark, sinking her. The Homer escaped.

Canadian In Disgrace.

LONDON, April 10.—Ernest S. B. Smart, formerly a Canadian officer, who said he came with the contingent in October, was getting along splendidly until drink overtook him. He received six months at Birmingham for false pretences. The prisoner is stated to have held splendid appointments in Canada.

TO OVERAWE PEASANTS.

Possible Rising in Hungary Is Reason For German Troops There.

PETROGRAD, April 10.—Already there are remarkable signs that the more serious purpose of the large German reinforcements now answering the summons of the Hungarian Government is to overawe the rural population, which was beginning to threaten revolt.

Should the Hungarian crisis burst into a civil war behind the armies now facing the Russians, it is certain Von Hindenburg will immediately abandon his lines facing Narew from the north and bring the main German army into western Poland, sending Mackenzen's forces south again to try to get below the Russian position in Hungary. The Germans in the north have only one officer for about 400 men.

Irishman Arrested.

DUBLIN, April 10.—John Hegarty, described as a clerk in the employ of James Boulger, a journalist, was arrested yesterday under the defence of the realm act, charged with sedition. It is stated that notices, alleged to be in Hegarty's handwriting, were found posted in conspicuous places, declaring that when the Germans landed in Ireland they would come as friends to abolish English rule, and appealing to the people to assist the Germans, who would pay for any stores taken.

Riots In Brussels.

AMSTERDAM, April 10. — Riots broke out in Brussels yesterday in connection with the compulsory registration order issued by Gen. von Bissing, the German military governor. The first day for registration of young Belgian men was set for March 23. Four hundred men marched through the streets yesterday shouting: "We won't sign!" The rioters were dispersed by troops. Similar riots occurred at Ternath, where two men were killed.

ALARM FOR STEFANSSON.

He Should Have Been Heard From by Now, Says Bartlett.

OTTAWA, April 10.—During the discussion of an additional vote for the naval service in committee of supply last night, Hon. Mr. Hazen told Hon. Mr. Oliver that no alarm was felt regarding the North Star and Mary Sachs, two of the vessels of the Stefansson Arctic expedition. Alarm was felt for Stefansson himself, because Captain Bartlett, a member of the party, who had succeeded in reaching Siberia and thence returning to Canada, felt that the chief of the expedition should have gained the mainland and have been heard of before the present. Mr. Hazen, said the Government vessels now in the Arctic had been instructed to search for Stefansson, and United States vessels and others going north were asked to keep a look out.

Inspector's Careful Verdict.

LONDON, April 10.—A long report made by an attache of the U. S. Embassy at Berlin regarding an inspection of German concentration camps and ships in England, is printed by The Times. The report shows that conditions generally are "as good as could be expected."

IT STOPS THE TWINGES OF RHEUMATISM LIMBERS THE MUSCLES, EASES THE JOINTS

Amazing Relief Comes at Once—Cure Every Time.

USE NERVILINE.

Aching joints and sore muscles are common in rheumatic people. Inflammation is deep in the tissues. You might use a dozen remedies and derive less relief than Nerviline will give you in half an hour.

Nerviline is a pain-subduer that words do not altogether describe.

It is fully five times stronger than most remedies, not that it affects the skin unfavourably—no, its great power is due to its wonderfully penetrative quality—it strikes in deeply, but never burns or blisters.

Just rub Nerviline into sore muscles, stiff joints, and note the glow of comfort, the ease of pain that follows.

You are astonished, delighted; this is because words do not express the promptness and permanency with which Nerviline cures every ache and pain in the muscles and joints.

Marvellous, you'll say. Natural, we say, because Nerviline is different, stronger, more penetrating, a true pain-subduer. Just try it and see if it doesn't cure rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, strains and sprains.

BOMBARDMENT HEARD.

Sounds of Heavy Firing Reported at Dardanelles.

LONDON, April 10. — A despatch from Mitylene says:

"It is learned from Tenedos that heavy bombardment of the forts in the Dardanelles Straits was renewed by the allied fleets on April 4, when the large warships fired a number of shots. From Mount St. Elias dense clouds of smoke were seen to rise, apparently from the land forts. The hydroplanes were actively employed.

Owing to bad weather there was no more firing till April 7, when during part of the day the bombardment was heavy. Thursday all was quiet.

Several despatches from Athens carried a report that transports, convoyed by cruisers, had been sighted off Enos. The transports, according to Athens despatches, were reported to be disembarking part of the allied expeditionary force upon Turkish soil for the land attack upon the Dardanelles forts.

Much Murdered Man.

Copenhagen reports that the Crown Prince of Germany has been killed by one of the members of his suit. Since then the report says the Kaiser has doubled his bodyguard. This is about the twenty-fifth time the Crown Prince has been murdered in despatches.

French Stay Their Attacks Until Reinforcements Arrive

Forces Are Being Re-distributed and in the Meantime There is a Complete Lull Along the Northern Side of German Wedge---German Attacks on Western Front Are All Defeated.

UNDERSEA BOATS CLAIM MORE VICTIMS

(Special Cable to The Examiner.)

PARIS, April 12.—French official communique.—The allies' offensive in the region between the Meuse and the Moselle, has been halted temporarily according to despatches received here to-day, pending the redistribution of French forces and the arrival of more reinforcements. There has been a complete lull in the activities along the northern side of the German wedge. Some fighting is going on in the Le Pretre forest, northwest of Pont-a-Mousson. The official communique from the war office this afternoon announced the defeat of two German counter attacks on the western front where the French hold a chain of strong block houses. Engagements around Albert, where the British and Belgians hold the line, began on Saturday, and continued during Sunday, according to the official despatches. Fighting is also going on between the Oise an the Aisne.

STEAMERS TORPEDOED

LONDON, April 12.—Ten members of the crew of the Glasgow steamer President, attacked by the German submarine U4, off the Eddystone Rocks in the channel on Saturday, arrived at Brixham to-day, towed by a fishing boat.

The Liverpool steamer Wayfarer, of 9,599 tons, has been torpedoed by a German submarine and is being towed into Queenstown in a sinking condition, according to a despatch received here to-day. The Wayfarer is the largest British merchantman to fall a victim to a German submarine.

The Wayfarer is a big twin screw steamer of nearly twice the tonnage of the liner Falaba, the passenger carrying boat sunk by torpedoes. She is 505 feet in length over all, and 58 feet beam. She was built in 1903 and was owned by the Charente Steamship Co., of Liverpool.

READY IN THREE WEEKS

NORFOLK, Va., April 12.—Captain Thierfeldt of the German converted cruiser Kron Prinz Wilhem, at Newport News, announced today that his ship would be ready for sea in two weeks.

NO THOUGHT OF WAR IN HOLLAND

THE HAGUE, via London, April 10.—The closest inquiries made to-day in diplomatic, ministerial and military circles failed to discover the reason for the alarming rumours printed yesterday in the London newspapers relative to the possibility of hostilities between Holland and Germany or for charging of high insurance premiums. Nothing appears to have arisen recently at any point along the frontier which would cause Holland to cease to maintain her position of strictest neutrality.

NEW YORK, April 12. — The Independent to-day says in reference to the destruction of the Falaba and other acts of Germany. "For these brutal acts Germany has already paid the price in the loss of the respect and the sympathy of the neutral world. It deserves to pay a heavier price. No nation, no people, should be able to wantonly affront civilization without reaping universal condemnation. The United States, the greatest of the neutrals, has the first responsibility. We have protested already on behalf of our own material interests; we should protest with even greater vigor and solemnity on behalf of humanity and civilization."

PETROGRAD, April 12. — On a 200 mile battle front leading along the Carpathians and to a point near the border, the Russians are now everywhere on the offensive, according to a semi-official statement given out to-day. While the campaign of the invasion of Hungary is making progress the extreme left flank of the Slav army is preparing for important moves in the Czernow-Itz region. It is expected that another invasion of Bukowina at two separate points, is about to begin.

To Organize District For the Purpose of Developing the Hydro Electric Radial Scheme in Peterborough and Surrounding Counties

DATE APPROVED

The district meeting in connection with the Hydro-Electric railway scheme will be held in Belleville on Tuesday, May 11th. The Trent Valley District, comprising the counties of Lennox and Addington, Hastings, Northumberland and Peterborough will be represented.

The following letter has been addressed to Mayor Panter of Belleville by City Clerk Armstrong:

Dear Sir,—At the last meeting of the Hydro-Electric Railway Association of Ontario the Province was divided into a number of districts, among them being the Trent Valley District comprising the counties of Lennox and Addington, Hastings, Northumberland and Peterborough. The officers of the Association are anxious that the district should be organized and efforts made to develop and plan a system of railways to the eastern part of the province.

At the time the deputation waited upon the Ontario Government in Toronto on March 26th a meeting of the delegates of the deputation from the Trent Valley District was called and the question of holding a meeting of representatives of the district at a central point was discussed and it was decided that Belleville would be the most central and convenient point at which to hold such a meeting.

I am directed by Mr. T. F. Matthews, Vice-President for this district, to ask if the meeting may be held in your city hall and whether you would consider the 11th of May next as a suitable date. If your answer is favourable he purposes sending out notices calling the meeting in Belleville for that date.

Yours truly,
S. R. Armstrong.

Mayor Panter has replied that the date mentioned will be satisfactory, and arrangements for the meeting will be made.

CONFIRMATION AT ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

Fifty-Eight Candidates Take Part in Impressive Service of Confirmation

Beautiful and impressive was the confirmation service that was observed at All Saints' Church last evening when fifty-eight candidates presented themselves for confirmation at the hands of the Right Rev. W. D. Reeve, D.D., assistant Bishop of Toronto. In outlining the reasons for the confirmation service, His Lordship said that there was nothing in the confirmation but what was scriptural. It was apostolic in origin, and has been in continuous practice since the time of the apostles. The service of confirmation was intended to be a daily blessing embodying the spirit of truth and understanding. It is definite and abiding in effect. His Lordship asked the candidates to make personal petitions to God. Just as Jesus received His Father's blessing so could those who were confirmed receive the blessing of God by reason of having dedicated their lives to His service.

Twenty-nine of the candidates were adults and twenty-nine were children.

IS GERMAN FLEET OUT?

Rumour That a Squadron of Enemy Battle Cruisers is Now in the North Sea

NO CONFIRMATION

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 12.—Reports that a German squadron has escaped the British blockade and has been engaged by British warships off the coast of Norway south of Bergen were received here to-day. From a number of Scandinavian ports the Admiralty refused comment. Cautains of Scandinavian vessels arriving at Copenhagen to-day reported sighting from 15 to 25 German warships in the northern part of the North Sea, at least 450 miles from Heligoland on Wednesday and Thursday. Norwegian newspapers printed at Bergen carried rumours to-day of a naval battle off Sartor Island on the Norwegian coast on Wednesday night. At about eleven o'clock, according to reports published at Bergen, there was a heavy cannonade, the blue light of gun fire on the horizon and the windows rattled on the island. Persons who congregated on the beach were convinced that a sea fight had occurred. Captain Sorenzen of the steamer Vestlos reported that he sighted a large squadron off the Norwegian coast Wednesday afternoon. They carried the German colours and were steaming northward he said. It was believed possible that a squadron of fast German battle cruisers may have escaped from the German coast to raid British commerce, confident that their speed would save them from capture.

Despatches from Hull this afternoon said the residents of Bridlington, 22 miles from Hull reported they heard heavy cannonading coming from the direction of the North Sea late Saturday night.

Other North Sea villages were filled with rumours of a naval engagement, according to their Hull correspondent.

I. O. D. E. MUSICALE

On Friday evening of this week, a musicale will be held at the home of Mr. W. G. Morrow, 440 Weller Street, under the auspices of "The Daughters of the Empire."

As the usual military euchre is withdrawn for this spring, the many friends who enjoyed these in former years, are asked to attend the musicale instead, this year.

An excellent programme is being prepared and a charming musical evening is promised.

Tickets may be secured from members of the I.O.D.E., or at Kent's or McDermid's drug stores.

The industry encouraged by the government, Tunis is now producing more than 10,000,000 gallons of olive oil a year and expects in a few years to more than double the amount.

AN ELECTION IN THE FALL

September is Now the Best Guess Although the Government Has Apparently Not Yet Made Up Its Mind

ROGERS IS READY

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 12.—Parliament is closing with a conundrum troubling both sides. Will there be a June election, a September election, or another session and no election. Before so much scandal was read in committee a June election was practically a certainty. Hon. Robt. Rogers still favours June for polling, but his followers on this point have become conspicuously scarce. It is clear that the majority of the members of the government are in no hurry to go to the people. They want the test put off until the autumn, when they hope that general good crops, general forgetfulness and success on the battlefields may improve the prospects for being returned to power. It now seems almost certain that September elections is the best guess. It is clear, however, that the government to-day has not made its mind up in regards to any date. It is also reasonably clear that Mr. Rogers' election machine is ready with a full head of steam to be started off in June if necessary.

Attractive Bill At The Royal

Vaudeville of a High Order—"How Cissy Made Good," a Photo play That Should Be Seen

For to-day and to-morrow, the Royal Theatre is presenting a particularly attractive bill. A photo-play away above the average, and vaudeville, distinctly high-class, constitutes the programme. "How Sissy Made Good" is the extra film that all moving picture lovers should see, either to-day or to-morrow. "How Cissy Made Good" is featuring Miss Cissy Fitzgerald, a Broadway star, assisted by such well known artists as John Bunny, Katie Price, Earl Williams, Flora Finch, Walter Van, Anita Stewart, Maurice Costello and others.

Clarence Grogan, a blind pianist, and Miss Clarice, harpist, are appearing here for the first time, during the next few days. Press notices everywhere are unstinting in their praise of these artists.

"In Clarice and Grogan, the management has provided an act far above the heads of the average musical act," says the Allentown Democrat. "Prof. Grogan though blind is a musical marvel. All the duets are his own compositions. One of his greatest achievements is the playing of three different selections on the piano while he sang a fourth selection."

GEN. SAM HUGHES SAW MEN OF THE 39th BATTALION

Had Brief Inspection at Belleville Station Saturday—Soldier Boys Hear an Address on Spinal Meningitis—Capt. Carruthers is Bereaved.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Special to The Examiner:

BELLEVILLE, April 10. — Major-General Hughes, Minister of Militia, paid a flying visit here at 2 p.m., leaving again by the same train upon which he arrived.

The 39th Battalion had been notified of his coming and were drawn up in column platoons outside the C.N.R. station, and received him with general salute, after which each company marched past in fours.

The Weekly Concert.

The weekly concert was held in the Barracks on Friday evening, when several vocal and instrumental numbers were rendered by members of the Battalion, and each performer was heartily applauded by the audience.

But perhaps the most interesting event of the evening, and at any rate the most vital one, was a very lucid address upon spinal meningitis by Lt.-Dr. Palmer. He dealt with the matter in language understood by all, and was at great pains to impress upon the soldiers how the disease was transmitted, the reason for the preventive measures that were being taken, the early symptoms, and embodied in his address an urgent appeal to the men when it might be necessary to segregate after the bacteriological test, to play the game, and in no case to break bounds. He pointed out that no man would be segregated unless he was a proved carrier of the disease, and for such a man to attempt to mix with comrades or friends was to stamp him as a criminal.

He further assured all who might be sent to the segregation camp of a good time, good food and less work than if they were in barracks. In fact he painted the isolation camp in such gaudy colours, that if he only could have promised that thirsty souls should not be entirely deprived of their beer, there would be many willing to volunteer to go there.

Several questions were put to the doctor by members of the Battalion, which were most courteously and patiently answered.

An Interesting Question.

Perhaps the most interesting of the questions from a soldier's point of view was, "Has inoculation for typhoid, the effect of producing meningitis?"

This is a subject which has been traversed a great deal by the men in barracks, and indeed many had concluded that since the disease was so prevalent amongst soldiers, and so little heard of amongst adults in civil life, that it must be ascribed to inoculation.

Dr. Palmer was most emphatic in his denial of its having any possible bearing upon spinal meningitis. He explained the difference of typhoid bacilli and meningitis germs and left us wiser but not sadder men.

A vote of thanks to the lecturer was heartily accorded upon the proposition of Lt.-Col. Preston, who concluded the evening by asking: "Men of the 39th, are we down-hearted!" And the answer was a boisterous and wholehearted "No!"

Then came the National Anthem, cheers for Col. Preston and the singing of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and we went to bed to dream that the dear old canning factory had been grossly libelled and that it was nothing less than a palatial hotel.

Cannery Notes.

We are waiting for our noses to be "swabbed" — a ticklish operation no doubt.

The canning factory is now a sanetorium, and for fresh air Muskoka has nothing on it, even if they did have to remove the windows before we got it.

No, there is no "canning" takes place now at the canneries. But they are sometimes a coop for the "canned."

Of course no one suggests Belleville is to be blamed for the outbreak of meningitis. But drat the luck anyway. Just like ours to get tied up there.

THE ORDINARY POSTAGE STAMPS MAY BE USED

Post Office Department Says They May Be Substituted for War Tax Stamps Where Latter Are Not Available

DISTRICT CONVENIENCE

OTTAWA, April 12.—The Post Office Department, having given notice a week or two ago, in connection with the War Revenue Act, that all letters and postcards mailed in Canada for delivery in Canada, the United States or Mexico, and letters mailed in Canada for delivery in the United Kingdom and British possessions generally, or wherever the two-cent rate applied, should in addition to ordinary postage carry a one-cent stamp as a war tax, and also having notified the public that such war tax, while it should be paid preferably by the postage stamp marked "War Tax," could, if such stamp were not available, be paid by an ordinary one-cent postage stamp, is now issuing further notice to the effect that postage stamps may be used for the prepayment of war duties on bank cheques, bills of exchange, promissory notes, express money orders, proprietary or patent medicines, perfumery, wines or champagne, as well as upon letters and postcards, postal notes and post office money orders, the intention being to provide facilities in those portions of the country where excise stamps are not readily available. This in view of the fact that postage stamps may be obtained at all points over the whole country, in many places where there is no Collector of Inland Revenue and no Inland Revenue stamps could be obtained, is a distinct convenience to the public, and no doubt will be largely taken advantage of.

VOTES FOR SOLDIERS.

Parliament spent, if it did not waste, a good deal of its valuable time, in discussing the proposal to allow soldiers in the fighting line to vote at a general election. That this time was largely wasted does not establish a precedent. There seem to be many reasons why the granting of this privilege at this time is unnecessary and inadvisable and impracticable. In the first place the soldiers have not so far as known, demanded a right to mark their ballots in the intervals of dodging bullets. That they have a right is freely admitted. But there is an alternative, and there are difficulties in the way, and we have no assurance that the soldiers as a body want the vote or even expect the vote. No doubt most, or all of them, if they thought about the matter at all, counted the loss of their votes among the sacrifices they made in order to serve their country. They sacrificed their business; they sacrificed their employment; they sacrificed their homes; they sacrificed home associations and home comforts. With all these sacrifices the soldiers would account the sacrifice of voting at random without knowledge of the candidates or the issues at stake, as a comparatively small matter.

If the time occupied in Parliament in discussing votes for the soldiers, had been devoted to devising larger means to provide for the comfort and efficiency of the soldiers in the trenches, it would have been better employed. The average soldier in the trenches is loyal, or he wouldn't be where he is. He has an interest in the country as shown by his actions. He is willing to give this interest effect and is too busy doing his duty in this regard, to bother his head with the doubtful service of voting for a candidate he doesn't know, and on issues he is ignorant of. There are many things the soldier wants worse than a chance to vote — Canadian maple sugar or a Canadian apple. He wants good sound boots, such as the government has not so far provided him. He wants more adequate Red Cross privisions to insure his proper and humane treatment, if he is ill or wounded.

In planning to give soldiers the ballot in the trenches, the Government and Parliament have shown unnecessary solicitude and zeal, have done something that the soldiers have not demanded, something they cannot appreciate, something they cannot intelligently make use of. The Government and Parliament might better have employed their time in the interests of the individual soldiers, in the interests of the country, in the interests of humanity, by devising some means of strengthening the Red Cross work, which involves the care, the comfort, the proper surgical and nursing treatment of the sick soldiers or the soldiers with bodies torn by shot or shell. For some inexplicable reason the Government takes no practical interest in Red Cross work. It has to be financed by private generosity and effectively applied by private philanthropy. Governments look after the soldier while he is healthy, but not always too well; but when he falls sick, probably from the neglect of the government to provide proper equipment, or is wounded in the discharge of his duty, he is thrown aside, like an old boot—as far as the government help and practical encouragement of the Red Cross work is concerned. This work might be made ten times more effective. The official provision for treating sick and wounded soldiers through the medical corps, would be strikingly inadequate without the help of Red Cross beneficence. If the Government and Parliament did more to add to the effectiveness of the noble work of the Red Cross, it would be serving the soldier in the field far better than by giving him a perfunctory ballot. When prostrated by illness or torn with wounds, the soldier would rather have a bandage than a ballot.

Government help of the Red Cross work would send help to the soldier much more directly than the roundabout course the soldiers ballot worms its way to the ballot box. This is the way the voting works. The soldier in the trenches is handed a ballot, and if he chooses, he marks it, with, in most cases, no clear idea of what or for whom he is voting. Then he hands his vote inclosed in an envelope to his commanding officer, who forwards it to the government office in London; from there it goes to some government official at Ottawa, and he sends it to the returning officer in the constituency where the ballot is to be counted. On such a round-about and perilous journey, a ballot is liable to meet with "accident"; fall into the hands of a "middleman," or be "spoiled"; and there is the sad possibility, in hundreds of cases, that the soldier voter may be dead, before his ballot is counted.

All this trouble and ineffective and clumsy exercise of the franchise can be very easily avoided, and very wisely and honourably avoided. The soldiers should vote. They have a right to vote, and they have a right to vote under conditions that will permit them to vote intelligently. The life of the present Parliament legally lasts till September, 1916. Postpone the general leection as it is the right thing to do, till an election is made absolutely and legally necessary; and by that time our soldiers will be home to vote. It is no time to hold an election when Canada and the Empire are in the throes of a struggle for national existence. We in Canada—the people of Canada—need to give our whole attention ot the work of helping wage a righteous war; and our attention should not be diverted; our interest slacked and our energies diverted from a work of noble patriotism, by the struggle for place, by the arousing of party bitterness at a time when, irrespective of party, all our citizens are heart and soul and hand, engaged in the struggle for British freedom and democracy. An election is a necessary evil in one sense. Everybody admits that it is bad for the business of peace; wouldn't it be worse for the business of war? Would an election help the work of the Red Cross Society? Would it make us more thoughtful and effective in providing for the treatment and comfort of our soldiers in the trenches?

Give the soldiers a chance to vote, but give it them by postponing the election till they come home. And it can be postponed for a year without any national interest being imperilled, and without risk of the injury of national and imperial interests by throwing the country in the turmoil of a general election, and diverting our attention and energies from the work of home help in waging the war. Great Britain is getting along without a general election; and Canada can do the same—if British precedent is loyally accepted; if patriotism is not replaced by partizanship.

THE NAVAL SITUATION.

The following verses of the book of Revelations are certainly suggestive of Germany's fate, except that there is no great mourning of her losses:

"And the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her, for no man buyeth their merchandise any more. . . . For in one hour so great riches is come to nought. And every shipmaster and all the company in ships, and sailors, and as many as trade by sea stood afar off. And cried, when they saw the smoke of her burning, saying, "What city is like unto this great city!" And they cast dust on their heads, and cried, weeping, and wailing and saying, 'Alas, alas! that great city, wherein were made rich all that had ships in the season by reason of her costliness, for in one hour is she made desolate."

And yet certain wiseacres would have us believe that the emergency was Great Britain's and that Canada ought to fill up the North Sea with dreadnoughts rather than invest in some fast cruisers, to catch Emdens and Karlsruhes, or a number of torpedo destroyers to deal with submarines. There do not not seem half enough destroyers to drive those pirate craft from the sea.—London Advertiser.

THE GOVERNMENT'S HORSE DEALS.

It was seemingly a poor horse which would not do for the first contingent in the opinion of the Tory patriots and flag-flappers. Horses which were charged to the Government about $17 were sold for $55 at Quebec, because they were unfitted for services. Others for which an average price of $175 was paid were actually shot and sold to make glue, but then the glue will come in handy. It might stick the shingles or the soles of the shoes together which were manufactured for the Canadian soldiers to march in. The men who purchased these horses for the first contingent were worse enemies to the Empire than the Germans who were attacking it. The men who purchased these horses and sent them to the soldiers to use would receive their deserts if they were taken out and shot as were the horses which they purchased. The horses were not to blame because they were old and decrepit, but the men who purchased them for war purposes were men who imperilled the safety of the Canadian soldiers.—Moncton Transcript.

How Patronage System Helped "Graft" in Purchase of Binoculars

In war the lives of men frequently depend upon the power of the field glasses carried by their officers. Every day we read of new tricks for the concealment of artillery, for rendering moving troops less conspicuous, for digging trenches so that the material excavated shall not betray their location. An officer with poor field glasses is handicapped greatly in the performance of his duties, and may, through no fault of his own, lead his men into a death-trap that would have been plainly visible to good lenses.

When, therefore, the Public Accounts Committee of Parliament reports that a number of the binoculars supplied to the officers of the first contingent were of "poor quality and low range and inferior efficiency, but passed inspection and were paid for at an excessive price," we have before us a case of the gravest price," we have before us a case of the greatest importance. A vital part of the equipment of our officers now at the front is of admittedly "poor quality" and the lives of hundreds, perhaps at times of thousands, of Canada's soldiers must remain in jeopardy throughout the war because a conscienceless favourite of the Government was prepared to endanger the lives of his fellow-countrymen in order that he might make excessive gains.

The punishment of Colonel Hurdman, whose perfunctory inspection of the inferior glasses has resulted in his suspension for mthe Militia Department, and of the Keystone Supply Company of Ottawa—the trading name of Mr. Thomas Birkett, who supplied the defective glasses—may be left to the courts and to the departmental chiefs. But behind the Inspector and behind the contractor is a vicious system of patronage in the purchase of public supplies that should be swept out of existence. The system is so subservive of every sound principle of business that it is calculated to make even the most upright business man regard the Government as lawful prey.

This very case of the binoculars, on which men's lives depend, shows what the patronage system involves. There are no more honourable business men in Toronto than P. W. and M. C. Ellis, the well-known manufacturing silversmiths and jewellers. When General Hughes cast about for some one into whose hands he could safely entrust the purchase of these vital supplies he remembered "the Ellis boys" with whom he had gone to school. "Colonel Hurdman," said the Minister of Militia in his evidence, "was a good soldier, but I thought the Ellis people knew more about glasses." He therefore arranged with the Ellis firm to act as purchasing agents for the department in the matter of binoculars, and under that authority they bought some $90,000 worth of glasses which they were paid a commission of $9,111 by the Government.

That is a large sum of money. Most Canadians toil all their lives for a smaller provision for old age than the Ellis Brothers earned in a few weeks as purchasing agents for army field glasses. The Government and people of Canada had a right to some adequate return for that $9,111. The very least return that could be expected was the careful inspection by a competent man of every glass turned over to the Government. In no other way could fraud be avoided, for the cheaper a field glass is the more it is disguised to look like a good one. Had Ellis Brothers been passing 2,000 binoculars into their own stock they would have taken nothing for granted. Yet in this transaction, involving consequences so great, they bought from Birkett and turned over to the Government on the assurance of Hurdman that they were "entirely satisfactory" low-grade field-glasses, which would not have deceived their expert for a moment. That was poor business and poorer patriotism. In some cases, as the evidence of the original invoices discloses, Birkett sold to the Government through Ellis Brothers at $48 per pair glasses that cost $17. Others bought as cheaply as $15 were billed to the Government at $52. Mr. M. C. Ellis is on record as stating that the prices paid for some of these glasses by the Government, through the agency of his firm were grossly excessive, and that he never would have paid them had he known the quality and cost of the glasses supplied.

He should have known. Had it been his own business he would have taken steps to know. Yet on the statement of Colonel Hurdman that the glasses were "entirely satisfactory" he passed on cheap and inferior binoculars at a grossly inflated if not an absolutely fraudulent price. That is one of the consequences of the patronage system with which Canada is cursed. The "Ellis boys," when they took General Hughes' commission became a link in the patronage chain. It is difficult to see how they can now avoid responsibility for failure to secure value for the country's money. If fraud there was it became possible only through their negligence of the duty for which the country paid them the ample sum of $9,111 to perform.

And beyond the money side of it there stretches another far more serious. Somewhere in France to-day there are at least a hundred Canadian officers—with the lives of many men in their keeping—who are equipped with field glasses the Public Accounts Committee, composed of Conservatives and Liberals alike, declares are of "poor quality, low range and inferior efficiency. That cannot be a very comforting reflection for the purchasing agents whom General Hughes trusted because he knew that from them he would "get a square deal."—The Globe.

COMEDY AND TRAGEDY.

If it were not for the seriousness of the affair the Annapolis valley horse deals now the subject of sworn testimony before the public accounts committee provide enough humour for the country for a year.

A horse for which one owner got "a drake and two ducks" is sold to the military authorities for $90. And the animal, with a collection of all the ordinary horse blemishes but capable of "drawing a meat waggon" is bought up at a fancy price to aid the Empire's cause. A third nag, too old to be sent to the South African war in 1900 is passed and becomes a military acquisition in 1915. And so on it goes till old David Harum looks like an amateur.

We suppose these men from the Annapolis valley are good, law abiding citizens but "business is business" in a horse deal. They saw the easy money put up by scheming politicians and they pulled it down. The Government was doing the buying, and a government is fair game at any time, and at any place.

But still, that horse originally valued at "a drake and two ducks" and that other that was a veteran at the time of the South African war should be stuffed and mounted and put in the federal museum to show that patriotism isn't always above price.—Ottawa Free Press.

THE BET WAS CALLED OFF.

A young Canadian on a visit to London, was much upset at the lack of interest manifested by Londoners in his native country. He made a bet with a friend that three out of four people in the metropolis were ignorant of colonial affairs, and it was agreed that they should ask four passers-by in the street if they knew any thing about the city of Ottawa.

The first person they stopped happened to be a clerk. He confessed that he had never heard of Ottawa.

The friends passed on, and next decided to question a young girl who was selling flowers in the gutter.

"Excuse me," said the Canadian, politely raising his hat, "but do you know anything of Ottawa?"

"Do I know anything o' 'oo?" exclaimed the damsel, angrily. "You get along, or I'll smack your dirty face!"

After that the two friends decided to declare the bet "off," as they onsidered that it was wiser not to make any more enquiries.—London Chronicle.

SUNDAY MORNING SERVICE MARK STREET CHURCH

"Whatsoever Ye Do, Do All to the Glory of God"

The pulpit of the Mark Street Methodist church was occupied yesterday by Rev. George Brown of Millbrook, who delivered two inspiring messages.

In the morning his text was, "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God," found in 1 Cor., 10:31, a rule for the government of everyday life, reaching every phase of our existence, whether it be eating, drinking, work, recreation; our time, talents, money; or our relations to our fellowmen and to God.

God's Glory.

"The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handywork." No matter where we look, whether into the air with its marvels, or unto the stars in their beauty, or beyond into the immeasurable vastness, we are impressed with God's infinitp.

God's Laws.

"The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart." His laws are not like ordinary laws. Not like the decrees of a despot. They are founded on principles of right, according to them we may glorify God and advance our interests at the same time.

A life of idleness is not in keeping with the spirit of Christianity. We were formed for action. Work we must. Jesus said: "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." Motion, power, everywhere, aids us; everything is working out its destiny. The song of labour surrounds us. The rolling of the spheres join in the universal chorus.

In Genesis we read: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." This was part of the curse which befall the race. Sin injected into work the element labour. God never formed us to be creatures of idleness. Heaven is not designed as a place wherein to loaf.

Holiness Unto the Lord.

When Adam came fresh from the Creator's hands he was told to dress and keep the Garden of Eden, which was to be done to the glory of God. But, alas, sin entered. Men, now, whether farmer, labourer, manufacturer or practitioner, should say "God has put me here, I am going to do everything to glorify Him."

"In that day shall there be upon the bells of the horses, Holiness Unto the Lord."

The farmer for example; if it rains in harvest, he should not worry; if the grain rusts, he should not grumble; if the hired help fails in the busiest time, he should keep sweet; if he has abundance he should not keep $90.90 out of every hundred and put the Lord off with the balance. He should spend his time and money for the Lord with the same zest as he would take a trip to the Toronto Exhibition. He should stop work when it is time to stop, and not try to grind the very last ounce out of his hired help. God has given sunlight in which to work, and darkness in which to rest, to re-create the body.

The same rule should apply in all walks of life.

Our actions should be honourable, not simply within the law. Lots of legal things are not right. We, as Christians, are to be judged by a higher standard.

The merchant should deal honestly, charge moderate prices, not urge a and not keep in stock anything which and not keep in stoc kanything which would injure the body or soul of a customer.

"Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." Our words, too, should be spoken in the fear of the Lord. Beasts we may tame, fires we may limit, but who can recall the spoken word? How careful we should be about the little bits of gossip we hear, no matter if there is a semblance of truth in them! Why pass it on when we know it will do no good, and possibly do harm?

Our thoughts, which are an index of our moral character, should be carefully kept under control.

"When alone watch your thoughts,
When in company watch your tongue,
When at home watch your temper."

According as our brain harbours the thought so will be the development of the resulting act.

A fire starts from a spark, it spreads and destroys the heart of a city, yet there was a moment when might have been put out by a quart of water in the hands of a ten year old child. In like manner the evils which threaten our very existence, could, at their inception, have been stamped out. "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation."

Our pleasures, even though they may seem innocent enough, if they interfere with our work of glorifying God, should be ruled out.

Our money, with which might be included our talents, should be used to glorify God. "No bed is too good for a Christian to lie on," declared the speaker. He should get the best and be comfortable. Man is of more value than money. It is not always religion to save. The goodness of a man is sometimes measured by the money he spends. If your family is musical, spend money on them, develop their talent. It is always right to spend money to keep alive the true love of heart to heart.

Don't think that it is the Lord's will that you stint and save and bank all your money for the next generation to scatter. On the other hand we must be careful lest we scatter too much, over such things as five o'clock teas, hats and other finery

Most people when they sing that beautiful hymn: "Take My Life and Let It Be," usually dodge the third verse, which begins.

"Take my silver and my gold,
Not a mite would I withhold."

If we hold ourselves as stewards of the Lord we ought to be able to sing it honestly.

Everything we do, the use of our time, whether for work or for social engagements, whether for our everyday calling or for work in the church should be done to please our Heavenly Master.

"Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God.

—Paul Penman.

Seventh Day Adventists Are Now Organized

President of the Canadian Union Conference Organized

The Examiner has been furnished with the following:

As a result of the efforts of Elder F. W. Johnston, during the past few months another new organization has been added to the list in this city. On Saturday afternoon the company of believers in the L. D. Adventists' faith met in their usual place in the Woodmen Hall, and Elder M. N. Campbell, the President of the Canadian conference by request of his believers, officiated. First he presented in a sermon the main points of truth that are held and maintained by the Adventists' people. These points were explicitly stated from God's word; for the Adventist people, unlike the people of other denominations have no creed whatever but the Bible. After all the believers expressed their agreement upon these tenets of Scripture they were all duly accepted. Officers were then appointed for the ensuing year and a resolution was passed requesting the Ontario conference to accept this new organization during its next session, in June.

On Sunday night Elder Campbell spoke very interestingly on the topic entitled "Will this War end in Armageddon?" Taking for his text Rev. 16:12-16, he explained how that this present war could not be the last for it was not being fought in the place demanded by the prophecy. The Bible, he declared, proved beyond any doubt that the last universal war would be fought in Turkey, and that the present place of government would be changed from Constantinople to Jerusalem. At this time, so the prophecy declares, this power is to come to its end, the Lord would then come to gather His saints and the final consummation of all earthly rule would be realized.

Elder Campbell then spoke of the false assurance of peace. He referred to the various statements of eminent men who declared previous to the war that such was practically an impossibility, that civilization had so far advanced that henceforth the pen would wield a mightier influence than the sword. He referred to the prophecy in Isaiah 2, where the Lord declared that the people in the last days would be crying peace and advocating the idea of turning their war implements into farming machines. But this was contrary to what the Lord said would really occur; for in Joel 3, the Lord plainly declares that the very opposite would be true. However, it seems clear that at the close of this present war there will be but a very short interval of peace and the cry for peace will be stronger than ever. Nations will talk of the propriety of disarming and setting their disputes by some form of arbitration But this will not be permanent, for, as it says in I Thess. 5:3, when they shall say, peace and safety, then shall come sudden destruction. The nations of the world will then engage in the great final struggle of all. We need to be prepared for all such calamity and know that we are ready to meet the Lord when He comes.

RECRUITING CAMPAIGN

Has Been Launche in London—1500 Meetings to be Held.

LONDON, April 11.—A great patriotic campaign to secure recruits for Field Marshal Kitchener's new army was opened in London to-day. The campaign is to be carried on for a fortnight.

Meetings addressed by Liberal, Unionist, Labour and Irish members of Parliament were held in Hyde Park, Trafalgar Square and other centres of the capital while recruiting sergeants distributed pamphlets showing the pay, separation allowances and other advantages given to the soldiers of the King. As the result of the Trafalgar Square meeting 200 recruits registered at the chief recruiting office nearby.

During the fortnight's campaign 1,500 meetings will be held, while troops will engage in street marching.

It has been estimated by a Berlin scientist that the commercial value of the elecricity in a flash of lightning lasting one housandth of a second is 29 cents.

DUTCH EXPECT INDEMNITY.

Protest Sent to Berlin Concerning Act of Piracy.

THE HAGUE, April 11—The Netherlands Government has handed to Germany a note of protest concerning the sinking of the Dutch steamship Medea, which was sent to the bottom of Beachy Head March 25 by the German submarine U-28. The German Government is considering a reply, and it is thought probable in Ministerial circles here that it will offer to pay an indemnity in accordance with international law, but this is dependent upon the judicial decision.

A feeling of the utmost confidence regarding the relations between Holland and Germany is expressed here, and the alarming rumours in London are considered inexplicable.

COMFORT AND CURE FOR BABY'S SKIN TROUBLES

Dr. Chase's Ointment Cured When Baby's Body Was Covered With Distressing Eczema

If every mother could try Dr. Chase's Ointment for the chafing, skin irritation and resulting eczema which tortures so many babies, what a blessing it would be for the little ones.

This letter will give you an idea of what a wonderful work this Ointment is doing in the way of bringing comfort to children who are so unfortunate as to contract eczema. It is so easy for this trouble to develop from chafing or irritation caused by the clothing, and so difficult to get it cured, that Dr. Chase's Ointment is appreciated when once its healing qualities are known.

Mr. M. L. Duselos, Postmaster, Dugnayville, N.B., writes: "I believe it is my duty to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema. My baby was seized with eczema and his face and arms were covered with this terrible disease. After trying all sorts of ointments the disease continued to spread until it covered the entire body. When the itching became bad he would scratch himself and was sometimes found in his cradle covered with blood. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Ointment I bought two boxes and before this was all used the child was cured. That was a year ago, and there has been no trace of eczema since. I recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all who suffer from eczema as being the best treatment in the world for itching skin diseases."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is for sale by all dealers at 60 cents a box. It is a good idea to keep it at hand along with the bath soap to be used for roughness of the skin, chafing or irritation. Prevention is so much better than cure. Powders clog the pores, but Dr. Chase's Ointment cleanses the pores and thereby keeps the skin soft and smooth. Sample box free if you mention this paper. ## DATE OF SAILING OF SECOND CONTINGENT DEFINITELY FIXED

Soldiers Have Been Held in Canada at the Request of British War Office---Premier Gives Information in Regard to the Canadian Forces

OTTAWA, April 12.—In the House of Commons Saturday night, Sir Robert Borden spoke at length on what has been accomplished since the outbreak of the war in recruiting, mobilising and equipping the volunteers and sending them to the front. Canada now has over 100,000 men under arms. The force, according to the Prime Minister, quadruples the number of British troops under Wellington at Waterloo and largely exceeds the entire force on either side possessed by the allied forces at at that world-famed battle. In this connection, he called attention to the fact that the first contingent had taken more guns from Canada than were possessed by the allied forces at Waterloo.

The Prime Minister said he desired to lay at rest comments and speculation respecting the delay in forwarding the second contingent. The contingent was ready to sail last December, but the British War Office requested that they be not sent to England until a date not yet arrived, which of course he was not at liberty to give to the House. The reasons for this decision were given by the War Office and acquiesced in by the Dominion Government. For one thing the War Office was already greatly overtaxed in providing for the huge military force already in training in the British Isles. It was also desired that the second contingent should not be exposed to some of the unavoidable hardships endured by the first contingent during the past winter at Salisbury Plains.

Sir Robert spoke in eloquent praise of the generous and patriotic response to the call for enlistment. The young men under training in Canada as well as those already sent overseas were a credit to the Dominion and our troops already at the front had behaved [illegible] country. The general program already announced has been carried out to date and should the war last for another year, Canada would have at least 100,000 on the plains of Europe, and 50,000 more in training in Canada.

The total number of officers and men now enlisted amounts to 101,560, which includes units of the active militia on active service in Canada of 9,777; units recruited and organized for overseas service but not mobilised, 3,500, and permanent force in Canada, 2,340.

The remainder, classified as the overseas forces, number 85,752.

The troops are distributed as follows: In Bermuda, 952 officers and men; at St. Lucia, 100 men; in England and at the front, 35,420, and in training for overseas service in Canada, 65,000.

The Canadian Expeditionary Force is made up as follows: The first contingent, consisting of the first division army troops and surplus units and line of communication units; the second contingent comprising the second division and line of communication units, a force of Canadian mounted rifles, an infantry reserve and depots.

The cavalry and horse artillery have been posted to a mounted brigade commanded by Brigadier-Gen. the Rt. Hon. J. E. B. Seely, S.D.S.O., and are still in England. One composed of detachments from mounted corps provides cavalry reinforcements; three furnish reinforcements for the infantry, and the fifth forms a general reserve.

Speaking of the force of Canadian Mounted Rifles, Col. Gwatkin says in a memorandum read by the Premier, that when the Army Council decided on the form the assistance from Canada should take, disappointment was felt, particularly in the West, at the exclusion of cavalry and mounted rifles. So long as trench fighting continued mounted troops were not required in the western theatre of operations. But they were required in Egypt which was threatened with invasion and, moreover, it was not unreasonable to suppose that the situation in Belgium and in France would undergo a change. Therefore, it was decided to proceed with the mobilisation of 12 regiments of mounted rifles. In addition to the 12 "fire line" battalions of the second division there are in Canada 24 "reserved" battalions in the various stages of development. These will be utilized as circumstances require; in Canada for draft giving purposes, or in England as training depots or as complete units at the seat of war.

RELIEF SHIP IS SUNK BY PIRATES

Bearer of New York States' Gifts to Belgium Destroyed—Was Flying United States Colours—Many of the Crew Are Drowned

ROTTERDAM, April 12.—The Belgian relief ship Harpalyce of London, the bearer of New York State's first cargo of gifts, which was sunk north of the Hinder Lightship, Saturday, by a German submarine, was flying the flag of the American Commission when she was torpedoed, according to the testimony of Capt. Matroos, of the Dutch steamer Elizabeth, which brought to this port 22 of the 27 rescued members of the crew of 53.

The Constance Catherine, also a Dutch steamer, picked up five of the men. It is feared that all of the remaining members of the crew have been lost. The Harpalyce sank within five minutes of receiving the torpedo. Capt. Matroos said he was in an excellent position to see the whole affair, and that the American Relief Commission's flag flying from the jib stay of the Harpalyce was plainly visible to him as he stood on the bridge of his vessel which was then one mile astern of the Harpalyce.

"While I was watching the Harpalyce," said the captain, "suddenly I saw a cloud of smoke and heard a tremendous explosion. I put on full steam for the ship. Then I saw the periscope of a submarine about a hundred yards from the Harpalyce going away from the sinking vessel. The wash of the periscope was quite plain. I got a lifeboat launched and picked up 13 men who were swimming about or clinging to the wreckage. Then I turned my attention to those in the boats. The second officer was unconscious when I recovered him, but I got him into a warm bunk with warm bottles and he recovered after two hours, just as the ship was disappearing. There were three or four distinct and heavy explosions, as four boilers burst. Everyone was covered with wreckage. Three Chinamen were badly injured. The Constance picked up five and I believe the Ruby, an American ship, picked up one or perhaps two; but no more."

SENTENCE COMMUTED

Cekoski Will Serve 20 Years in Prison

TORONTO, April 12.—Tomas Cekoski will not pay the death penalty for his part in the murder of Bongero Trendo. The petition which was sent to Ottawa in his behalf has been successful and as a result sentence has been commuted to twenty years' imprisonment.

When the good news was told him by Rev. Jos. Hinsman, his spiritual advisor Saturday, Cekoski was overcome. He fell upon his knees, and reaching his hand to his informant, cried bitterly and uttered a prayer.

A telegram from Under Secretary of State, Thomas Mulvey, contained the brief message which meant so much. It was with John Zioiko that he was implicated in the murder, and both were found guilty. Zioiko, the elder of the two, shouldered all the blame and has expressed the hope on many occasions that his friend would be spared. He was willing to pay the penalty for both.

The younger man says he will be a model prisoner, and that when he is liberated he will spend the balance of his life working for the wife and family of his companion.

Dead, Aged 107 Years.

UXBRIDGE, Ont., April 12.—Michael O'Neil, a native of Ireland and a resident of Uxbridge for seventy years, died here yesterday at the unusual age of 107. He had been a wonderfully vigorous man, never sick, a simple liver, and retained his mental faculties to the last. He was honest and God-fearing, and raised a large family, many of whom he outlived. The citizens of the town celebrated his 106th birthday last June.

Bulgarians Were Raiders.

LONDON, April 12. — Bulgarians were responsible for raids on Serbian and Greek soil a week ago, despite the denials of the Bulgarian Government. This is the gist of an official despatch from Nish to the Serbian legation, given out here Saturday. It states that Bulgarian passports were found upon the bodies of some of the dead. The raiders were Comitadjis (Bulgarian irregulars), led by Bulgarian and Turkish officers.

SLAVS ARE POURING INTO HUNGARY NOW

Mountain Struggles End and the Russians Are Now Decending the Slopes While a New Battle is Imminent--The Situation in the West.

LONDON, April 12.—The Russian troops are now within four miles of the Uszok Valley at several points, having waded through snow seven feet deep and defeating Austrian attacks near Rosochacs. This move is to cut off the enemy holding the pass of this name. Fighting generally on the entire front has been prosecuted with success, and nearly 4,000 Germans and Austrians have been captured in two days' operations.

The Carpathian mountains are still the most active centre of the war. Here the Russians took the offensive from their positions near Csaboloca and captured Wirawa, in an advance towards Mesolaborcs. They also captured height 900 in the principal range of the Carpathians, thereby driving back the enemy along the whole extent of the main ridge of the Carpathians along the 75-mile front of the Russian offensive.

Bringing up considerable reinforcements the Germans and Austrians made violent counter-attacks towards Roski. These were defeated by the Russians, who captured 1,000 prisoners, including twenty officers, and the Russians pushed on their offensive forward under difficult local conditions from the line of Nejaiu, Les Tussica, Volosats and Bukewecs, towards the south.

For a day and night Austro-German forces on Friday and Saturday morning attacked the Russian positions in serried columns, strongly supported by artillery, on the southern slopes across the principal mountain chain in an attempt to save Hungary from invasion at the eleventh hour. The Russians stood on the defensive, repulsed these attacks with enormous losses, and captured an entire battalion with 22 officers and its complement of machine guns.

Several heights held by Austrians were carried after a stubborn fight, and about 1,000 men and 22 officers were captured with four of their machine guns.

Frederick Bennet cabling from Petrograd says:

"All the main ridges of the Carpathians are now in the hands of the Russians, whose separate columns are moving slowly along the river valleys towards the Hut Carrat Plain. They are still about 20 miles from the open country. The weather is rapidly improving and a large force of infantry is able to begin a definite advance along the Uszok river towards a region of considerable market towns. The Russians now hold the 80-mile front of Uszok, Mesolaborcs and Bartfeld, with the head sections of five railways, besides a number of narrow gauge branch lines. These are being prepared for movement of reserves and supplies. The opinion here is that the battle of the Carpathians is now finished definitely as to the battles for Galicia and that the battles for Hungary are now beginning over the entire distance from Dunajets to the Dniester. The Russians have established a continuous line for their offensive. Austro-German attempts of an occasional and spasmodic character are being made in counter-attacks, chiefly in the Roztok region, southeast of Uszok, but reinforcements, consisting of the defeated remnants of the Austrians, driven from the other passes, fail entirely to prevent establishment of a base for operations from the southern slopes of the mountains. The Austrian prisoners are terribly exhausted. Practically all are conveyed to the railway on transport wagons."

Les Eparges, the strongest position on the battle front in France, which commands the plain of the Woevre, and which fell last Friday into French hands, was captured from the 10th active division of the German 5th Army Corps, composed of the best troops in the German army, the French War Office reports last night. The entire position is now controlled by French troops.

No action was begun either with infantry or artillery by the Germans to recover Les Eparges. Saturday no engagements took place between the Orne and Meuse rivers. Between the Meuse and the Moselle rivers the French troops defeated all the attacks of the enemy and made some progress.

Another German line of trenches was captured by the French in Montmarie woods and a counter-attack was defeated. The French position north of Regniciville has been consolidated and slightly extended.

Election to Come

Hon. Robt. Rogers Throws Down Gage in the Commons

OTTAWA, April 12.—In the House of Commons Saturday, Hon. Robert Rogers declared that Canada could not have democratic government until after the dissolution of the present Parliament, and amid loud applause from the Government benches went on to say that all over the country the demand was heard for an immediate appeal to the people.

Hon. Mr. Rogers' declaration was accepted on both sides of the chamber as outlining the chief issue of the Conservative platform at the next election.

The speech followed the return from the Senate of the petition of Parliament to the British Government asking an amendment to the B. N. A. Act to create nine new western senatorships. As last year the Senate added a rider to the effect that the additions should not be made until after a general election, Sir Robert Borden stated that the Government had reluctantly decided to accept the amendment. He said the motive which had actuated the Senate were so obvious that they need not be further discussed.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier demurred. He thought much could be said for the position of the Senate that increased representation in the Senate and House should go hand in hand. After the next general election the four western provinces would have many more members in the House of Commons, and at the same time they would gain additional members in the Senate.

Hon. Mr. Rogers followed condemning the action of the Senate.

Hon. Frank Oliver said the Senate was a co-ordinate branch of the national legislature and had a right to express its views, although they might not agree with the views of Mr. Rogers. If it was so important that Senators should be appointed, why did not the Prime Minister fill the nine vacancies which already existed.

The discussion was continued by Messrs. Bennett (Calgary), Macdonald (Pictou), Maclean (Queens, P.E.I.), Dr. Pugsley and Hon. J. D. Hazen.

An electric lamp stand holding a standard socket that has been patented by a Rhode Island inventor, is stamped out of sheet metal and can be folded flat when idle.

A telephone directory that will hold 300 names and which consists of celluloid leaves that can be fastened around the mouthpiece of a transmitter has been patented.

Rev. Mr. Graeb, of Toronto, at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church

Evening Sermon a Study in the Life of Peter

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Graeb, of Toronto, occupied the pulpit of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church yesterday. His evening text was taken from John 21:17, "Jesus said unto him the third time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me? Peter was grieved because He said unto him the third time, lovest thou me? And he said unto Him, Lord, Thou knowest all things; Thou knowest that I love Thee. Jesus said unto him, Feed My sheep."

Peter, ever rash, impulsive, proud, boastful, self-confident, was the first and most privileged of the disciples of Jesus. He listened to words such as never man spoke before as they fell from the lips of the Son of God. Peter saw unstopped the ears of the deaf, opened the eyes of the blind, the lame to walk; he witnessed the bringing back to life of the dead. He was one of three disciples present on the mount of transfiguration, where he said: "Lord, it is good for us to be here: if Thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles: one for Thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias." Again, in Gethsemane: "Though all men shall be offended because of Thee, yet will I never be offended." "Though I should die with Thee, yet will I not deny Thee." In other words: "I am ready to go with Thee to prison, even to death." Yet, in a short time, with profane language, he denied his Lord and Master.

On the other hand we have Christ, the most unique character in human history, who made his first appearance on earth among lowly surroundings; even the angel choirs left their heavenly abode to sing: "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace and good will toward men." In whole life was attuned to the will of God.

"Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" The inflexible laws of divine righteousness were applied to every thought, every act, and fully obeyed. God's testimony of Him was: "This is My beloved Son in whom I am well pleased, hear ye im."

He never attended any school of philosophy, yet we find the most profound philosophy in the sayings of Jesus. He never sat at the feet of a Socrates, yet the knowledge of Jesus transcended the learning of the wisest sage. He never knew the Homeric poets, yet His words contain grander pathos than Homer could ever conceive. He never listened to the declamations of a silver tongued Demosthenes, yet "never man spoke like this man." Jesus Christ is unique in everything. Nothing can compare with Him! He is a man of colossal dimensions. If ever man was God, or God was man, then Jesus Christ was both. The wise men of old looked down through the dim vistas of the future and declared Him to be "the rose of Sharon, the lily of the valley, the chief among ten thousand, the one altogether lovely. Far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name in heaven above or on earth beneath."

Thus we have a brief outline of the character of Him who stands over against Peter, as they met on the shores of Galilee.

After dining Jesus looked into the eyes of Peter and said: "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me more than these?" to which Peter answered: "Lord, Thou knowest that I love Thee." Then Christ said: "Feed My sheep." The same question was put a second and third time, and Peter is equally sure of his ground, as expressed in the text.

A question naturally arises: Was Peter honest when he made these protestations of fidelity; did he mean what he said.

In pursuing the answer we must notice the difference between admiration and love. Many may admire the character and life of Jesus and yet not love Him. In the gospels we read of the mothers bringing their little ones to Jesus. As they were clustered around Him, and on His knees, stroking His face, what mother would not desire that her child might have been there that Jesus might have touched the darling of her heart. When Jesus and His disciples were going to the city, from the gates came a funeral procession, which Jesus stopped, and laying His hands on the young man He bids the soul re-enter the body. The young man rises from the bier. The funeral is broken up and the mother bears him home in triumph. What a happy home, what a happy mother, because it was on him she depended for her future! Who can read these things and not be filled with admiration and at the same time not love Him truly?

Again we remember the Pharisees brought a woman to Jesus saying: "This woman ought to be stoned." Jesus challenged them. "He that is without sin among you, let him cast the first stone at her." Jesus wrote on the ground, waiting; presently her accusers withdrew. Jesus turning said: "Hath no man condemned thee . . . . neither do I condemn thee; go, and sin no more." Who can read this without admiration and yet not love Jesus truly?

At a country church a congregational meeting was called to consider the erection of a new and larger building. They realized they needed a new church, but they were unable to finance a brick structure. It would have to be of wood. At last a man rose to his feet and said: "I am not a member here, but my wife and children are. I think we should build something better than a wooden church If you will prepare for a brick church I will furnish every brick. I have one thousand feet of seasoned lumber I'll give. Besides I have a team of horses and a hired man, and these are at your service." He did all this and more because he admired the church, yet he was not a Christian.

Going back to Peter, as we think of his sayings to His Master, everyone of them declaring his dependability, and his quick turn over, to profanity and denial, we wonder: "Was Peter honest?" We get our answer from observing the life of Peter from now on.

The day of Pentecost he stood on Solomon's Porch and addressed the rulers and hierarchy at Jerusalem, saying: "Ye have taken Him, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain." The power of God possessed him. Following up Peter's life we find it altogether different. Three times he had denied, three times he must confess. We cannot think that Jesus Christ would have given back to Peter the great work assigned him if he had thought that Peter was not honest. In his last moments Peter wanted to be crucified head down, rather than die like his Master.

"Lord Thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love Thee."

"Let me love thee, more and more,
Till this fleeting, fleeting life is o'er;
Till my soul is lost in love,
In the brighter, brighter world above."

Paul Penman.

Music & Drama

SEPTEMBER MORN.

Crammed with tuneful songs, graceful dances and pretty girls and travelling at express speed from curtain to curtain "September Morn" at the Grand, on Saturday, proved one of the best musical comedies seen here for some time. There was not a dull moment throughout and the audience undoubtedly enjoyed the production, judging by the frequent encores and almost constant laughter. While the plot was almost as scanty as the wardrobe of the damsel from which the play derived its name, yet there is enough to introduce some funny situations and amusing personages, and what more can be asked of a musical comedy plot? The dancing—tango, hesitation, maxixe, etc., was a feature, while the chorus not only made a pretty picture but sang exceedingly well the chorus work in "On You September Morn," and "Everybody's Tango Crazy" being exceptionally clever. There are plenty of song numbers and some of them are most pleasing. The favourites were "When a Little Boy Loves a Little Girl," "Where's the Pleasure in Work and Song if the Woman's Not There" and "Beautiful Dreamer I'm Dreaming," while the comedy number "A Spare Rib from the Butcher Shop of Life" made a big hit.

To The Electors of The North Ward

I am a candidate for alderman in the North Ward caused by the resignation of ex-Alderman William J. Johnston.

If elected I will give my time and careful attention to the ward and the citys' business and interest. My platform briefly is as follows:

1. Day work in preference to contract work.
2. I would insist on corporation work being done by local labour.
3. Municipal ownership of the street railway in conjunction with the Hydro-Electric system.
4. Municipal ownership of the Otonabee Power Co.
5. Aggressive campaign for the securing of new industries.
6. An equal and equitable assessment of properties.

I have had considerable experience in business affairs and will give my best efforts if elected to the city's business.

Yours truly,

OVER THREE HUNDRED MEN AND WOMEN WERE ASSISTED

During the Past Winter by the Salvation Army—Local Corps Celebrates 30th Anniversary—Work Shows a Substantial Increase—The Prison Work

The thirtieth anniversary of the inception of the Salvation Army Corps in Peterborough was celebrated yesterday. Special services were conducted by Brigadier McMillan, assisted by Major and Mrs. Watson, and Band Sergeant McMillan.

As indicated by the appended report of the Secretary of the Corps, covering the work for the past winter, the Army has cared for over 300 men and women, besides children. This is exclusive of aid that was dispensed at Christmas and assistance in the way of clothing, etc., which is carried on throughout the year.

The following reports speak for themselves:

Report of Peterborough Corps.

In taking a general view of the work for the last year we find that we have had a very remarkable year from many standpoints.

First and foremost, from the ladies' standpoint we find that Mrs. McElhiney was appointed as Police Matron, with its multifarious duties, which has been carried out to the satisfaction of all officials and citizens as her first report clearly demonstrated.

The League of Mercy has also in the past year, as before, carried out their errands of mercy as true servants of their Master, and many are the hearts and homes that have been gladdened both in temporal and spiritual needs by them.

Then we have the trip of the Senior Band to represent Canada at the great International Congress, and I think that this in itself is something that stands out pre-eminently as the greatest undertaking of any Corps Band in all the world-wide Army, both for the distance travelled, recognition, and the fact that no financial assistance was received from any source outside their own townsfolk.

Then we go on to the Prison Work with its varying congregation. But under the able guidance of our esteemed officer and Band-Sergeant Brown, instead of having meetings there once or twice a month, we have now entire charge of the religious services every week.

Then we have had the honour of having our Officer promised to the position of Chaplain of our fire-fighting forces. I am sure that he is proud of the boys who form that brigade.

Then again, our citizens, knowing of our Adjutant's ability as a money-getter, have appointed him as Captain of a team to raise money for the Patriotic Fund, wherein he was very successful, being, I believe, third from the top; but not satisfied to let him rest on his well-earned laurels they also appointed him to serve on the Executive Board of that society.

Then, with the coming of winter, the Adjutant, seeing the need of the men and women who were destitute in this city, rented two homes, one for needy men and the other for women, not knowing at the same time, where the money was coming from to finance the scheme, but we are glad to say that over three hundred men and women, besides children, have been fed, some clothed, and all comfortably housed during a long, hard, and trying winter, and, we are glad to say also, that we will finish up the winter clear of debt.

Then, turning to things that concern you and I more closely. I will mention some things in connection with our own Corps. To people who think that the Army is dying out I would like to state that since our Adjutant has taken charge of the Peterborough Corps he number of soldiers has almost doubled. The number added during the past year has been 67.

Then, coming down to our week-night meetings, the attendance has increased 100 per cent., and also in the Sunday meetings there has been a very apparent increase. Then I am pleased to say that our series of meetings at Keene and Lakefield, although carried out under very disagreeable weather conditions, were productive of much good which Eternity alone will reveal.

Then last, but not least, I will not trouble you with a lot of figures in regard to our financial work, but will just quote the diffrences between two quarery balance reports, one from a quarter in 1914, and also from the first in 19015: Total income for quarter in 1914, $749 01, and for 1915, $1,705.43, all of which is respectfully submitted to you.

We are deeply grateful to Almighty God for His kindness to us as a Corps in every respect, and would like also to thank the public for this continued patronage and support.

FRED GANDY,
Corps Secretary.

Sunday School Report.

Following is the Sunday School report:

We have great reason to be thankful to Almighty God for His showers of blessing. Under the leadership of Adjutant and Mrs. McElhiney we can report victory upon victory. The faithful and beloved officers came to us in the summer of 1913. Adjutant has attended the Sunday School every Sunday except when away with the Band to England.

On the occasion of their first Sunday with us the attendance was 174, and in reviewing the past we offer the following report to the soldiers and friends of the Peterborough Corps.

Increase, 6,616; average per Sunday 127.

Average since January, 1915—436.

We now have 41 classes with a staff of workers numbering 57, who have been faithful from every standpoint.

We have added 15 fighting soldiers to the Senior Corps during 1914, and have 12 more ready for enrollment.

On our Junior Roll there are 136 converted children, and 500 names to compose our roll of membership. Our growing Cradle Roll also numbers 35. A Kindergarten has also been added during the past year and has a membership of 62. During the past year 49 children have professed conversion.

Our fine Boys' Band, under the able leadership of Y. P. Bandmaster Blunt, is forging ahead, with some 18 instrumentalists, and 29 others who are learning. God bless the Junior Band.

The year 1914 so filled our Sunday School that Adjutant McElhiney had to get us more room, and with the kindness of the Orangemen of Brownton, we opened a Branch Sunday School in their hall. Yet another extension has been made through the energy of the good people of Brailey District, and Sunday after Sunday the Public School is turned into a Sunday School, where the children of the surrounding country are taught of the love of God.

We must not forget the faithful work of C. Guardian, Mrs. Lang, with the Corps Cadets.

At our recent Annual Week we had an attendance of 1367, with 23 converts; 140 first prizes and 30 second prizes were given.

Our books have been audited regularly and have been found correct. Vouchers for all the payments have been kept in the voucher books and have been examined by the auditors.

We further report on the Brailey and Brownton Sunday School, that we have found great need for improved quarters, and after careful consideration of the Board and Provincial Headquarters we proceeded to erect buildings at each place.

The Brailey Sunday School is in the following state:

Land for this building has been leased to the Army for forty years. A collection has been made among the people of the district, and between four and five hundred dollars donated. The tender for this building is let, and will probably be completed before June 1st.

Brownton stands as follows:

Land valued at $400, has been bought and the balance left unpaid on this lot is $125 and taxes $3.39.

We propose to build a Salvation Army Temple on this land, and we have now in hand for the purpose, cash, $210.67, and promises amounting to $200. Some have also promised work, and others have not specified their manner of helping. This last, we believe, will be worth about $150 to $200.

We still need some kind friend to donate us $500 more to complete Brownton.

Number of families supplied with clothing, food, etc.—169.

Men sent to farms—2.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

What's Doing in Civic Circles—Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

A dead rabbit that found a resting place at the corner of Water and McDonnel streets for over a week has been removed. A dog probably performed the duties of scavenger.

Only three more days until the bye-election in the North Ward. The vote will be polle on Thursday in five subdivisions between the hours of nine and five o'clock.

Added Responsibility.

Mayor Buller as manager of the Empire Baseball Club, promises to take his duties seriously. His long connection with the City Council should qualify him for a position of pinch hitter.

On the Job Again.

Detective Newhall has returned to his duties after an absence of several days, due to illness.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES

Judge Vance, of Barrie, has quashed the conviction of A. E. H. Creswicke, K.C., for refusing to respect a quarantine notice for German measles. The regulations do not empower the Medical Officer of Health to quarantine a house for that disease.

A Big Overdraft.

Mayor Walters, of Hamilton, stated at a Board of Control meeting that the city's overdraft in the Bank of Hamilton was the largest in the city's history, and was steadily increasing.

For Patriotic Purposes.

The County of Wellington is spending $2,000 a month for patriotic purposes, and the committee has decided to purchase a motor ambulance, to be sent to the front. This ambulance will cost $1,500.

Reached Age Limit.

Arrangements are to be made whereby Sergt Hawkins, who retired from the Hamilton police force on account of the age limit, will be retained and given a desk position.

Thorold Denies Support.

The Town Council of Thorold in spite of the fact that every municipality of the Niagara district, including all townships, has organized for the hydro-electric radial railway movement, has decided by a majority of one to withhold its support. Opponents gave as their reason that the city of St. Catharines would benefit and their town would not.

GERMANS SEND MORE TROOPS TO STRENGTHEN YSER POSITIONS

On the Belgian Frontier, April 10.—The Germans continue their desperate efforts to gain a firm foothold on the opposite banks of the Yser. Yesterday they were pushing forward strong reinforcements from Beerst, with field guns and many Maxims, for the purpose of consolidating their new positions, but according to the latest accounts they have only the same precarious foothold across the river that was cautiously described in a telegram from the divisional commander of Thourout. Heavy fighting continues in the region of the Yser, where the allies artillery is subjecting the German advanced trenches to a terrific bombardment. The allies' aeroplanes, flying over Knocke and Lasoute, adjoining the frontier, last night dropped numerous bombs on the German marine stores and depots.

AUSTRIA SEEKING PEACE

PETROGRAD, April 12.—The newspapers again asserted to-day that Austro-Hungary has asked peace terms through a neutral power (presumably Switzerland.) The reports to this effect have been confirmed from authoritative sources, the newspapers asserted.

The fall of Peremysel and the fear that Italy and perhaps Roumania would enter the war on the side of the allies, has caused a spirit of despondency in Franz Josef's empire, according to the despatches received here. The grain supply is rapidly becoming exhausted, according to the Russian correspondents in Switzerland. The feeling in the Dual Monarchy is that the ultimate effect of the war will be disastrous to the empire.

OTTAWA, April 12.—The revelations of the war purchases on boots, bandages, binoculars and bad horses, apparently have crossed the Atlantic, and the British government has begun to sit up and take notice. Soon after the opening of the war the British government entrusted the Canadian government with the purchasing of huge war supplies in Canada for the use of the British and allied forces. It is understood that within the last few days the British government has cancelled the buying commissions given to the Canadian government. This does not mean an end of the purchase of supplies in Canada by the British but that war office buyers are on their way to Canada and the United States to deal direct with producers and manufacturers.

LONDON, April 12.—The American Embassy was to-day asked to make a formal application for the release of the two American steamers, Joseph W. Fordney of Cleveland, and Navajo, from San Francisco taken into Kirkwall by British war ships.

NEW YORK, April 12.—According to a report received from London by The Tribune, England has laid down a new battleship of amazing proportions, which will be by far the most powerful craft afloat. The Tribune's information comes from trustworthy sources. It is stated that this great new ship will be 800 feet in length, will carry six 15-inch guns, and have the wonderful speed of 40 knots.

City Solicitor G. N. Gordon Replies To Mr. W. H. Hill

Peterborough, April 12th, 1915.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In Saturday night's edition of this paper, Mr. W. H. Hill made an attack upon the City Council's deputations and expenditures. He attempts to lay at my door the responsibilities for these expenses.

I might say it appears that about once each month, Mr. Hill manages to scrape up enough courage to write a letter to the papers and make an attack upon me or any body or person with whom I have been associated.

Respecting his attack upon the City Council and myself, respecting the moneys that have been spent under what Mr. Hill calls "deputations," I think this would bear a little inspection. A considerable amount of money was spent for the purpose of obtaining new industries, and as a result of the energetic policy of the Council, under ex-Mayor Bradburn and with ex-Mayor Bradburn's help, the De Laval Dairy and Supply Company, and the Henry Hope Company both located here in 1912, and the Vermont Marble Company located here in 1913. At all events, negotiations in the above years were completed and the agreements concluded with these companies, and in each case, the parent company of these concerns has been up in the million dollar class, and the bringing of these companies to the City of Peterborough and the construction of factories by them has been a policy which I have always supported, and am proud of to-day, notwithstanding Mr. Hill's complaint about moneys being spent to go out of town to get these plants and for other business. He seeks to make me responsible for some expenditures, which he says during the year 1914, amounted to $446.85. I might say that I resigned from the Council on the 6th April, 1914, and the figures I have before me show that $145.00 was spent in deputations or attendances out of town before the date of my resignation, by the whole City Council, and not $446.85, as Mr. Hill states. My expenses during the term of 1912 and 1913 and part of 1914 amounted to $118.28, so Mr. Hill states, and I wish to state, as I here, that the City got mighty good value for any travelling expenses it paid, of mine. Three times I appeared and canvassed nearly a third of the members of the Ontario Legislature on behalf of the City of Peterborough's Private Bill, in our fight for Municipal ownership and the Hydro Electric system, and on one occasion the vote was so close that Sir Adam Beck had the vote turned over for a week in order to get more support to carry it through, so the city did not lose by the active and energetic support given by me in canvassing the members of the Legislature to obtain from them the promise to support the city's bill, and as a result of the city's policy, the City has secured, with Sir Adam Beck's most valuable assistance, the plant which was earning a profit of approximately fifty cents on the dollar of its operating income, and was one of the best purchases which any municipality in Ontario has ever made and my work was chiefly in connection with this, when I was required to go out of town and leave my practice to a very considerable loss to myself.

Mr Hill, who is an employee of the Sun Life Insurance Company, the bond holders of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, to a greater extent than $164,000.00, which the city is to pay for the plant, is very sore by reason of the money expended by the City Council, in what he calls "deputations." I can well understand Mr. Hill, who I have been informed, is a shareholder of the Sun Life Insurance Company, and at all events, as an agent of it, being somewhat upset by reason of the Sun Life being the bond holder of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, expropriated by the city at a valuation of a quarter of what one of the experts said was the value of the plant. The Sun Life had a most eminent lawyer retained to fight its case against the city and before the Private Bills Committee, and at the arbitration, and left no stone unturned to do all it could to retain its interests and to cause the City to pay a higher price, and Mr. Hill and the Sun Life being so closely identified, makes it quite apparent why he should complain with the bitterness with which he does.

I might say that I have been in this fight for Municipal ownership of Public Utilities in the City of Peterborough and I intend to continue to stay in it, notwithstanding what the employees or the agents of any million dollar concern, such as the Sun Life, shall do or say.

Mr. Hill said that I approved of a deputation attending the Provincial Convention of Trustees and Teachers, held in the City of Peterborough. I wish to say that this statement is absolutely untrue, and Mr. Hill made it, knowing it to be untrue. I say further, that I was not at the meeting which appointed this representative, and the only knowledge I had of it was when the minutes of the meeting were confirmed. If Mr. Hill thinks that in not objecting to the minutes I gave my approval, he should consult some persons who has an intelligent knowledge of what minutes of meetings mean, and he will learn that they are simply a true statement of what has taken place at the previous meeting.

At the tail end of Mr. Hill's letter, he rings in a statement about the "ring-boned, spavined and knee-sprung horses that we are hearing so much about at the present time." You would almost think he would appreciate that with the political truce, he should not make an insidious attack upon the Borden Government, now trying to stem a most difficult financial depression and at the same time to take care of recruiting on a scale unprecedented before.

I might say that one of those same ring-boned, spavined and knee-sprung horses would be able to beat Mr. Hill so far, if he ever run again, that he will put this horse in a much speedier class than he is in himself.

Mr. Hill has profited very considerably to the extent of several hundreds of dollars, from the appointment he held on the Water Commissioners, and this does not include any profit from insurance which he has held while he held a public office. It leads me to think that he is adopting that doctrine pronounced by Mark Twain, when he says: "To be good is noble, but to teach others how to be good is nobler and less trouble."

In conclusion, I might add that this herring which Mr. Hill is attempting to draw across the trail, will not divert very many from the knowledge that is going to happen to him within the next few weeks when the investigation he wanted before the Minister of Education will be started in this city, and an intimate knowledge of Mr. Hill's dealings with the public will be brought to light.

Yours truly,
G. N. Gordon.

Roller Skating Is Popular

"Rinking" Favourite Amusement Here Just Now

Roller skating is a great amusement. Nothing better than this delightful pastime; the exercise is good for you. In the United States they have in the past ten years constructed many fine skating academies; some on a very elaborate scale, especially in the larger cities of the East.

Rinking in Canada is enjoyed by thousands. Old and young alike patronise this sport. A great many roller skate for exercise. It is unlike most sport; it is not so vigorous. A skater never tires when the floor is kept in good condition, and at the same time a person would be surprised at the distance covered in two hours' rinking. No matter where you go you would not find a nicer rink than here in Peterborough. On Saturday night the skaters enjoyed a moonlight skate; also the old favourite, a block party with over 60 couples trying for the prize. The lucky persons were Mr. and Mrs. Simpson. The rink will have a band every night this week and a large crowd is looked for. Special attention is given to beginners every afternoon by our instructors. Exclusive patronage.

An Election in June

Is Spoken of by Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., is of the opinion that there will be a Federal election this summer, preferably in June. He foresees the possibility of both parties agreeing to an appeal to the people. Speaking of the Liberal side of the question Mr. Burnham said there there was some good material in the ranks of the Peterborough Liberals, although he did not volunteer any information regarding a potential candidate.

The House will probably prorogue to-morrow. The last few days have been spent in cleaning up the stray ends of business, and as Mr. Burnham puts it—"waiting for the Senate to catch up." Mr. Burnham would favour the abolition of the Senate, which he characterizes as an antiquated and unnecessary institution whether controlled by Liberals or Conservatives.

Burying Ground For City Hebrews

Committee Appointed to Arrange the Details

At a meeting of the Peterborough Hebrew congregation held yesterday the question of securing a burying ground for the Hebrews of the city was discussed and it was decided to purchase a suitable site. A committee composed of Messrs. Sukloff, Fineberg and Lexion was appointed to take up the details of the plan. The matter has been under discussion for some time.

Paintings Will Be On Exhibition

The etchings of Miss Dorothy Stevens, of Toronto, will be on exhibition in the Studio, in the Public Library Building, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons of this week, from 3 to 6 o'clock.

Several paintings by Mrs. Beatrice Haggarty Robertson will also be shown. The exhibition is under the auspices of the Peterborough Branch of the Women's Art Association. Mrs. Aylmer will be in charge of the tea table on Wednesday afternoon.

There will be no charge for admission.

EXPRESS BUSINESS CHANGES HANDS

Mr. J. A. Gibbs has bought out the express business of Mr. Garnet Innes, with headquarters on Simcoe Street. The plant includes express, hacks and a horse and auto livery. Mr. Gibbs is putting the plant in up-to-date shape, and all business entrusted to him will have prompt attention.

FALL WHEAT GOOD SEEDING GOING ON

Drovers report that they have seen many farmers planting wheat during the past week, although seeding is not general. Fall wheat is said to be in fine condition as the result of the week-end. In three hundred acres there was scarcely a patch of injured grain. From the drovers' statements conditions are promising in the country, providing no late frosts are felt.

DRUMMING UP RECRUITS.

Great Fortnight's Campaign Is Begun Throughout Britain.

LONDON, April 12.—A great patriotic campaign to secure recruits for Field Marshal Earl Kitchener's new army was opened in London yesterday. The campaign is to be carried on for a fortnight.

Meetings addressed by Liberal, Unionist, Labor and Irish members of Parliament were held in Hyde Park, Trafalgar Squire, and other centres of the capital, while recruiting sergeants distributed pamphlets showing the pay, separation allowances and other advantages given to soldiers of the King. As a result of the Trafalgar Square meeting 300 recruits registered at the chief recruiting office nearby.

During the fortnight's campaign 1,500 meetings will be held, while troops will engage in street marching.

The Two Reports on the Bad Roads' Investigation

Two boot reports were presented to Parliament. The Conservative and the Liberal members of the committee were not able to agree. There is a majority report signed by the four Conservative members.

There is a minority report, signed by the three Liberal members, Messrs. Macdonald, Nesbitt and Murphy.

They Plead Haste.

The Conservative majority apologise, plead haste to excuse the manufacturers as they were no time for inspection that the department did all that it reasonably could have been expected and that the blame for the boots which were unsatisfactory rested with the late administration which adopted the model from which the present administration worked. There is no reference to graft, to middlemen, to bad leather and undue profits. It is a white-washing report from beginning to end. It condemns the weather. It condemns the soldiers for burning their boots and for cutting them with toe nails and spurs. But it does not blame the government, the inspectors, the grafters or the boots. They were splendid.

The minority report made by the Liberals is a document of different character. It reviews the startling evidence which has been given to the public through the press from day to day and with which the country is so familiar.

It declares that good boots are essential to good soldiering, that it is the duty of a government to supply good boots to men under arms and that the Borden government failed to do this. The boots were unsuited for active service. Poor workmanship, poor materials, poor inspection, poor specifications and undue influence exercised by middlemen are charged. It declared that the efficiency of the men was injured and their health impaired by the character of the boots supplied.

The boots supplied by the manufacturers, accepted by the government and served to the troops were inferior to the samples. The $15,000 profit of Middleman Slater is noted with condemnation. Also the fact that soldiers at Halifax had to tie shingles and bags upon their feet when their boots failed in garrison work. It quotes Alfred Minister, a manufacturer, who would not make the kind of boots the department asked him to make "because he did not want to make money out of any man's life."

Kept on Buying Them.

Although the boots failed the government kept on buying them, placing an order in October for 50,000 pairs similar to those bought in September. In November the specification was changed requiring the double sole to run through to the back of the heel. The price was increased to $4.00 and the boots failed as fast as those of the first lots. There is recorded the complaints of men on active service that the boots caused illness and interference with proper training. The cabled protest against the character of the boots from General Alderson is quoted.

In a summary it is stated that the boots were of unsuitable shape and make and the leather contained no water-resisting medium. The heels and toes were unprotected and the sole-filling often of poor quality. That the boots were unsuited for work for which they were provided because the shape did not give room for the toes, because the leather contained no grease and consequently absorbed water quickly, because the unprotected soles and heels wore quickly when wet.

Could Have Done Duty.

It is declared that with little difficulty or delay the government could have provided boots for the soldiers, the failure to do so constituted a grave and serious neglect on the part of the government.

The report also states that the boots sent with the troops which went to South Africa were of a different type.

Ice Still Fast in the Lakes

Latest reports from the lakes north and south of the city, say that the ice is still fast; Clear and Rice Lake being particularly referred to. Yesterday's thunder is expected to have a loosening effect.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

MANAGER DOC REISLING IS READY FOR SEASON

London Advertiser—While the rest of the managers in the Canadian League are still angling for players and trying to sign up pennant-winning aggregations, Manager "Doc." Reisling, of the London Club, is quietly sitting back and waiting for the season to open. "Doc." has all his players signed up and they are ready to report at any time. The London Manager has collected a bunch of players that he feels sure will give London just as good a team or better than this city has yet been represented by in the Canadian League. He is just waiting for the time to bring them to London to demonstrate their ability to the fans.

Players Report Here May 10.

Owing to the late start of the Canadian League this season, it is not likely the London players will report here before May 10. The opening games are scheduled for May 19, and by reporting here on May 10, the players will have a week and a half of training in Tecumseh Park. Nearly all of the players will be in good condition when they reach here. They are mostly Ohio boys, and many of the players live in towns so close to each other that they will likely participate in several games together before coming here. Manager Reisling may arrive in the city about the first of the month. The work of getting the grounds into shape will likely start next week. Repairs to the grandstand and bleachers will be made, and a lot of work will be put on the diamond.

Mullen Released Outright.

All doubt as to the club's intentions in the case of Mike Mullen has vanished with the announcement through the minor league bulletins issued by Secretary Farrell that the London third-sacker of last season has been released outright. Snyder has not been released, but he will not be here this season. He has ignored the contract sent to him, so that he is automatically under suspension.

Nothing further has been heard about the proposed trade between the London and St. Thomas clubs by which Heinie Steiger goes to the Saints for Garland Nevitt, the Indian catcher. The deal may be still pending.

OPENING GAMES IN THE FEDERAL LEAGUE

BROOKLYN, April 10.— Brooklyn defeated Buffalo 13 to 9 in a ragged game before a big crowd at the opening of the Federal League season here to-day. The contest dragged along for more than three hours, Seaton's slow work in the box and many changes in the line-up being chiefly responsible. It is considered probable that the game will be thrown out, as Grover Land, of the Brooklyns, after batting for Upham, was taken out to let Howard run for him, after which Land donned the mask and finished the game behind the bat. Manager Lee McGee, who was put out of the game in the first inning, for protesting a decision, explained that Watson was to have relieved Simon, but as the former had a sore finger it was found necessary to put Land behind the bat. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Buffalo | 1 | 0 | 0 3 1 4 0 0 0 — 9 | 10 | 4 |
| Brooklyn | 0 | 1 | 5 0 2 0 3 x — 13 | 14 | 5 |

Batteries— Bedient, Schultz, Ford and Blair; Seaton, Upham, Lafitte and Simon and Land.

At Baltimore—Newark signalized its entry into the Federal League by defeating Baltimore here to-day 7 to 5. Ten hits were made off Quinn, who was relieved by Smith in the eighth inning. Governor Goldsborough threw the first ball into the diamond. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Newark | 0 | 3 | 1 0 0 2 0 0 1 — 7 | 13 | 2 |
| Baltimore | 2 | 0 | 0 0 0 3 0 0 0 — 5 | 8 | 2 |

At Kansas City—Allen, pitching for Pittsburg, kept his hits well scattered, and the Kansas City Federals lost the first game of the season 8 to 0. Konetchy hit a home run in the fifth, scoring Mowrey and Berghammer ahead of him. James A. Gilmore, of Chicago, president of the Federal League, and G. W. Gwinner, president of the Pittsburg club, were given an ovation by the largest crowd that ever attended a Federal game here. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pittsburg | 0 | 0 | 0 0 0 0 5 0 1 1 — 8 | 9 | 0 |

Batteries — Allen and O'Connor; Main, Packard and Easterly.

At Chicago— Eddie Plank, making his debut as a Federal Leaguer, was the victim of an eighth-inning batting rally which gave Chicago a cluster of three runs and a 3-to-1 victory over St. Louis in the opening game of the season today. Up to the eighth his cross-arc baffled the locals, not one of whom reached third, and his own double and Tobin's triple gave the visitors a one-run lead in the fifthy. Three hits, a fielder's choice and a successful squeeze play gave Chicago three runs in the eighth. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
| St. Louis | 0 | 0 | 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0 0 — 1 | 4 | 0 |

GREAT INTEREST IN INDOOR BALL LEAGUE

A great deal of interest is being taken in the Indoor Baseball League at the Armouries. Quite a crowd witnessed the game last week. The different teams are working hard to win the trophies put up for competition by the officers. Each man on the winning team will get a watch fob or locket, and the team will get a pennant for their Company room.

Games are played on Wednesday and Friday nights—two games each night.

No. 8 Company will practice tonight at 7 p.m.

On Friday night two very exciting games were played at the Armouries. In the first game No. 5 Co. defaulted to No. 6. Co.

A practice game was played between No. 6 Co. and a picked team. The picked team won, score 7-4.

The line-ups were:

Picked Team—Meyers p, Dunn rf, Carpenter cf, Rumery lf, Cummings ss, Morphet 1stb, Drysdale 2ndb, Lebar c, Lehar 2ndb.

No. 6 Co.—McIntosh ss, Preston rf, Browett 3rdb, Devins p, Sharpe c, Thockery lf, White 2ndb, Chambers 1stb, P. Ecobichon cf.

In the second game No. 8 Co. defeated No. 7 Co. by the score of 12-8. This was one of the best games pulled off this season.

No. 8 Co. sure look like winners, unless some of the other companies buck up and do something.

The teams:

No. 7 Co.—Halt c, Freeman ss, Ecobichon 1stb, Barrell 2ndb, Logan p, Preston lf, Munro 3rdb, Freeman rf, Frost cf.

No. 8 Co.—Heaslip c, McDonald ss, Clancy 1stb, Stewart 2ndb, Hardill p, Pigeon lf, Jackson 3rdb, Crowe rf, Nichel sf.

LACROSSE IS BOOMING ACROSS THE BORDER

The growth of interest in lacrosse in the United States has been very steady in recent years. It is generally known of course that Art Warwick coached Yale in 1911 and 1912, and that he has gone back again to help whip the team into shape this season. "Newsy" Lalonde is doing similar work for Swarthmore. Billy Fitzgerald is with Hobart, and O'Neill, a Cornwall player, not well known around these parts, has been secured by the Carlisle Indians. These do not by any means represent the total growth of lacrosse in the Republic. In fact it has now become so well developed that they now have an intercollegiate league, divided into two sections. In the northern division the teams are Harvard, Cornell at Ithaca, and Hobart at Geneva, with Yale as the latest entry. They are taking up lacrosse this year in that universiay, and Yale and Harvard will found an important new intercollegiate date when they meet to try conclusions on May 8th. Last year Cornell disputed the championship of their section with Harvard, and these teams are expected to be the chief contenders this season, with the odds in favour of Harvard, who have eleven of last year's ment out with them again, in addition to promising newcomers from their Rugby ranks. In the South, the Johns Hopkins College team is probably the most famous, but they also have good teams at the Maryland Agricultural College and at the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Lacrosse has been boomed in these colleges as a great game for Rugby players, demanding as it does, speed, condition and ability to think quickly. Graduates from the universities are carrying the game into the cities. There is now a Boston Lacrosse Club, which was worked up by old Harvard men, while in the South, the Mount Washington Lacrosse Club got its first impetus from graduate players of the Johns Hopkins team. Of course the team which has become most widely known in Canada is the Crescent Athletic Club of Brooklyn, which entertains a number of teams from the Dominion every year. These do not comprise all the teams playing in the United States, but the list indicates that Canada's national game is making its way across the border.

Sequel to a Baseball Game

LA TART, W. Va., April 12.—Two men are dead, two dying and two seriously wounded as the result of a triple duel fought between six brothers of two different families with knives and revolvers.

The duels were watched by several hundred persons, who for fear of their lives dared not stop the duelists. The feud responsible for the outbreak started several months ago over a baseball game.

The dead are Urson Bosworth, 38, and Earl Shirley, 28. John Bosworth and Jackson Shirley are dying, and Tom Bosworth and Harry Shirley are seriously, perhaps fatally, wounded.

PLIGHT OF CAPITAL MAKES TURKS DESPAIR

Constantinople the great Religious Centre of Mohammedans—Its Fall to Them End of World

With the departure of Sultan Mahomed V., the successor of the prophet, from Constantinople, when that great city has been captured by the allies, with the driving out of his dervishes, teachers, muezzins, the profanation of his cathedral, St. Sophia, the average Mohammedan the world over would think that the end of things was about come. Islam has a great educational centre in Cairo but where else has it had a great political and religious centre of the importance of Constantinople? At Mecca the faithful could see relics and visions, but in the sultan-high-priest's city they would see the realities of the temporal power of their religion. There they could see St. Sophia, the visible sign of Christianity's decay and failure. They could visit the gorgeous mosques of the various sultans, testifying to the wealth and power and faithfulness of great monarchs. At seasons there were great religio-political processions, festivities and solemnities, with tens of thousands of soldiers and religious teachers, stately dignitaries of the empire, richly-gowned ladies of the harem, all the dazzling evidences of triumph in politics and religion. While the capital held out the decline of Turkish power, so manifest to the rest of the world, was hidden to the true believer. The successors of Mahomed might at any time begin anew the conquering march on western Europe with the millions of Asia and Africa praying and fighting in his ranks. The apologies of the professors of the Mohammedan University in Cairo to the students whom they are training to extend the faith in the Soudan and central Africa in the next few weeks will be as difficult as the explanations of the Herr Doktors of Heidelberg and Berlin concerning Belgium. The thought of the believers as the word spreads from the crowded cities of Asia Minor, Persia, India and Morocco to the desert and plain dwellers will be of despair. With the fall of Constantinople the fall of Mohammedanism would begin. With the same event would come the last phase in the decline of the Turkish away which extends over 30 millions of people and over 1,111,741 square miles of the earth. For in the hearts of the Mohammedans the city cannot be replaced. Smyrna with its 300,000 inhabitants might have its population multiplied the necessary six times to equal Constantinople. Other cities for nothing in particular. Storied Bagdad or any of Asia Minor's cities would not do for the same reason. They are not symbols of the triumph of a prophet's flag. Until now Constantinople had saved Turkey and Islam. The shock to the millions of Mohammedans in British India, in Italian Tripoli, in French Algeria and in Spanish Morocco will be great and will probably result in great decrease in the difficulties of government. In this fact Britain will find compensation should she dislike to let Russia's fleet pass through the swing bridges into the Golden Horn and establish the centre of her religious life in St. Sophia.

Constantinople has always been a religious centre and more than that the centre of a religion which was closely connected with the state. The first Constantine, believing that religion made a better soldier, saw in a vision a Cross and the words, "In this sign conquer." He told this to his soldiers, who were mostly Christians and they were inspired to conquer the world for him. His first step was to move his political capital from Rome to the New Rome, which with due recognition the after ages have called the city of Constantine. He made the bishop or patriarch of his capital strictly a state official and as the other patriarchates of the East, Alexandria, Antioch and Jerusalem fell to the Moslems the patriarchs of the eastern capital became the greatest in the East. Constantine had the second general council of the Christian Church held under his watchful eye at his capital and three later councils of the whole church were also held there. The last in 860 set out to end a great heresy as its predecessors had done, but this heresy had become the orthodoxy of the West under the bishop of Rome and the church split, never to unite again. Meanwhile the successors of Constantine had kept a pretty tight hold upon their patriarchs, a subservience of the spiritual power which was highly displeasing to western Christianity, but has continued a feature of Greek Catholicism down to this day. The Russian Emperor is frankly the spiritual head of his people and is supreme over their church management. When the Turk came there was no change, except a change of religion. The Sultan has been the recognized head of the faithful on earth, identifying the spiritual and political functions in one man. It will be interesting to see what sort of a religious centre Constantinople will become in the near future. It is still the natural centre of the Greek faith held by Russia, Roumania, Bulgaria, Servia, Greece, and by part of Austria. In all these old provinces of the Turkish empire the Christian faith was never stamped out and the Mohammedans remaining nowhere form anything like a majority. Will the Balkan peninsula be drawn by religious bonds towards a Russian Constantinople and into the circle of Russia's political influence?

Was Out But Ran Wild On Bases Anyway

Umpire Billy Evans Discusses What He Calls the Funniest Play He Ever Saw

TELEPHONE ETIQUETTE

(By Umpire Billy Evans)

Dave Altizer slipped me my biggest laugh on the ball field. Dave was then playing with the Chicago club. He had just been sent to that club from Cleveland. When the Cleveland club came to Chicago for a series of games, Dave made up his mind to show the Chicago fans what a big mistake the Cleveland club had made in releasing him.

Cleveland had a lead of a couple of runs. With one down, Altizer reached first base on a single. The hit and run sign was flashed, and as the pitcher delivered the ball, Dave dashed for second. It so happened that the batter sent a line drive into the waiting hands of George Stovall, then playing first for Cleveland. It was an easy matter to stop on the sack, completing a double play and retiring the side.

Altizer not realizing that he had been doubled up, was going on at top speed. As he neared second, Nick Allbrook, then on the Chicago pitching staff, and coaching at third, yelled:

"Slide, Dave, slide."

Altizer hit the dirt. Stovall seeing the humour of the situation, threw the ball high and wide to second, it going into left centre. Altizer regained his feet and dashed for third. The centre fielder made a good throw to third, but the third baseman allowed the ball to get away. Altizer had slid into third at the beckoning of Allbrook.

Noticing the ball had gotten away from the third sacker, he made for the plate. The third baseman recovered the ball, and made a perfect throw. It had Altizer beaten a yard, but the catcher made it a point to miss touching Altizer so far as he slid into the base that it was apparent to everyone in the park that he had failed.

By this time the South Side fans were in an uproar. They were falling out of their seats laughing.

I had followed Altizer around the bases, just as though he was pulling a most daring feat of base running. As he slid into the plate, although it was apparent Altizer hadn't been touched yet. I declared him out in my very best voice, coupled with a majestic wave of arms.

I walked half way around the diamond trying to get away from Altizer but he followed me like a bloodhound. It was only through the greatest persuasion on the part of his team mates that he consented to go to his position. It was not until the next inning that he learned the real facts, that he had been doubled at first base, and was out, when he believed he was doing some wonderful base running.

I saw Altizer last season after several years, and I started to smile. Before I said a word he remarked:

"You're thinking of that game at Chicago, when I ran wild after being doubled up." He hadn't forgotten it, either.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, April 10.—Evidence that offerings of spot and May deliveries were passing into strong hands forced sellers of wheat today to be extremely cautious about acting on bear news. In consequence the market closed unsettled, ¾c off to ¼c up, compared with last night. Corn finished ⅛c to ⅛c down, oats varying from ⅛c decline to ⅛c advance and provisions at an advance of 2½c to 20c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, April 10.—Wheat opened ⅝c to 1⅛c lower, oats ⅛c lower for May, and flax ⅝c to 1⅛c lower. Prices strengthened gradually on reports of export sales being carried thru in the south. The war news had little or no effect on today's market. Local export enquiry was fair, while prices were out of line.

Cash offerings were light for spot wheat. Opening of navigation offerings were numerous, but buyers were scarce.

Wheat futures closed ⅛c to ⅝c lower after a fluctuation of 1c to 1⅛c, cash ⅛c lower for contract grades, oats ⅛c to ⅛c lower, and flax ⅛c to 1⅛c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, April 10.—There was no improvement in Manitoba spring wheat today, and business continues dull. Business in coarse grains for domestic account is also quiet and the undertone of the market for some lines is easy, but there is no actual change in prices to note. The local and foreign demand for flour is easy, little new business being done. Demand for millfeed continues fair. The feeling in butter is strong owing to the small supplies available on spot, and the continued light receipts, for which there is a fairly good demand. Receipts for the week were 3617 packages as compared with 2842 for the same week a year ago.

The local demand for cheese is good and the tone of the market is strong. Receipts for the week were 873 boxes against 430 a year ago. Eggs active, but easy owing to liberal supplies coming forward. Receipts for week [illegible] cases, as compared with 11,000 a year ago. Refined sugar declined 15c per cwt., making standard granulated $5.60.

PRINCE SAVED GERMAN.

But Breach Cost Him a Severe Reprimand and Suspension.

LONDON, April 12. — The Daily Telegraph publishes a story to the effect that the Prince of Wales recently saved a German prisoner taken at St. Eloi from being shot as a spy under circumstances that led to a court-martial inquiry to investigate the charge made by Major Deane against the prince of "committing an act gravely violating military discipline." The prince saw a German being led off to be shot as a spy. Asking the reason, the prince was told that the man had been found in the British lines wearing a British officer's overcoat and that he was trying to make his way back to the German lines when captured.

The prince spoke to the German in his own language, and learned that the man had become detached from a German patrol, and was simply endeavoring to rejoin his own lines when he was taken prisoner. Believing the story, the prince, despite the protests of the lieutenant, took the man in his auto to Major Deane and as a result the prince was severely reprimanded and suspended for three days. The prisoner's story proved to be correct and he was sent to England.

French Ship Torpedoed.

LONDON, April 12. — A despatch from Le Treport, France, 16 miles northeast of Dieppe, says the French three-masted ship Chateaubriand from London for New York with a cargo of chalk, was sunk by a German submarine off the Isle of Wight at 11 a.m. Thursday. The crew of 25 was saved.

Horn's Writ Contested.

BOSTON, April 12. — Werner Horn's petition for a writ of habeas corpus was attacked by Government attorneys in a demurrer filed in the federal court Saturday. Horn, who is under indictment for illegal interstate transportation of explosives with which he tried to destroy the international bridge at Vanceboro, Maine, claimed that he had been denied his legal rights. The demurrer contests this claim and declares that Horn was not denied due process of law by the refusal of Federal Judges Putnam and Hale to hear a habeas corpus petition presented in the Maine jurisdiction.

GEN. SAM HUGHES SAW MEN OF 39th

OTTAWA, April 12.—Buying horses for the 8th Mounted Rifles is proving slow work, the regiment having only in the neighbourhood of 120, while the government agents have been purchasing for this unit for several weeks.

The remount officers have been buying animals throughout this district all winter and as a result have pretty well cleaned up the desirable available beasts. Only riding horses are wanted for the Mounted Rifles, and much more care has to be exercised in selecting suitable ones. This is a time of the year when the farmers and other horse owners are expecting to make something out of their work and are not so anxious to sell.

Horse owners say that the militia authorities could get good animals if they would pay a respectable price for them. The militia department buyers will accept nothing but the very best horses but are not willing to pay the best prices, they say.

With Lt.-Col. Munro in command, the Mounted Rifles held a route march through the city this morning regardless of the rain. The regimental bugle band led the parade.

The men are showing the effect of the rigorous training they have been subjected to and marched along like so many veterans. There were about 560 men in line.

Recruits For Remount Depot.

Lt.-Col. D. Walker has received authority to enlist recruits for a remount depot for immediate service in England. There are required from this division, 4 blacksmiths, 2 saddlers, 40 horse riders and 21 other men for the depot. Applicants may apply at the armouries at 8 o'clock each evening.

Among the members of the 8th Mounted Rifles who are home from Ottawa on leave are: Sergt. A. E. Paterson, Sergt. Geo. Farrance, Sergt. T. Fairbrass, Sergt. E. Morley, Ptes. A. Bartley, J. Foster, I. Bradley, Geo. Adamson and T. Williams.

Capt. Carruthers Bereaved.

The many friends of Capt. Carruthers of Peterborough, quartermaster of the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., will be sorry to learn that he has been bereaved in the death of his brother, Gunner Peter Carruthers of the 39th Battery, C.F.A., C.E.F., who died in the military Hospital at Lethbridge, Alta., on Thursday last. Gunner Carruthers whose home was in Ottawa, enlisted in the west in December, and had been in training preparatory to going to the front. Capt. Carruthers will leave Belleville for Ottawa to-morrow to attend the funeral.

DEATH OF BOMB. CARRUTHERS.

The Lethbridge Herald, in relating to the death of Bomb. Carruthers, brother of Capt. Carruthers of Peterborough, says:

The Union Jack at the Battery barracks was at half mast this morning for the first time, in respect to Bombardier Peter Carruthers, who died early this morning, presumably of heart failure. Mr. Carruthers was on guard duty last night and at 2 o'clock this morning was suddenly taken ill. Lieut. Dr. Mewburn was immediately called and then Dr. Thompson, but to no avail, and in twenty minutes death occurred.

The deceased was an old-timer in this country. He came to Cranbrook some 12 years ago, where he was in the employ of the C.P.R. He was a member of the famous lacrosse team of Cranbrook, and played in Lethbridge many a time against the local team. He was one of Cranbrook's star players. Seven years ago he was moved to to Lethbridge, where he was freight conductor between Frank and this city. While in Lethbridge he resided with Mr. Wm. Scott, 1215 4th Avenue, S. On January 4th he volunteered, and since then has been with the 20th Battery. Proof of the appreciation of his worth was shown some time ago when promotion was offered him. His modesty caused him to refuse the stripes, and it was not until April 1st that he accepted the rank of Bombardier.

Bombardier Carruthers was born in Ottawa in 1880. He is survived by his father, who lives there, and several brothers and sisters in this country, among them being Mrs. Reynolds of Granum. His father was notified this morning.

Naturally his sudden death was a great blow to his comrades of the 20th Battery, among whom he was very popular and greatly beloved.

Major Stewart, in an interview this morning, spoke very highly of him, saying that he was as good a soldier as he was lacrosse player.

THE GERMANS LAUNCH A NEW OFFENSIVE IN POLAND

Belgians Attempting to Expel the Germans

Violent Hand-to-Hand Combats in The Streets

of Dreigrachten, on the Western Bank of the Yser---Belgians Endeavouring to Drive Enemy From Towns and Villages

LONDON, April 13.—Severe fighting has been resumed near the sea coast in Flanders, according to Amsterdam despatches to-day, with the Belgians again attempting to expel the Germans from Dreigrachten, on the western bank of the Yser. Hand-to-hand combats in the streets of Dreigrachten and the villages to the south-west are increasing in violence. British aviators, the Amsterdam despatches said, have executed another raid into Belgian territory held by the Germans. They have dropped bombs along the railway line leading from Bruges to Antwerp, returning safely along the coast. The extent of the damage done by the bombardment is unknown.

HAVE SUPPRESSED RIOTS.

LONDON, April 13.—Marines from five allied cruisers, co-operating with military and civil forces at Singapore, and lately reinforced by six companies of British territorials, have now completely suppressed the Singapore riots that began Feb. 15, according to an official statement issued today. All but eleven of the mutineers have been accounted for. 814 have been captured and 82 killed, with scarcely any casualties to allied forces. The native soldiers had planned a general massacre of the whites, but the Japanese prevented it.

Name Street After Lady Paget

NISH, via London, April 12.—As a memorial to the devotion of Lady Paget, the municipality of Uskub has decided to rename the finest street in that city after her.

Lady Paget, wife of Sir Ralph Spencer Paget, a member of the British diplomatic service, is a grand-daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Paran Stevens, of New York. She has been in Serbia working with the Red Cross for some time past. She became ill, but is now convalescent. Her death at one time was erroneously reported.

The death roll of Serbian physicians from typhus is very heavy.. During the last two months 107 physicians out of 452 have lost their lives.

What the British Navy Has Done

Mr. Archibald Hurd draws an amusing picture of what the British Navy has done, in the Fortnightly Review.

A Bottled Fleet.

"The High Sea Fleet of Germany has been 'contained' in its home ports without respite; not a single German battle squadron has been at sea.

Captured Mercantile Marine.

"Five and a half million tons of German shipping and one million tons of Austro-Hungarian shipping have been driven off the seas or captured. Germany's mercantile marine ranked second only to that of Great Britain; for some years she held the blue ribbon of the Atlantic; she was Britain's most serious rival in every sea, and had practically captured from her the trade on the west coast of Africa and with Brazil and Argentina.

Overseas Trade Strangled.

The overseas trade of Germany and Austro-Hungary has been strangled, ing mainly to the ubiquity of British sea power. In 1913 the foreign trade of Germany amounted to £1,021,000,000, and of this about 60 per cent. was ocean borne. The foreign trade of Austria-Hungary in the same year was valued at £256,562,000; 50 per cent of this trade was probably ocean borne. Consequently Germany and her ally have been denied, by the loss of their sea communications, trade of an aggregate annual value of £363,280,000; half of this gigantic total—£431,630,000 — would represent the fine which the British Fleet, in association with that of France in the Mediterranean, had imposed on these two beligerents since war broke out if all sea traffic had been stopped. Some trade in neutral bottoms has, however, been carried on, and the net loss has probably amounted to about £400,000,000.

Costly Colonial Empire Lost.

"The German colonial empire has been almost entirely destroyed. On these possessions, representing five times the area of the Fatherland, Grmany, down to 1908, had spent £56 900,000, and the only outlay in the subsequent six years having been at the rate of approximately £1,500,000 a year, she must have spent upon her colonies altogether £66,000,000. Almost all the results of this expenditure have been lost to Germany, owing to the isolation which British sea power imposed when the war opened, and the subsequent overseas expeditions which were undertaken by Britain and her Dominions, and by Japan.

A Million Soldiers Held Up.

"There were about 40,000,000 persons of German, Austrian or Hungarian nationality, or origin, resident in foreign countries when the war opened. At the lowest estimate 1,000,000 of those who are of military age would have crossed the seas to fight in Europe bor for the barrier imposed by British men-of-war. In this way the supreme naval Power made no inconsiderable contribution to the strength of the Allied armies. This million of additional men might have turned the scale decisively in the early period of the war.

"On the other hand, the British Fleet, while denying to the enemies the use of the seas, has secured to the British peoples and our Allies uninterrupted ocean communication with the markets of the world, with the result that the inhabitants of the United Kingdom have been able in the phrase of the moment, to carry on 'business as usual'—or very much as usual."

Foretold!

The memorandum of the German Navy Act of 1900 was not far wrong when it foretold that:

"An unsuccessful naval war of the duration of even only a year would destroy Germany's sea trade, and would thereby bring about the most disastrous conditions, first in her economic, and then, as an immediate consequence, in her social life.

"Quite apart from the consequence of the possible peace conditions, the destruction of our sea trade during the war could not, even at the close of it, be made good within measurable time, and would add to the sacrifices of the war a serious economic depression."

Saw End of War In Recent Vision

PARIS, April 13.—There is much excitement in the northern district over a story which the Journal des Debats says the army automobilists have investigated and found to be correct:

A seven-year-old girl awakened on Palm Sunday and told her mother she had had a vision of the Virgin Mary, who said that she would soon be dead, that news of the wounding of her father would arrive within three days, and that the war would be ended by May 1st.

Two of these prophecies have been fulfilled. The girl is dead and the news of the wounding of her father was received within time specified.

Wrong Man Released From Penitentiary

Thomas Riley, of London, Serving Fifteen Years, Liberated by Mistake

NOW IN U. S. A.

OTTAWA, April 13.—The Canadian Government has released the wrong killer. The records convinced it yesterday afternoon. Now there is official consternation. Similarity of names and a clerical mistake caused justice to nod.

Thomas M. Riley, who, a year ago, was given a fifteen-years's sentence for manslaughter for killing a bartender in London, recently wrote his thanks to a London clergyman for efforts made to secure his release. The clergyman had made no such efforts, and his surprised inquiries showed that the wrong man was freed. It develops that the Canadian Government decided to grant a pardon to Thomas Riley, who, two years ago, was given a seven-years' term for manslaughter for killing his wife in Hamilton. His condition of health and extenuating circumstances connected with the mode of life of the woman killed led the Government to this decision.

The Department of Justice recommends clemency to the Government, and the Government through the State Department passed on the recommendation to the Governor-General for signature.

Put in Letter "M."

It appears that the circumstances of the case and the description of the man's age, place of conviction, etc., which came before the Minister of Justice, were those of the prisoner from Hamilton. But in some way the letter "M" had been put into the name, which made it that of the prisoner from London. Therefore, instead of being Thomas Riley it was Thomas M. Riley. The name and the description went in the usual course, to the State Department, and following traditional practice, the State Department made an order for the release of the prisoner by name only, omitting the description. The penitentiary officials, therefore, had nothing to guide them but the name, and they released Thomas M. Riley, late of London, now of Missouri.

A new pardon will be made out for the Hamilton Thomas Riley.

An effort will be made to have Thomas M. Riley extradited from the United States and put back to complete his sentence. However, the officials of the Department of Justice have little hope that this will succeed, not being certain that they could return Thomas M. Riley to Kingston even if he could be taken in Canada. The clemency of the Crown, once granted, is not often withdrawn, even for mistaken identity.

German Raider Allowed Time

WASHINGTON, April 13. — The Treasury Department received from the commander of the German auxiliary cruiser Kron Prinz Wilhelm, which arrived at Newport News, Va., Sunday, a request for a reasonable period to decide how much time will be asked for to make repairs. The request will be granted.

The German raider Kron Prinz Wilhelm will put to sea again just as soon as necessary repairs can be made, according to Commander Thierfelder.

Have Resumed The Bombardment of Ossowetz

Russian General Staff Has No Fear of New Activities of the Enemy in Poland--Russian Armies on Hungarian Soil Extend Over a Front of 120 Miles.

PETROGRAD, April 13—The Germans have launched a new offensive movement in Poland from Suwalki, southward to the Vistula, according to a semi-official statement from the War Office to-day.

They have resumed the bombardment of Ossowetz, abandoned nearly a fortnight ago, an dare making infantry attacks against the Russian positions elsewhere. In their new attempt against the Ossowetz fortress, the Kaiser's troops are combining ancient and modern methods of warfare. Their aviators are hurling bombs by daylight, while heavy siege guns smash away at the outer forts by night. The enemy is attempting to fire the city of Ossowetz by the use of incendiary bombs and floating fire rafts. The general staff has no fear that the new activities of the Germans in Poland constitute any general resumption of the attempt to reach the Warsaw-Petrograd railway. Von Hindenburg, it is generally believed, is creating the diversion with a view of preventing any Russian troops from being withdrawn from Poland for the Carpathian operations or perhaps to conceal the weakening of the German forces in Poland.

LONDON, April 13.—The Russian armies on Hungarian soil now extend over a front of nearly 120 miles, and are steadily advancing down the southern slopes despite the most determined efforts of the enemy to delay the great battle of the plains for the roads of Budapest. German and Austrian reinforcements are being withdrawn from other parts of the eastern theatre and rushed to the Galician-Hungarian border to dam the barrier through which the Muscovite flood is rushing. Masses of the enemy have pushed forward to the Stryj region and engaged the Russians in a stubbornly-contested battle, in which the Russians captured a number of prisoners. A Paris despatch says the operations of the Austrians in this region and in Bukowina are deemed to failure.

HEAVY FIGHTING NEAR ROSTOK PASS.

The London Times correspondent at Petrograd cables:

The Russian advance into the Hungarian valley by way of the southern slopes of the Beskid Mountains has aroused great activity on the part of the enemy in various directions. Not only have the enemy's counter-attacks been repelled, but he, independently, is suspending them from fear of menace to his communications.

In the directions of Rostek Paass and Stryj the actions have assumed a severe character, owing to the enemy's receipt of large reinforcements with the object of penetrating our dispositions, which especially in the Rostek direction the Austro-Germans have been endeavouring to isolate the Czar's forces advancing into Hungary from East Galicia. This attempt, however, evidently has failed, as is evidenced by the large bags of prisoners in this region.

Generally speaking, the Russian advance encounters serious obstacles only in the direction of Rostek and Uszek Passes. In other directions the Austrians are striving merely to prevent the junction of the Russian forces operating in various parts of the front.

Thus the enemy's efforts are mainly defensive, though, owing to the importance of this theatre, their resistance is of a peculiarly desperate nature.

Seeding Ten Days Earlier

Farmers in West Optimistic About Crop Prospects

OTTAWA, April 13.—In a report to the Superintendent of Immigration, W. J. White, Inspector of the Department, wiring from Moose Jaw, states that seeding is about ten days earlier than last year, and the land is in splendid shape. Owing to the large area prepared last fall there is not as much spring plowing as usual. Farmers are very optimistic and many will extend their alfalfa area this, and put in considerable corn and other fodder.

Hindenburg Praises Russian Soldiers

"Kitchener's Army Just a Uniformed Crowd," He Says—"Nobody Need Fear the Russians"

BERLIN, April 13—Gen. von Hindenburg told a neutral correspondent that he has no fear of Lord Kitchener's new army massed along the France-Flanders battle line.

"Kitchener has a million soldiers, but no real army," said von Hindenburg. "He has just a uniformed crowd. The officers and non-coms. lack the experience of German officers, who have generations of military training behind them."

Gen. von Hindenburg praised the Russian soldiers as good fighters, but said their bravery was a consequence of blind obedience to the commands of their superiors and not in response to individual intelligence, as in the Germany army. The Russians, he said, learned many lessons from the Japanese war, particularly the science of trench building, but outside the trenches, he said, they fare badly.

"Nobody need fear the Russians' superiority of numbers," said von Hindenburg. "It is an old story that numerical superiority does not decide battles. At Tannenberg, the Russians were three fold as strong as the Germans, but nevertheless we annihilated them.

"We have observed many unfailing signs that the Russians are becoming exhausted. Their war material is being terribly wasted. The manner in which they fight indicates clearly that the war cannot last long."

ALLEGED FORGER ARRESTED IN LINDSAY

LINDSAY, April 12. — Marshall Lindsay, who, it is stated, succeeded in passing two forged cheques on local merchants during the past week, was arrested on Saturday night at the home of James Wilson here. Lindsay is a married man and a bricklayer. A week ago, it is alleged, he forged the name of Thos. Begg to a cheque on the Bank of Montreal for $33, and passed it at the store of J. Sutcliffe & Sons. He then got away to Toronto.

On Friday evening he returned to town and on Saturday morning at 7.30 o'clock he presented another cheque, it is said, at W. Nicholl's grocery; this was on the Dominion Bank for $16.25, and Thos. Begg's name, it is alleged, was again forged. Lindsay paid a grocery bill at Nicholl's. The police were notified of his presence in town and he was arrested by Chief Short and Constables Woods and Thornbury. The police believe that he had accomplices, and interesting developments are expected.

After billiard balls are made they are seasoned at a temperature of 70 degrees for a year before being used.

Little Change in Wheat Market

Foreign Buying Slackened—May Wheat Climbed 2½ cents

CHICAGO, April 13—The wheat market has again switched around to an abnormal position. The market for all the futures is in an oversold position," and, while the cash market was weak yesterday the futures were up 7-8 cents to 2 1-4c. The May was the strongest of the list, as shorts rushed to cover, and were willing to pay advances in order to get out of long wheat. The inquiry from importing nations was reported as having fallen off to small proportions, and in cash if the situation becomes any weaker there will doubtless be a price break in the future.

The market opened sharply higher, with an upturn of nearly 2c for the May and over 1c for the July, followed by a further advance of 3-4c to 1c. About half of the yearly strength dwindled away later, as the decrease in the visible supply of 2,024,000 bushels was less than expected. There was some public selling of wheat at Minneapolis, where stocks decreased 180,000 bushels for two days.

Crop reports from nearly all sections showed improvement with good rains. There were some reports of Hessian fly, but those sending in these claims said that it will take at least another week before actual crop conditions can be determined. The cash sales here were almost nil, but New York reported 350,000 bushels sold there since late Saturday. Minneapolis reported a lot of wheat sold to go to Philadelphia, and Duluth and Winnipeg said exporters bought both cash and futures.

The more conservative concerns in the trade are advising steering clear of the selling side of wheat unless sales can be made at advances. They believe there will be very little more wheat sold in this country, and that the surplus on the appearance of the new crop will be the lowest in many years.

AUSTRIA BREADLESS IN A MONTH

ROME, April 13.—Emperor Francis Joseph has been conferring almost daily with Baron Burian, Count Tisza and Count Sturgh. These conferences are undoubtedly connected with the threatened famine and the prospects of Italian intervention. The reserve stock throughout the Empire is only sufficient for one and one-half months' consumption, as the Government has been compelled to supply wheat to Germany in exchange for the troops sent to Austria. These reinforcements have made an additional drain on the wheat supply and it is seriously feared that the Empire will be breadless within a month.

Under the direction of an English engineer, New Zealand plans to spend about $2,500,000 to develop its water power resources.

"THE GRELL MYSTERY"

By Frank Frocst

"So much the better. Tell 'em to hustle the car along here. It'll be just as well to have plenty of petrol."

A matter of ten minutes or a quarter of an hour before the motor-car was at the police station. Malley slipped into the driver's seat, and Green coiled up his long body by his side. With a jerk they started, and in a little were out on the broad Portsmouth road, while a thin, penetrating rain was powdering the wind-screen. Presently Malley increased the speed and, though it was well outside the legal limit, Green made no remonstrance.

Stolid and unimaginative as he might seem to casual acquaintance, the chief inspector usually worked with tremendous enthusiasm and doggedness. As Foyle had said, he was as tenacious as a bulldog. He was determined to catch Grell, if human wit and perseverance could do it. And he chafed to think that the start had been so long.

Dusk had fallen before they entered Haslemere, pausing only to ask their way to the local police headquarters. Short as the run had been, they were both chilled to the bone, and their overcoats were sodden with [illegible]. Abreast of a halt, however. A man ran bareheaded out of the police station door as though he had been waiting for them.

"Mr. Green?" he asked.

"That's my name," answered the chief inspector.

"Your people have been on the 'phone to us, and so have the Hampshire Constabulary at Petersfield. Nothing has been seen of the car you want since it passed through here, apparently on the way to Petersfield. We didn't know you wanted it held up till too late, but one of our bicycle patrols remembered having seen it go by. Ten minutes later, we got word. Both Petersfield and Midhurst have had men out waiting for it. No luck at all. It seems to have vanished clean off the face of the earth. You'll probably meet some of our bicycle patrols if you're going on. We've been searching the by-roads."

Green bit back an expletive. The prospect of a night's search in the wet and wind and rain did not appeal to him. There seemed no help for it, however. "Much obliged," he said. "We'll watch for your men. Drive on, Mr. Malley." And they slipped forward into the gloom.

"There's too much of the needle in a haystack business about this to suit my taste," he complained when once they were clear of the town. "That car might have taken any one of fifty side-turnings. Anyway, we'll go on to Petersfield and see whether they've had any luck. Slow down a bit. There's not much object in speed now."

Presently their big acetylene lights picked out a caped policeman standing in the centre of the roadway, his arm upraised for them to halt. They could see his bicycle resting on the [illegible]. As they stopped, he advanced and, glancing at the number on the bonnet, scrutinised the two detectives sharply.

"It's all right, constable," said Malley. "We're not the people you're looking for. We're from London, and we're looking for the same man."

The policeman, satisfied, stepped back with a clumsy salute and a "Beg pardon, gentlemen," and once more they were off. Ten minutes later another cyclist, pedalling furiously, rode into the zone of light cast by their head-lamps. A hail brought him to a stop, and Green put a question, explaining who he was.

"We've found it, sir," exclaimed the man excitedly. "It's in a lane at the other side of the little village called Dalehurst, a mile farther up. It had been run into a ditch and left there. There's no sign of the man who was in it. I'm just riding in to report. There's a sergeant looking after it."

"Never mind about reporting, yet," said Green. "You come back with us and show us where this car is. I'll take all responsibility."

They travelled on at a pace that permitted the cyclist to keep alongside, and presently, turning sharply to the right, picked their way along a narrow roadway which, overgrown with grass and flanked by densely-wooded country, was as desolate and lonely a spot as could be conceived. The car bumped and swayed over ruts and hummocks, and Green touched his companion's sleeve to bid him stop.

"We shall get on quicker and safer if we walk," he said, and dropped stiffly to the ground. Malley followed suit, and swung his arms vigorously about his body to restore some degree of warmth to his cramped frame.

"We'll carry one of the headlights with us," said Green. "Faith' it's muddy."

Their boots made a soft, squelching noise as they tramped on under black shadows of the trees for a hundred yards. The track of the previous car was embedded plain on the soft earth. And here and there were footmarks recently made which the three avoided confusing on Greene's order, by keeping to the side of the roadway. The wheelmarks ended abruptly round a slight bend, where they came upon the car itself. It was tilted at an acute angle, with its leading front wheel embedded in the low ditch. All the lights had been extinguished, and the rear of the car, with the number, was picked out in high relief against the dark background by the acetylene light carried by Malley.

"It's all right, sergeant," said the man who had acted as guide to the detectives. "It's only two gentlemen from London who are engaged on the case. I met them and brought them along."

The chief inspector had taken the lamp from Malley and was throwing its light on the ground around the car. Then he stepped into the car itself and began a minute inspection of rugs and cushions. The search was only a matter of habit, and it revealed nothing. He stepped down and pointed to some footprints. "Any one been here but you two men?" he asked. "Here, both of you, press your right feet here. That's it." He contemplated the marks with careful deliberation for a while, and then, stepping wide, followed a series of footmarks leading up the lane.

"Our gentlemen walked pretty fast," observed Green. "See how plain the heel and toe marks come out, while the rest of the impression is blurred. Hello! what's this?"

The road had terminated abruptly in a bridlepath leading apparently to the interior of the wood, and the footprints had become more and more indistinct with the transition to ground covered with fallen leaves. They had failed entirely as Green spoke, and he flung the light about in an effort to pick them up again. Then something met his eye on a spike of blackthorn, and he carefully picked off a thread of brown cloth. "We're done for to-night, I'm afraid," he said. "He's gone off the track and got into the wood. We'll get back, Malley, and try to find a room or somewhere to sleep near here. Then we can turn out with daylight. But first of all we must 'phone to the Yard. By the way, sergeant, do you know whose estate we're on?"

"I'm not quite sure," growled the officer. "It used to be Colonel Sawford's, but I believe he sold it to that man who was killed in London a little while back. Grell was his name, wasn't it?"

"Really? Thank you, sergeant. Come on, Malley, perhaps we can find the village post office and use the 'phone."

CHAPTER XLVI.

It was Heldon Foyle's own house, and not to Scotland Yard, that Green telephoned eventually. Clad in a bright blue dressing-gown, the superintendent listened, with a few non-committal interjections, until his lieutenant had finished.

"On his own land, eh?" he said at last. "What do you make of it, Green? Is it genuine, or has he done it just to throw us off, and doubled back on his trail It looks as if he intended us to find that motor car."

Green disagreed. "It's a deserted, blind road made for wood-cutters years ago. It was only a chance th ata constabulary sergeant found it. He may have left it there for the time being, relying on coming back to hide it properly out of sight. And this is an ideal place for any one to keep close. It would take a thousand men to search the wood anything like thoroughly."

"There's some sort of house on the estate, I suppose," demanded Foyle.

"Yes, I've not been up to it, but I'm told it's a big rambling old place called Dalehurst Grange, approached through sloping meadows and backing on to the woods. It would be easy for a man to see anyone in the house coming from the front and slip away into the undergrowth. Malley's gone up to have a look at the place. We'll need a search warrant to go over the place, but I don't think it'll be any good."

"Nor I," agreed Foyle. "It'll have to be done some other way. You've asked the county constabulary to make inquiries and to watch the railway stations round about, of course? All right. You run things on your own discretion, and if you or Malley see me just shut your eyes. Now give me your address and report to the Yard as usual."

The superintendent lit a cigar after he had replaced the receiver, and thoughtfully toasted his slippered feet before the fire. Presently he rose, turned over the leaves of a time-table, and discovering that Dalehurst possessed no railway station, discarded it in favour of a gazetteer. From that he found that the village was four miles from Deepnook, and the time-table again consulted showed him that he could reach the latter place in a couple of hours from Waterloo.

Before he went to bed that night he packed the kitbag that had accompanied him in most of his wanderings all over the globe. Other things than clothes found a place in its depths, among them a jemmy, some putty, and a glazier's diamond. The superintendent had an idea that they might be more effective than a search warrant.

Thanks to MILBURN'S Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. McLaren, Commanda, Ont., writes us under date of February 9th, 1914. "Sixteen years ago I took bad with my heart and nerves, and was not able to do anything. I tried a good many doctors, but they did me no good; in fact one doctor gave me up to die. I heard about Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I thought I would give them a trial, and after using a couple of boxes I saw that I was improving. I kept on using them for quite a long time. I am eighty-three years old and my heart does not bother me at all.

"I am raising a little girl who was never very strong, and the doctor said that she had palpitation of the heart, so I started to give them to her. She is now twelve years old, and they are doing her more good than I can possibly tell you. I would advise anyone who has a weak heart to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, as they have done wonders for us."

Chicago, Ill.—"I must thank you with all my heart for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I used to go to my doctor for pills and remedies and they did not help me. I had headaches and could not eat, and the doctor claimed I had female trouble and must have an operation. I read in the paper about Lydia E. ## Slight Shelling Continues on Dardanelles, But Big Attack Waits Over.

LONDON, April 12. — The allied fleet has, according to unofficial reports, been bombarding the Dardanelles forts from the Gulf of Saros. This doubtless is being done to prevent the Turks from repairing the forts, for it is not believed here that the big attack will be resumed until the land forces arrive.

Four battleships and four cruisers convoying several transports were seen Saturday from Dedeagatch steaming toward Enos, on the Gulf of Saros, according to a despatch to The Times from Sofia. The warships opened fire on Turkish positions at a distance of what appeared to be three miles. After the bombardment had continued for about two hours the squadron withdrew in the direction of the Dardanelles.

Unofficial reports also continue to come in regarding the gun firing off the Norwegian coast on Wednesday night last, concerning which the Admiralty as yet has made nothing public. The Scandinavian papers are convinced that a sea battle has occurred although they variously describe it as a battle between British and German cruisers and a chase by British or German submarines.

Inquiry Next Week.

OTTAWA, April 12.—Contrary to expectation, A. D. Foster, M.P., and Dr. Chipman, who was associated with him in the purchase of horses for the Government in the County of King's, N.S., did not give evidence before the public accounts committee of the Commons Saturday, but they will appear to-day. Hon. Dr. Reid made this announcement to the committee Saturday afternoon, and an adjournment was made.

The cost of material in "Housewives" was again taken up and representatives of J. L. Garland & Son and the Two Macs were questioned Mr. Carvell seemed to think there was a "nigger in the fence" somewhere and said so.

Hon. Dr. Reid: "If there's a niggar in the fence for Heaven's sake bring him out. We'll make a white man of him before we get through."

Antiquity of Perfumes.

Perfumes have continued in use among mankind, through the ages, and in very early days they played a part in religious rites. Incense appeared in pagan temples, and is not only the outcome of modernity. Nearly, if not quite all, the perfumes used to-day were known to the ancients. The Egyptians have left recipes for sweet savours for the mouth, and sirens of old bewitched their victims with the mingled perfumes they used. The Athenians loved the violet, and employed it greatly in perfumes. At Roman feasts scented waters descended from above. Many flowers in classic days were specially imported to make essence and skilled workmen were employed to blend the sweet scents. The Crusaders brought back perfumes from Arabia for their lady loves. The Chinese knew the value of musk centuries before Western nations. It is penetrating and enduring, and is associated with the Empress Josephine. Half a century after her death some of the rooms she used at Malmaison were impregnated with it. Frangipani, which owes its cognomen to a marquis of that name, originated in the time of Louis XIV., and is distilled from West Indian jessamine, orris root. Tonga beans, vanilla and benzoin date back to the days of Boucher and Fragonard. Patchouli dates from the early forties of the 19th century, the dried branches being used in Malay to keep moths away. Many great men were passionately devoted to perfumes—Dumas, Hugo, De Musset and others. A writer of note describes frankincense as making men mythical, while musk troubled the brain, and aloes drove melancholy from the soul.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Episode of the Crescent City

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

It was about 1850 that Arnold Dalmaitre, a cotton factor of New Orleans, went to New York on business.

In the office of a cotton broker in New York was a boy named Alec Tracy, whose health was very delicate. Indeed, the doctors had given him but a short time to live. Tracy, who was but fifteen years old, was assigned to Dalmaitre to perform certain clerical duties and carry messages during the latter's stay in New York. Dalmaitre was one of those men generous, sensitive to their honor, that were typical of the south at that time. He took pity on the boy and, suggesting that a southern climate and a change of scene might restore him to health, offered to take him to New Orleans and give him a position in his office there.

Dalmaitre was a bachelor about forty years old and soon after his return from New York married a woman half his age, celebrated for her beauty. Gay society is usually encumbered with men who consider women a legitimate prey, though the standard of honor in this respect is doubtless higher than it was. A scion of a noble French house, Albert Durier, whose father had left France during the revolution to escape the guillotine, was at that time prominent socially in New Orleans and became devoted to Mme. Dalmaitre. It was not long before his attentions were the subject of remark.

Dalmaitre was not himself socially inclined, and his wife went about a good deal without him. For this reason he did not observe Durier being so much with his wife, and there was no one to caution him except Tracy. The young northerner was conscious of the fact that he owed his life to his benefactor and idolized him. When, therefore, he noticed that Dalmaitre needed a friend to warn him of the danger in which his wife was being placed he considered now he could do so with the least damage to all concerned.

But the more he thought about it the more clearly he saw the difficulties in the way. Not a word could be spoken without bringing on a rupture in Dalmaitre's domestic relations. Tracy believed that the wife was innocent, but imprudent; that she needed to be cautioned, possibly to be withdrawn from the influence of her admirer. This plan, too, he cast aside. Finally he determined to settle the matter with Durier, but in such a way that it would not appear to pertain in any way to the lady.

Meeting Durier at a ball, Tracy, while both were dancing, Durier with Mme. Dalmaitre, purposely shoved him. Durier cast an irritated glance at him, but paid no further attention to the matter. Tracy guided his partner again near Durier and brought about another collision. This time he scowled at Durier, as if to accuse him of being at fault in the matter.

As soon as the music stopped the two men went to another room, where each accused the other of purposely running against him in the dance. Tracy was coolly abusive, tantalizing his enemy into a passion. Finally the latter at a contemptuous remark of Tracy's turned on his heels with the words "You shall hear from me" and, seeking a friend, sent a challenge by him. The episode was witnessed by several persons, who gave the cause as it appeared on the surface.

Dueling at that time was the acknowledged method among gentlemen, especially in the south, of settling disputes, and there was a grove not far from the Crescent City where the duels took place. It was arranged that at sunrise the next morning the parties should meet at this grove and settle at the pistol's mouth which of the two men had joggled the other in the dance. Whether Durier suspected the real cause did not appear.

But there was one person who saw through Tracy's act and had learned the consequences shortly after the words that passed between the two men. Tracy was living in bachelor rooms at the time, and he had scarcely got home from the ball when who should appear but Mme. Dalmaitre.

"This affair between you and Mr Durier must not take place. Why did you not make your demands on me instead of picking this quarrel with him?"

"I do not understand you, madame."

She looked at him keenly for a time, then said, "What do you wish me to do?"

"Nothing."

"My eyes have been opened. I assure you I am perfectly innocent. I will agree never to receive your enemy again. Apologize to him and end the matter between you and him."

"Are you aware that such a course would cause me to be cut by every friend I have?"

"Oh, heavens!"

"You fear that the real cause of the quarrel will be learned by the world."

"I do."

"Very well. I will send an apology to Durier at once."

She seized his hand and kissed it, then, turning, left him.

The next day Tracy told his benefactor that he had determined to return to New York. Dalmaitre endeavored to dissuade him, but without effect. He departed soon after the episode to escape the contempt of the [illegible] of New Orleans. Mme. Dalmaitre gave up many of her social ties and devoted herself to her husband.

Vigilance the Price of a Good Complexion

To retain the natural beauty of the skin only proper care and treatment is needed. Our skins are naturally clear and healthy, but the demands of everyday life and unnatural living quickly spoil their freshness and beauty. So necessary is this care that no woman can afford to neglect it. The Nyal people have just issued a new booklet, "Your Complexion," which contains most useful and interesting information on how to care for the complexion in such a way that its beauty and freshness will be preserved for many years. It also includes directions for best methods of massage. The constant use of some good preparation, such as Nyal's Face Cream, is absolutely necessary to keep the skin really clean and healthy. It is a nourishing, oxygenated, greaseless skin-food which leaves no shine. Get a 25c or 50c jar and rub it gently into the skin. See how quickly it is absorbed, leaving the skin pleasantly refreshed and delicately fragrant. 120a

All Nyal preparations are justly famous, and none more so than Nyal's Face Cream, which we unhesitatingly recommend. Call or telephone us for your copy of this book, which contains most valuable information.

THE KAISER'S SANITY A MATTER OF DOUBT

His Ancestors Were Highly Eccentric to Say the Least and He Impresses Physicians as Abnormal

Is the Kaiser insane? This is a question which many people have asked and it is interesting, therefore, to hear what doctors and those personally acquainted with the Kaiser have to say concerning his sanity. Many physicians consider that the War Lord's family tree is quite sufficient proof that he is a very suitable candidate for the mad-house.

Frederick I., the first King of Prussia, who in consequence of a fall from the arms of his nurse was crippled for life with a deformed spine, had an inordinate love of display and pomp, which was considered a sign of insanity. His son Frederick William inherited his father's passionate temper, and he cared only for hoarding money and forming and drilling an army, eccentricities which Macaulay said "were never seen outside a mad-house." Although a famous soldier, Frederick the Great had a cunning disposition, and the whole of Europe distrusted him, whilst Frederick William II. and his son, who succeeded him to the throne, were both degenerate, sensual, and cruel

Mr. Arnold White, who has interviewed the Kaiser, points out in his book, "Is the Kaiser Insane?" how the mind of the chief Hun has been influenced by the tainted stock he has sprung from. He says:

"The Kaiser is a dangerous man who ought to be kept under medical observation, for he evinces homicidal tendencies. From personal observation, I would describe the Kaiser as a degenerate. He is of short stature—about 5 feet 5 inches. He wears a restless, nervous, somewhat fierce countenance, and constantly glares sideways at perfectly harmless individuals with a suspicious and sometimes with a menacing expression. At other times his joviality is more like a boy in his early teens. As a boy in his teens he seemed fairly normal, but his brain has not developed as years advanced, consequently his impulses are beyond the control which should come with age and experience."

Doctors say that practically every person inclined to insanity is cruel and callous to the sufferings of others. Mr. White, in this connection, says of the War Lord:

"He is infatuated with the chase, and sport with him becomes slaughter, military discipline. His army must be ready to die for him, and to slaughter their parents, brothers and sisters. Cruelty is very infectious, and we see how this principle has been freely extended by the German soldiers to unoffending civilians."

At the same time the Kaiser is said to be unable to endure the slightest pain himself, although he boasted that he was willing to sacrifice 10,000 men to gain Calais. Yet the man who recklessly spills the blood of his soldiers like water, we are told, "becomes completely unnerved in the dentist's chair." This fear of bodily pain is a common phenomenon amongst the mentally afflicted.

Even if the Kaiser's amazing actions do not prove him to be a homicidal maniac, many consider that his wild speeches condemn him as such. The following are a few of his wild utterances.

"If I order you to shoot down your parents, brothers and sisters, you are to do so."

"I will walk among you and will be your God, and ye shall be my people. Ye shall walk in all the ways which I have commanded you. Without me ye can do nothing."

"There is only one law—my law; the law which I myself lay down."

"The soldier must not have a will of his own. They must all have only one will, and that will mine."

"The King holds his power by the grace of God, to whom alone he is responsible. He chooses his own path and only decides his actions from this point of view."

A Canadian Touch

The Duchess of Connaught's gift of a box of maple sugar to every officer and man in the first Canadian contingent and in Bermuda was appropriate and characteristic. It recalls the old exchange of telegrams when the Duke was first called upon to take up his work in Canada. The Duchess received a cryptic message asking whether or not she thought maple sugar would agree with her. She caught on to the meaning in a flash, and wired back to the Duke that it agreed admirably.

Officer Whose Duty Led Him To Kill Loving Wife Is Acquitted

PARIS, April 12.—Captain Jean Herail, an officer in the French cavalry, was acquitted to-day by a court-martial which tried him for killing his wife at Compiegne last November because she persisted in following the army in order to be near him. Previous to the shooting orders had been issued by the military authorities prohibiting officers and soldiers from receiving their wives during the campaign. It was brought out to-day that Captain Herail became mentally unbalanced through worry over the possible results of his wife's refusal to obey this law and leave him.

Seldom has a more pathetic scene been witnessed in a Paris court than that when Captain Herail took the stand in his own defence. The soldier wept as he told of the great love which he bore for his wife and of how, when she steadfastly refused to return home, and he believed that he would be cashiered, he became "absolutely mad and was driven to the last extremity" of killing his loved one. The court room was crowded with women and officers and as Captain Herail sobbed out his story many of them shed tears of sympathy.

Captain Herail told of the mutual love which prompted his wife to refuse to be separated from him while he was at the front, and of his own loyal life.

"You do not realize how great was the love I had for my wife," he said brokenly. "When I believed I would be cashiered because of her determined refusals to return home, although I implored her time and again, I became mad—absolutely mad— and was driven to the last extremity."

Here the Captain broke down and sobbed bitterly for five minutes, and many of the women and uniformed officers in the court room were so affected by the gray haired soldier's agitation that they, too, wept.

Colonel Jacquillat, who presided over the court, reproved Captain Herail sharply for placing all the blame upon his wife and asked why he did not use some other method than to shoot her.

"I did," replied the Captain. "I tried every means. I was mistrung; I was out of my mind to kill the wife I loved."

Captain Herail went into many details of his happy married life, his testimony lasting for an hour. Eight times he was overcome and broke into tears.

Colonel Moineville, commanding Captain Herail's regiment, the Eleventh Hussars, testified regarding the orders which had been communicated to officers forbidding wives from calling on their husbands at the front. The Colonel said that Captain Herail had an excellent military services during twenty-two years in the regular army.

Major Bouches told the Court of reading the Colonel's final order to Captain Herail that his wife must leave him or he would be court-martialled for disobedience. When he had heard this order read Captain Herail went into the next room where his wife was. Major Boucheb then heard a shot and, running into the room, found Mme. Herail lying before the fireplace. The Major summoned the police of Compiegne to take charge of the case.

Hydro Lineman Badly Injured.

BROCKVILLE, April 12. — Lloyd Gladstone, lineman in the employ of the Hydro Electric Commission, fell from a 40-foot pole at Iroquois after coming in contact with a wire charged with 25,000 volts. The force of the contact threw him from the pole, but in falling he struck a guy wire thus saving him from what would have been instant death. He was brought to the General Hospital here in a precarious condition, with more than fifty burns on his hands and arms. So it is thought his right arm and left hand will require amputation.

Gladstone is from Cardinal, and is 31 years of age.

THIN FOLKS WHO WOULD BE FAT

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal amount of fat the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength-giving, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect is remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Caution:—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of persons indigestion and general stomach disorders, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.

German Spy System Methods Bared To World in New Book

Another volume on that most interesting of subjects, German's spy system, was recently published by the George H. Doran Company. This book, "The German Spy System From Within," is from the pen of a man once an intelligence officer in the service of the British government, who declares he is placing it before the world from patriotic motives.

While the work is filled with generalities, necessary in such a subject, there are parts, particularly those chapters which relate the alleged advantages derived from the spy system in this present war, which are highly interesting. The writer asserts that many of the German successes so far were the direct result of painstaking preparations made through spies in the course of many years.

Maubeuge, the powerful French fortress near the Belgian frontier, fell, he says because the Germans had outlined and prepared the manner of assault long before with the active aid of the Krupps.

"The fortifications of Maubeuge, the French fortress which fell to the German attack in so marvellously short a time, were proof against anything short of the heaviest siege artillery, and before this class of artillery can be mounted for use against a town or fortress gun platforms levelled and supported by masonry equal to the strain imposed in firing the guns must be constructed," he writes.

"The construction of these platforms involves much calculation and measurement, and is not a matter of such time as was involved in the fall of Maubeuge, but of a much longer period.

"The explanation of the use of siege guns against Maubeuge and the rapid reduction of the fortress is said to lie in the purchase of about six hundred acres of the woods of Lanieres, about four miles from Maubeuge, by an agent for Frederick Krupp, the builder of the siege guns with which Maubeuge was reduced. The firm of made as far back as 1911, announced its intention of building a locomotive factory on the ground acquired; but long before the present war was declared Krupp constructed the platforms on which the siege guns should be mounted to command Maubeuge and totally neutralize the value of the fortifications as well as turning out locomotives."

Training of German Spies.

Training spies in Germany is a work of great care, the author declares, and the men whose duty it is to unearth the military and naval secrets of other nations are drafted mainly from the ranks of the great German General staff.

"The selection of the higher class of spy in these days is very largely a matter of chance," he writes. "Almost in every case the man selected must be bilingual, while if he has three languages at his command so much the better for him—and for his employers. In purely ymilitary espionage, that which concerns plans of fortifications, estimates of strength, and movements, topographical surveying, ascertaining the character of officers and the possibility of influencing them either by bribery or blackmail, and general secret service work likely to be of service to the great German General Staff, capable and clever men must be elected. The German waiter of melodramatic fancy has little part in this class of work.

"The military spy must know units of the British Army at sight, and must have at hand, if not actually in his mind, the code word by which each unit is tabulated at Berlin. He must know the code words also for various patterns of gun; must be conversant with classes of explosive and patterns of shell, and must be able, if luck and his own ingenuity should favour him, to carry in his mind sufficient of the nature and plan of a fortification to be able to draw a map of the work to scale as nearly as possible."

The naval spy, according to the author, is one of the highest type so far as general information goes, and he outranks the naval officer of any other country in his knowledge of different types of fighting vessels. In addition, he must be familiar with coast defences and the location of coaling stations. Of him he says:

"The naval spy is made acquainted with the build and outline of every class of naval vessel in the world. He is first schooled in the details of the various battleships, cruisers and smaller craft belonging to the great Powers, and later is taught to recognize these vessels by silhouettes, from which he gains sufficient knowledge to recognize any ship either by day or night—assuming that the night is of such a character that the ship is at all visible. He studies uniforms and insignia of rank, signals and codes, and at the end of his trining is a fully qualified naval officer, so far as the theory of naval matters goes. In the yards of Wilhemshaven and Kiel is opportunity of putting his knowledge to the test, and he has to satisfy his examiners on all the points on which he has been coached."

Women Play Important Role.

One of the most interesting chapters in the book is devoted to the work which women spies accomplish. According to the author they are drafted from every scale of society—from the highest stratum to the demimonde and the servant class. All have their functions, which are explained in part in this excerpt:

"The woman spy is largely utilized in the matter of internal espionage: in Berlin, for instance, society women are able to form salons, more or less worthy of that historic title, at which they can hold gatherings of men and women and gather up the tittle-tattle from which scandals are constructed, and consequent pressure can be brought to bear on various persons as desired. In another circle women keep houses at which men congregate, and here the charmer of fiction is dimly reflected, for personal attraction on the part of the female spy plays a large part in her power of acquiring useful information. Still lower in the scale are domestic servants, who overlook correspondents, overhear conversations and in many other ways act as bearers of news.

"It is a known fact that the government of Berlin have not only overlooked but favoured the establishment of houses of ill-repute in the city simply because through the keepers of to be obtained. Young men are lured to a certain notorious establishment in Berlin from the foreign embassies, and even from departments of the Berlin government itself. In the first case the object was information in regard to the procedure at the embassies, and in the second case information was desired as to the integrity or lack thereof on the part of those intrusted with the control of German national affairs. The woman who ran this establishment had had to her own count many ruined reputations and ruined lives in the course of her career. * * *

"A woman carried out most of the underground work connected with the Morocco loan a woman stopped the clandestine marriage of one of the imperial princes, and another woman arranged a marriage between a Bourbon King and a member of the house of Hohenzollern. Yet another, according to Von Blowitz, brought off as skilful a coup in connection with the theft of documents as has ever been known. But these things are exceptions to the regular work of women spies, which is for the most part unromantic, petty and mean — as in most espionage work, whether man or woman be concerned in its accomplishment.

"In active service the woman plays a very small part, for the endurance of a man is required to undergo such rigors as usually fall to combatants and spies alike once the armies have taken the field. Here, however, women are of use in carrying messages and in similar minor capacities. Such of them as manage to keep their places in civilian establishments may be of great use in learning projected plans—though plans are usually kept too secret, since the organization and extent of the German system of espionage is fairly well known in official circles of other countries.

Men Masquerade as Women.

"During the siege of Liege men masqueraded as women in order to obtain information for the German commander. In one particular case four ladies were observed in the town, and certain small points of make-up and attire caused the police to entertain suspicions. The ladies were seized and examined and very few inquiries were sufficient to settle the question of their sex, while further inquiries certified them as German spies—and they paid the penalty of their daring. Before execution, spies captured in the present war have stated that they have been forced to take on their tasks; certain persons are selected by lot out of the army and are given choice of the disguise with which they must go out to the front. In many cases the disguises are hopelessly inadequate, and all the men who go out know that they are going to almost certain death. But the man who, without some rehearsal, goes out disguised as a woman, is not only facing death, but looking for it, as do these German soldiers in like case."

Communications between the Home Office and the German spies during time of war and peace are considered at length by the writer, who says the spies use every conceivable method of signalling and writing. The mails are never used, he adds, as they are too dangerous. A messenger with a fixed route calls on all spies at certain times and collects their "mail." The author accuses the Germans not only of using the Red Cross symbol to disguise attacks, but also of using the vans to obtain gun range.

"One favourite system of espionage on active service, from the German point of view, consists in the use of the Red Cross van," he says. "Under the rules governing international war the Red Cross van may go anywhere, even into the enemy's lines, to pick up wounded, and the German forces, 'making war by all the violent means at their command,' have not scrupled to make use of Red Cross vans both for espionage work and as shelter for machine guns. Authentic cases are reported in which treacherous fire has been opened on the troops of the Allies in this way. Another method of obtaining information consists in sending two scouts out with a coil of wire, when in the presence of the enemy. The scouts, bearing one end of the wire, are instructed to approtch the enemy's lines, at night, and of the wire, are instructed to approach within sight, they are shot. The wire

BRONCHITIS

If Neglected Will Surely Turn Into PNEUMONIA.

Bronchitis comes from a neglected cold. It starts with a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with rapid wheezing, and a feeling of oppression or tightness through the chest. At first the expectoration is of a light color, but soon becomes copious and of purulent character.

You have, no doubt, wakened up in the morning and have had to cough half a dozen times before you could raise the phlegm from your bronchial tubes, and when you do succeed in doing so you find that it is of yellowish or greenish color, and you get some relief right away. When this happens to you, you may rest assured that you have a touch of bronchitis, and if not cured immediately it will sooner or later develop into pneumonia or some other more serious trouble.

Cure the cold, and thereby prevent bronchitis and pneumonia taking a hold on your system.

This can be quickly done by the use of

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

Mrs. Rebecca Have, Mahone Bay, N.S., writes: "My little boy, aged six, was always troubled with bronchitis, and when he had whooping cough he was worse. Doctors advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. It gave him instant relief, and positively cured him."

no longer "pays out" from the end kept in the lines, and the length unrolled, when hauled back and measured, gives the artillery range almost to a nicety."

The French officer offers a better victim for the German spy, the writer says, because of the more lax conduct permitted to them.

Faults of French Army System.

"In the case of the military spy the French service affords more opportunities for the German agent than does the British," he states. "In the British service the officers of commissioned rank have many faults, but they are in nearly every case gentlemen in the best sense of that much abused word. In the citizen army of France, on the other hand, an officer may be anything, and in this is intended no disparagement on the brave army of our present allies. The republican system admits all to its ranks—perhaps it would be better to say that it compels all to enter its ranks—and the republican ideal places a commission in the reach of all without regard to birth or social standing. In many ways this is to the good for it fosters the republican spirit in the army and at the same time makes an efficient fighting machine, but it admits to the commissioned ranks perhaps once in five hundred times a man who is sufficiently unworthy of his country and its uniform to be guilty of acts which point to his openness to corruption."

A chapter of the work relates the activities of Steinhauer, of Potsdam, that mysterious figure who controls the activities of the labyrinthian system of German espionage. A review of the case of Karl Gustav Ernst, a German hairdresser now awaiting trial as a spy in London, is given. Ernst lived in London for fourteen years, and, the author says, was a part of the "fixed system" of the Germans whereby spies take up residence and pursue apparently normal working lives while garnering information. They are clerks, business men, professional men and in some cases artisans and labourers.

According to the evidence against Ernst, he was employed by Steinhauer to find out who were members of the British Intelligence Office, and the book contains a resume of the correspondence between the agent and the master spy.

Among other chapters of the book there is one devoted to diplomatic espionage, but, as the author confesses himself, it is vague at times, because there is little information available regarding the methods by which this the highest of all types of espionage is carried out.

In closing the author says:

"Bearing in mind the effect of thorough espionage on the German nation as a whole it is to be hoped that in the near future the whole system will be swept away, together with the form of government that gave it birth and room to grow."

We Eat Too Much Meat Which Clogs Kidneys, Then the Back Hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

A vacuum cleaner for an automobile can be made by attaching a pipe T behind the muffler in such a way that the exhaust creates a vacuum in the hose fastened to the upright portion of the T.

FAMOUS WAR HORSES

One probable result of the introduction of mechanical vehicles into warfare will be the abolition of the old custom of cherishing the memory of famous war horses. When Generals conducted campaigns on horseback, before the advent of the field staff motor car, their favorite chargers used to receive many honors. When a statue of Lord Kitchener was erected at Calcutta, the famous soldier arranged that the sculptor should picture him mounted on a stone production of his favorite horse Democrat, which carried him through many important campaigns. Wellington's famous charger Copenhagen, when he died, was buried with full military honors. The Iron Duke's horse was a magnificent chestnut, and he carried his master many hundreds of miles in Spain and at the Battle of Toulouse. "If he fed," said the Duke, "it was on standing corn as I sat in the saddle."

The remains of Napoleon's famous white stallion Marengo are preserved at the Royal United Service Institution, whilst another of Bonaparte's steeds, which he purchased at St. Helena, and bore the name of King George, figures in many famous paintings. The horse which Lord Ronald rode in the Balaclava charge was cherished by his family until its death, when a tombstone was erected over its grave.

SAVED COLONEL'S BODY

French Soldier's Daring Feat Won Him Instant Promotion

The deep attachment which often exists between the private soldier and his officer is strikingly illustrated by the following incident. "While leading our battalion in a terrible charge," writes a French officer, "our colonel fell. His body was only five yards from the German trenches, and when night came one of my men draped himself in a white sheet, so as not to be seen on the snow by moonlight, and crept forward to fetch the body. He went very carefully on his knees in the snow until he reached the body and passed a rope round the waist; but the frozen snow cracked and the noise attracted the attention of the Germans, who started firing at him.

"Owing to the white sheet with which he was covered, they could not easily see him and missed him, in spite of a lively fusilade. A few minutes later he was back in our trenches. When the Germans stopped firing he returned, being himself tied with a rope so as to allow his friends to pull him back into the trenches in case he was wounded. This time he succeeded, and brought back the body of our beloved chief. He was promoted corporal on the spot."

The Pilot's Pluck

Fighting on Ancient Ground

In some of the German trenches in the western theatre of the war numbers of French, Belgian and other coins of all periods were unearthed. The finds include coins of the Colonia Agrippina, the German Emperor Conrad II.—bearing the dates from 1024 to 1037—and Canute the Great, King of England and Denmark, dated 1036.

A "roll of service," containing the names of all former pupils who serve with the colors, will be compiled for each London County Council School.

Futile Teuton Rage

The German motto, "God punish England," can be obtained all over Germany in the form of a rubber stamp for use on the backs of letters, newspapers, etc. This popular imprecation is also printed on collection boxes, on the walls of cafes, and amid patriotic decorations.

THREE FAMOUS SCIENTISTS

Dr. Andrew Wilson, Dr. Gordon Stables and Dr. Lascelles Scott, the famous English analyst, have all personally tried Zam Buk and expressed themselves convinced of its great healing value.

Mrs. St. Denis, of Thompson St., Weston, Winnipeg, suffered long with eczema; and finally her doctor said only Zam-Buk could cure her—another fine tribute of a scientific man to this great herbal healer.

Mrs. St. Denis says: "The eczema broke out on my nose and one side of my face. I could get no sleep because of the irritation and pain, and my face was in such a shocking condition that for two months I did not go out of the house. I applied remedies and my doctor treated me, but without effect, until one day he said that the only thing which would be likely to cure me was Zam-Buk. I procured a supply and to cut a long story short, in a few weeks Zam-Buk cured me completely, leaving no scars."

Zam-Buk is a sure cure for cuts, scalds, burns, eczema, scalp sores, ulceration, inflammation, piles, etc.; also an embrocation for rheumatism, sprains and sciatica. All druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, 50c price. Refuse harmful substitutes.

Good Recruiting Work

One hundred men of the 3rd Battalion of the 4th (City of London) Royal Fusiliers took part in a novel recruiting plan. For each recruit obtained they were offered a reward of 25 cents and twenty-four hours' leave of absence. They went from Barnet to London, and, divided into parties, stationed themselves at busy points of the Metropolis. One hundred recruits were secured, and eighty-nine passed the medical test. One man secured nine recruits, and received an additional prize of $2.50.

Rewards For Civilians

Substantial money rewards are offered by the British Admiralty to civilians on the Northeast Coast for information leading to the capture or destruction of enemy war vessels, including submarines, mine-layers, and also for reports of mines washed ashore.

Over 5,000 Belgian residents in Canada enlisted as recruits for their country's forces at the front.

WILL DRIVE THE ENEMY BACK FROM ST. MIHIEL

Second Phase of Great Battle Against German Wedge Will Be Commenced as Soon as the Process of Re-distributing French Regiments is Completed---German Trenches Captured Around Soissons.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, April 13. — French official. — The French troops have not yet resumed their expected offensive around St. Mihiel, according to the despatches from the front to-day. The process of redistributing the French regiments for the second phase of the great battle continues [illegible] that the new great effort will drive the Germans out of St. Mihiel and send them scuryring back towards Metz. The official communique from the war office this afternoon had little to say concerning St. Mihiel fighting. The French, according to the communique, are in contact with the enemy at many places, and fighting their way through the German wire entanglements. Between the sea and the Aisne river there have been artillery engagements in the last 24 hours. East of Berry-au-bac, and near Soissons the French gained several German trenches.

PTE. THOMAS V. DYER, 343 McDonnell Street, who enlisted as a member of the 39th Battalion, but who will likely be held over for fourth contingent owing to an operation.

PTE. ALBERT L. HOLT, 32 Lafayette Avenue, with the 39th Battalion. He has had training with an English regiment.

GERMAN AMBASSADOR ACTIVE

NEW YORK, April 13.—A Washington despatch to the Herald says: "The activities of the German embassy have become an absorbing topic of thought with the officials here, engaging the attention of the Departments of the State, Treasury and Justice. While the action to be taken by the United States with regard to the memorandum of the German ambassador, Count Bernsdorff, charging the United States Goverment with an unneutral attitude in the European situation, has not been determined, there is every indication that attention now being given to the general activities of the German embassy will uncover facts which either will enable the United States to demand the recall of the ambassador, or to stop the campaign which he is waging to influence political thought in this country."

PLACED IN PRISON

BERLIN, via wireless, April 13.—The war office to-day officially confirmed the report that thirty-nine English officers have been placed in a military prison in retaliation for the treatment accorded the captured crews of German submarines by the British.

THE WAR AGAINST LIQUOR

LONDON, April 13.—Special Cable.—The British cabinet met to-day for a final discussion of the liquor question before the meeting of Parliament to-morrow. It was considered probable that before night the ministry would formulate a definite programme for regulating the liquor traffic during the remainder of the war. Premier Asquith returned at noon from a lengthy conference with King George at Windsor. He brought to the Cabinet meeting the final message from the King, who it was reported was willing to make some concessions to the liquor interests and would not insist upon absolute prohibition.

A SIGN OF WAR

ROME, April 13.—An order is printed in the military journal directing all the army officers to dull the metal in their uniforms and the scabbards of their swords. This is a measure which usually is adopted on the eve of war.

SET FIRE TO BARRACKS

LONDON, April 13.—French aviators bombarded Hamburg, Germany, yesterday, setting fire to the barracks, according to the report received this afternoon. If the report is true, the raid by the French aviators is without parallel in the history of the war. From the nearest point within the French lines to Hamburg is a distance of about 375 miles. If the hostile aviators flew over Hamburg they might easily have been within striking distance of Berlin itself.

1,656 MILES OF FIGHTING FRONT

PARIS, April 13.—Troops of the allies to-day occupy battle fronts with lengths totalling 1,656 miles, according to a compilation made by The Matin. In the western arena, according to these figures, the French occupy 540 miles of trenches, the British 31 miles and the Belgions 17 miles. In the eastern theatre the Russians face a front of 851 miles, while the Serbians and the Montenegrins are fighting along a line which measures 217 miles.

WITH A "THANK YOU" ON HIS LIPS HE PAYS PENALTY

John Ziolka, Russian Pole is Hanged in Toronto This Morning For Murder of a Fellow Countryman

GRATITUDE TO PRIEST

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, April 13—With a "thank you" on his lips, John Ziolka, a Russian Pole, passed into eternity this morning. He was hanged for the murder of a fellow countryman here last October. Just as the hangman pulled the lever which dropped the condemned man to his doom, he loudly expressed his gratitude to the priest who ministered to him in his last hours.

Thomas Cekoski and John Ziolka were found guilty of the murder of Bong to Trendo in Moore Park several months ago and subsequently sentenced to death by hanging on April 13th, 1915.

Cekoski, the younger of the two men, however, has succeeded in having his original death sentence commuted to 20 years' penal servitude. This was made possible through the admission by Ziolka that Cekoski had only a minor share in the affair, and that he should not be put to death.

Condemned Man Speaks.

"I am prepared to die, I love my God more than even my wife and child, and I have nothing to say to the public, only that I am prepared to die and I hope and pray that I will meet Him who has created me." This was the message that the condemned man sent out to the world at large through his spiritual adviser, Father M. Wachowiak.

As regards the general attitude of the prisoner, Father Wachowiak said, "I had the greatest difficulty in getting him to eat. He seemed to think only of his fate. During Lent he lived a model life, observing all the rules of his church. He felt relieved to think that the Department of Justice granted a reprieve to Cekoski, saying that had they not they would have put an innocent man to death."

Speaking further, Father Wachowiak said: "Ziolka has given me a number of messages to forward to his wife who is now in Poland. Among them is a poem to his little daughter whom he has never seen, and in which he expressed the hope that he will meet her some day in the other world. He was about 30 years old, and has been in Toronto about three years, coming here from Russian Poland."

His Good Intentions.

Cekoski, the man who had his sentence commuted, says that he will be a model prisoner, in this way trusting that his 20-year sentence will be shortened so that he may hurry to Poland, where it is his intention to devote the remainder of his life to making a living for the wife and child of Ziolka. He wants to see that the little girl will receive a fine education and be able to live a good life.

TO INVESTIGATE HORSE BUYING IN NOVA SCOTIA

Evidence Taken in Regard to Purchases There Warrants Further Action Says Hon. J. D. Reid

TO NAME COMMISSION

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 13—No more horses, boots, binoculars or bandages The committee work is over.

Parliament is going to prorogue as soon as possible.

A committee will be appointed on horses and Nova Scotia affairs will be further investigated. Nova Scotia, where Mr. Dewitt Foster, M.P., purchased, being picked out as most responsible of all the provinces from the horse-purchase viewpoint.

This morning in public accounts committee, Hon. J. D. Reid, who has represented the Government throughout, offered a resolution from the committee informing the House of Commons that evidence taken in regard to horse buying in Nova Scotia warranted further action and suggesting that a commission be named.

Mr. F. B. Carvell saw no reason why the investigation should be confined to Nova Scotia when the horses were bought in every province and Dr. Reid consented to the rider that if further evidence was brought by reputable persons this also should be investigated.

W. F. Nickle, M.P., of Kingston offered an amendment declaring the necessity for "a system of purchase, audit and inspection which will adequately protect the country from irregularities and fraud."

A representative of the J. L. Garland Co. this morning refused to tell the commttee the cost of $7,000 worth of safety pins which Mr. McLenaghan stated went into the "housewives" which he sold the Government for the soldiers.

Chairman Murphy upheld the refusal.

Prorogation is expected on Thursday.

The North Ward Election

Is Attracting Very Little Interest —Small Vote is Looked For

The bye-election in the North Ward is becoming more obscure with each passing day. For a three-cornered contest the campaign is unusually quiet. Whatever canvassing is being done must be done after night, with the aid of a pair of gum shoes and a dark lantern. After to-day there will be one more day upon which to canvas. The next day will decide the issue. There is apt to be a small vote polled. Although there are over a thousand votes in the ward, it is hardly likely that the actual vote polled will exceed four figures.

WEEKLY DRILL OF THE RANGERS THIS EVENING

Record Attendance is Expected—No Lack of Recruits for Remount Depot—Carriers at Belleville Isolated

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

The weekly drill of the 57th Regiment will be held this evening at the armouries and the biggest turnout of the year is looked for. There were 284 on parade last week and the probabilities are that this number will be eclipsed this evening as the officers and non-coms have proved successful recruiting agents.

There were no lack of applicants for the remount depot, men for which were asked for in last evening's papers. The third division is asked for 73 men, and judging by the response here the complement will be quickly secured. Quite a number were passed last night and there are other applicants to be examined to-night. It is expected that the unit will leave almost at once for service in England, where their work will consist of training and preparing remounts for the use of the Canadian forces at the front. Applicants may apply at the armouries to-night.

Sergt. Thomas and Sergt. Custance of the 21st Battalion, Kingson, are home on leave. Sergt. Thomas has recovered from the attack of tonsilitis which necessitated hospital treatment.

BELLEVILLE, April 12.— After a bacteriologist test, some 32 members of the 34th Battalion stationed in this city have been placed in a detention camp at the Fair Grounds. They were found to be carriers of spinal meningitis. No new cases have been developed.

Barriefield Camp.

KINGSTON, April 12.—It is understood that the big camp on Barriefield Heights will open on the 21st of April and that the Queen's Engineers and the Queen's Officers' Training Corps will be the first to encamp.

SIR CLIFFORD SIFTON AUCTIONS HIS HORSES

Sir Clifford Sifton's champion hunters and high jumpers will be sold at auction in New York on April 28th in Van Fassell and Kearney's sales ring. Discontinuance of all the important shows in Canada and England, and intending to be absent abroad for an extended period, prompted Sir Clifford in deciding to sell these horses. The famous high jumper, Confidence, with a record of 8 ft. ½ in. over held poles; Ravello, The Wasp, Elmhurst, Last Port, Skyscraper, another famous jumper, and five others will pass under the hammer.

BALKAN STATES TO FIGHT FOR THE ALLIES

Probabilities Are That Greece, Bulgaria and Roumania as Well as Italy Will Soon Be in the Conflict---Balkan States Anxious to Drive Turks Out of Europe and Wrest Provinces Away From Austria.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

NISH, SERBIA, April 13.—Special Cable.—By the middle of May all the Balkan States may again be plunged in war for the third time in less than four years. This is the information I have obtained from some of the leading political authorities of Serbia and Greece. Greece, Bulgaria and Roumania, as well as Italy, they hold must be inevitably [illegible] With equal certitude they declare that all four countries will enter on the side of the allies. A decisive victory for the Russians in the present Carpathian fighting, may set the ball rolling. The Balkan states have two ends they feel they must at some time attain. One is the expulsion for all time of the Turks from Europe, and a division among themselves of what remains of European Turkey; the other is to wrest from Austria the provinces of Bukowina and Transylvania.

KILLED SNIPERS

LONDON, Eng., April 13.—British troops exploded a mine near Armentierres, killing 29 German snipers, according to the official report to-day from General French covering the operations in the past week. The Germans attempted twice a similar feat, the British commander reported, but without effecting any damage. On the whole the situation along the British front is unchanged.

SOFIA, April 13.—Germany according to reliable reports here to-day, has failed to pay the installment on the Bulgarian loan due April 1st. It is believed here that she is withholding payment because of the reports that Bulgaria is planning to enter the war on the side of the allies.

Coneybeare Had a Big Time While His Liberty Lasted

Special to The Examiner:

LINDSAY, April 13.— Howard P. Coneybeare, the driver of the Canadian Express Co., who recently decamped with two parcels of money containing three thousand dollars, was brought back last night by Provincial Inspector Boyd, given preliminary hearing this morning on three charges and elected to be tried by a jury. No evidence was taken. Coneybeare had a big time during his ten days' liberty and spent almost $500, chiefly at Winnipeg and Regina. He was caught near Edmonton. He has handed back to the company $2,504.

SPURS ON THEIR TOES.

Some of our gallant soldiers of the first contingent, are like, with a difference, the nursery rhyme lady of Banbury Cross, who had "rings on her fingers and bells on her toes" — they have spurs on their toes. The majority whitewashing report of the Public Accounts Committee boot investigation, finds that the Canadian soldiers' boots were good because they were up to a bad sample, and could not be expected to stand unfair usage, such as water, mud, rough marching, and toe nails. We are solemnly told in this report that some of the boots that failed, did so because they were injured by the toe nails of the wearers. It takes a mighty good boot to stand the wear and tear of soldiers' feet which have spurs on their toes. It takes a pretty substantial boot to bear up bravely against too protuberant toe nails. But the Government need not expect to take cover behind the elongated toe nails of a Canadian warrior, to excuse the collapse of spongy boots. The Government is still responsible, for the actions of its officials. The medical examiners, appointed by the Government, should have spotted the soldiers' feet with spurs on the toes, detested their deadly danger to boots, and protected the poor boots by amputating the projecting toe nails. However, a poor excuse is better than none; and boot-wrecking toe nails are as good as some that are offered for the neglect of the Government to supply our soldiers with serviceable boots.

THE GOVERNMENT TO BLAME.

Whitewash is a consistent dressing for the bad boots furnished our soldiers by the Borden Government. As a dressing whitewash would naturally last as long as the boots and longer than some of them. The majority report of the Public Accounts Committee respecting the bad boots supplied to the soldiers, was adopted by the House by a purely partizan vote. The report stated that the boots turned out "substantially complied with the samples provided by the Militia Department." Here comes the point.

If the villainously bad boots, of whose existence there is no denial, were "substantially" made according to the samples supplied by the Militia Department, the Department and the Government are responsible for the bad boots and wasted money, and wasted health, and wasted lives, of the soldiers doomed to wear them. The samples were so bad; so unfit for the purposes of campaigning that one manufacturer refused on conscientious grounds, to manufacture boots according to the sample supplied — he "did not want to make money out of men's lives." So the Department and the Government must have known that it was risking men's lives to send out soldiers as was done with the first contingent with boots altogether unfitted for campaigning in winter — boots made on samples intended only for use in barracks. Another manufacturer declared that shoes made upon the "last" specified by the Department, "would not fit anybody"; and another manufacturer said the boot "never was intended for active service." Yet the Government sent out soldiers shod with these defective boots, that failed under the conditions of fall weather at Valcartier and Salisbury Plain where the rain rained every day.

The Government had ample warning of the bad character of the boots. About the middle of November General Alderson, the imperial officer in charge of the Canadian contingent, cabled the Canadian Militia Department that "the boots supplied the Canadian Contingent are not suitable for rough wear or in wet weather." Recognising the faulty character of the boots the Department sent out 48,000 pairs of rubber overshoes. Early in December General Alderson spoke plainly of the boots that were endangering the lives and destroying the efficiency of the Canadian soldiers under his command. He cabled that overshoes did not compensate for faulty construction of boots, "some pairs of which," he said, "are useless after ten days' wear." Sir George Perley, Canadian High Commissioner, told the Government on Nov. 24th that he found "general complaint of the too light character of the boots furnished the Canadian contingent." The Department and the Government had ample notice that the boots were defective, as early as November, 1914. In addition to the warnings of some of the manufacturers; and the warnings of General Alderson and Sir George Perley, the Regimental Boards instructed to investigate by the Government itself, also condemned the boots. Yet the boots condemned so strongly in November, 1914, were still being issued in March, 1915, to Canadian soldiers.

This is the crux and core of the boot scandal—not so much that owing to faulty inspection and improper samples bad boots were being manufactured, but that the Department and Government knowing the bad and murderous nature of the boots being made, still continued to permit the manufacture of bad boots, and to serve out bad boots to the soldiers.

The majority, the partisan report, on the investigation, says that the contractors generally made the boots they were asked to make, by the Government and so the responsibility for the bad boots rests upon the Government. The majority report itself thus condemns the Government.

Sir Robert Borden, speaking to the motion for the adoption of the report, tried to evade responsibility by stating that the "sample" boots furnished the makers were supplied by officials appointed by the previous government, and that the boots were better boots than those supplied the Canadian contingent for South African service. The boots supplied for this service were suited to the dry climate of South Africa and proved satisfactory; we had no "boot scandal" anyway in connection with equipping the South African contingent with boots. In spite of the whitewashing majority report the responsibility for the "rotten" boots supplied the Canadian contingent, rests upon Sir Robert Borden, the head of the Government.

The Conservative members of the committee must have felt that they had a very weak case judging by the extraordinary excuses they made for the failure of the boots. The report solemnly states that the destruction of a large number of boots, was due to mutilation by the "toe nails" of the wearers. The report further states that the boots "in fairly dry weather gave fair satisfaction, but when subjected to drilling and marching in wet and slushy weather, and on hard rough ground, they gave out — collapsed, slumped. Did the Department and the Government expect that in active service the boots would have to encounter no more trying conditions than a smooth parade ground, or the concrete floor of a drill hall?

At whatever angle we regard the bad boots business, it is a bad business. And the Government is responsible, for it was warned, and in the face of expert and official warning, persisted in making and serving out defective boots months after their defective character was demonstrated by the crucial test of wear on active service, and the evidence of Canadian soldiers, laid up in hospital or laid under the sod, through wearing defective boots.

LOYALTY COVERS BAD BOOTS.

The loyalty cry by the bad-boot brigade recalls the story of a man suddenly asked to say a few words at the burial of a gambler shot by the Vigilance Committee in a western mining town. With earnestness he said: "It is true that Bill stacked the cards. And he often played it low down on the boys. But his heart always beat true to his native country."—Globe.

THE THOROUGHNESS OF ITALY.

One of the wonders of the present time is the cold-blooded and calculating deliberation of the Italian government in getting ready for war. It appears to have prepared for every possible eventuality. It has worked methodically, and, according to what must have been a definite plan, arranged months in advance. It has made each move in logical order, has carefully restrained every outburst of popular enthusiasm that seemed dangerous to its plans, and has as carefully seen to it that the repressive measures were not of a nature to dampen the enthusiasm of the people. Little by little it has drawn the lines tighter and tighter against the nations which are presumed to be its prospective enemies, crippling them there hampering them there, but always avoiding an open break, and always having at hand some convenient explanation or excuse. And while making ready for war it has kept the way open for a peaceful adjustment of the conflicting ambitions and interests which seem to have brought the kingdom to the very verge of the big conflict that has claimed every great European power except itself. Even now one may not feel absolutely certain that Italy has definitely decided to fight and that it may not still be trying to obtain is demands through preliminary pressure which will give some forecaste of what the Germans and Austrians may expect if the break actually comes. Italy's game is almost painfully perfect. — Detroit Free Press.

As a quarantine measure the importation of European pine trees into the United States will be prohibited after July 1.

Sir Robert Borden's Professions Compared With Pre-office Promises

We referred a day or two ago to the marked changed of attitude which has come over Sir Robert Borden in regard to the question of stamping out corrupt practices at elections. It will be remembered that when he was in Opposition, he was very keen on changing the election laws, and enforcing them. After four years in office, a move is at last being made to amend the election laws, but the sting is to be removed from Sir Robert's promised reforms. There is to be no public prosecutor. It will be nobody's business to see that the laws are enforced. Mr. Marcil questioned the Government on the matter, and this is the Premier's reply, as reported in a Conservative contemporary:

Sir Robert thought the prevention of corrupt practices depended in large part on the state of public opinion. The Prime Minister regretted that a clause providing for the appointment of a public prosecutor had not been found practicable by the committee, though he acknowledged that in a large country like Canada this was more difficult than in England.

Contrast this non-committal policy with the same gentleman's expressions when he was seeking office. In his celebrated Halifax speech he made this question of corrupt practices at elections the subject of the first plank in his programme, "which I submit to you," he said, "as an essential article of Conservative policy." We quote:

More effective provision to punish bribery and fraud at elections, to ensure thorough publicity as to expenditure by political organizations, to prohibit contributions thereto by corporations, contractors and promoters, to expedite the hearing of election petitions and to prevent collusive arrangements for the withdrawal or compromise thereof, to the end that the purity of elections may be assured, the practice of corrupt practices, and if necessary, to appoint an independent prosecuting officer charged with that duty, to simplify the procedure therefor, and to enforce the laws so amended.

Again and again, on the platform and in the House of Commons, Mr. Borden (as he then was) pledged himself and his party to this obligation. In one of the many speeches in which he dealt with this subject, he said that all the improvements which could be devised in the election laws would not effect much unless two forces could be invoked. One was public opinion, and:

The other force to which I allude is the appointment of a public prosecuting officer having the same independent status as a judge, and properly supplied by Parliamentary appropriation with a fund necessary for the performance of his duty. Any such officer should be invested not only with the right but the duty of intervening where the proceedings upon any election petition were unduly delayed. He would possess the power to investigate the conduct of an election in any constituency where circumstances of a suspicious nature were brought to his attention.

The man who spoke so boldly and determinedly, what has become of him? He is now the Premier, with power to give effect to his promises. And how is he putting into practice the inspiring sentiments of elevated patriotism and pure and high-minded statesmanship? Well, having attained office, he finds that after all the prevention of corrupt practices "depends in large part on the state of public opinion," and he regrets that "the Committee does not think a public prosecutor practicable, though he is bound to say that the work of a public prosecutor would be 'more difficult' here than in England." And he lets it go at that! A few airy nothings in place of the thundering promises [illegible] should be swiftly and rigidly enforced, with a public prosecutor "having the same independent status as a judge" to enforce them!—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

Neither Death Nor Foe Can Daunt British Airman

Invincible in the Battles in the Skies, He Never "Scoots for Safety," as Do His German Opponents

The General Headquarters, British Army in France.—If the Germans could only destroy or even daunt the British Airmen, what a hoard of German secrets they would preserve! But they cannot daunt such men as the Royal Flying Corps is made of. They fear them instead. You see many a British aeroplane flying toward the German lines. I have seen no German Taube during the week I have been with the British army in France.

The German airman who ventures above the British lines does not wait to argue the point when a British flyer rises for the chase. He scoots for safety, for the British air force has shown that it is fearless of death, eager to destroy, and invincible in a battle in the skies.

Some aeroplanes at the front are attached to various sections of the army, for an important part of their work is to discover enemy gun positions and report them to the British commanders over the way, so that the British batteries may pitch their shells in the right place. They report progress while the fight is going on.

But further back machines are refitted and tuned up to concert pitch. The machines that have been "ditched" by some unlucky descent or torn in the wing by shrapnel or rifle bullets come home to be overhauled and repaired. Sometimes a few patches and a dab of "varnish" (it is really some other mixture) are sufficient; sometimes the poor creature has to be stripped to the bone—it looks like the dissection of an unwinged hornet—and built up anew—new wings, new wires, new screws, new tail, new engine parts. They showed me one proud shell—the body of the aero-plane that fought and scattered about a dozen German rivals somewhere near Dunkirk a little while ago.

Talk Little of Death.

What eagle eyed lads they are, these British fighters in the skies! Continual watching from their ethereal eyries has given them a piercing vision. Cherubs might envy their cheeks, pink as coral from frequent contact with the cold, pure air through which they soar and dive, and sail. They are as quiet and as undemonstrative in their ways as the crew of a herring smack.

I saw a couple of them, in goatskin coats and leather skull caps, come striding lightly across the heath from the sheds. Their little barque was ready for the voyage. They climbed aboard and took their seats, and one of them turned his head and gave a nod. The propeller whirled and roared, and, without a word or a thought for anything but the machine and duty, they rose from the heath and sailed away for the distant German lines.

They meet with the good luck they deserve, as a rule. Shrapnel comes up at them, but rarely hits the mark. Now and then wings are riddled, but the little bee holes make little difference and can easily be put right when they return. It is not often that a man is hit.

Now and then there happens the thing that men must expect in war. It is soon told and, for the time, forgotten, for men have to-morrow to look for and to provide against when they are in the midst of war.

"Hear about — and — ?"

"No; what happened?"

"Machine took fire—came down in our lines—both burnt."

"Dead?"

"Yes. Probably got a bullet through the petrol tank."

The conversation turns to something else. When man is at war he does not want to chatter about so grisly a thing as death.

"When a man dies" said Jasper Petulengro, he is cast into the earth, and his wife and children sorrow over him. If he has neither wife nor child, then his father and mother, I suppose; and if he is quite alone in the world, why, then, he is cast into the earth, and there is an end of the matter."

"And do you think that is the end of man?"

"There's an end of him, brother; more's the pity."

"Why do you say so?"

"Life is sweet, brother."

"Do you think so?"

"Think so!, There's night and day, brother, both sweet things; sun, moon and stars, brother, all sweet things; there's likewise the wind on the heath. Life is very sweet, brother. Who would wish to die?"

Who would wish to die? Yet these men at the front, although life is very sweet, face death daily so that Great Britain may conquer and live.

The wind brings the sound of guns.

United States Has Two Weather Pool Syndicates

One Sells 200,000 Fifteen Cent Tickets a Day For Some Large Money Prizes

Everybody knows that the weather all over the United States is mighty uncertain, and that to bet on it is a real gamble. But at least two syndicates are making pools on it.

One syndicate, with headquarters near Albany, sells 200,000 15-cent tickets a day ($30,000), and pays out $700 in prizes—profit $2,300.

Thus the syndicate is always "on the sunny side of Easy street," whatever the temperature, and its mostly zero for the players.

The members of the syndicate are the same gentlemen who give opportunity to bet on baseball in its season, and they use much the same system for their weather pools.

Terms of the Pools.

The English Lloyds that ancient insurance company, has long been betting on the weather, in a sense. If rain on a certain day would mean a financial loss to you, Lloyds for a small premium will insure against rain on that day. But these weather pools are entirely new; only those who buy tickets in them and the syndicates' numerous agents are supposed to know that the police of certain cities know.

Those who buy tickets do so blindly. In the 15-cent pool there is handed or sent to a player a sealed envelope containing a card on which are the names of four cities from the list.

The "player" must take the ticket sent him. On it he writes his guess at what the temperature will be next day in the four cities whose names it bears. First prize goes to him who guesses four temperatures the sum total of which is the highest in a particular pool. The official reports of the Washington Weather Bureau decide.

Some Luring Prizes.

The "grand prize" is $150; the second prize, $75; third, $50; fourth, $40; fifth, $30; sixth, $25; seventh, 30; eighth, 25. As on the baseball pools, there are "booby" prizes for those whose guesses are furthest from the correct total. There are: First prize, $50; second, $30; third, $20. There are also twenty special prizes of $5 each, and twenty of $2.50. These the players win whether their guesses are high or low. "Special prize" and the amount is written on the back of forty tickets, probably to create the impression that even the syndicate does not know what ticket a sealed envelope contains. But there is a strong suspicion that the poolmakers know very well. The players cannot be certain that the pools are conducted honestly.

The 25-Cent Pool.

A 25-cent pool has its office at a point in the Susquehanna Valley. In its wheedling literature this syndicate explains:

"The combination that a patron wishes to play is selected as follows: He picks any six different numbers, one of thirty inclusive. These numbers will represent six different cities, one for each day of the (following) week, starting with Sunday. At the time a patron picks these six numbers he does not know, nor do we know, what cities they will represent. Each Saturday a drawing is made to determine what the number of each city shall be for the following week, and the result of this drawing is immediately sent to agents, along with the list of winners for the previous week. Agents return sold tickets to us on Monday. We immediately notify each agent of the number of tickets that are sold for the week and the amount of money that is in the general fund for the week, and we will prove, whenever requested to do so, that every penny of the money was paid to legitimate winners."

Betting on the weather is extremely popular in Central New York, where dwell innumerable rustic sports and amateur meteorologists, but the players are widely scattered.

The 25-cent syndicate announces that it has paid these prizes lately: In Scranton, Pa., and vicinity, $2,455; Wilkes-Barre and vicinity, $1,727; Carbondale and vicinity, $1,650; Binghampton and vicinity, $1,240; in other cities and towns in New York, Massachusetts, and New Jersey, enough money to total $14,132.

Will Use Lacrosse Sticks For Hurling Hand Grenades

LONDON, April 13—The Canadian troops at the front have discovered a novel use for lacrosse sticks, namely, throwing hand grenades into the German trenches. They are able in this way to throw them farther, more accurately and with less risk than otherwise.

Over 500 sticks have been purchased to try out the scheme.

Thirty men of the Patricias, invalided from the front, arrived at Folkestone yesterday. Most of them are suffering from severe attacks of rheumatism. They will be returned to Canada shortly.

Corporal Eustace King, of the Patricias, who died at the Queen's Canadian Military Hospital at Shorncliffe at the week-end, was a son of Yeend King, the well-known artist and vice-president of the Royal Society. He received severe wounds at St. Eloi, and had undergone an operation for the amputation of his leg shortly before his death.

The inhuman treatmen of British prisoners by Germany, as proved by a White Paper contining correspondence with the American Ambassador in Berlin, is the subject of much indignant press comment. The Times, while expressing the hope that some of the stories may prove to have been exaggerated, says it seems impossible in the face of this document to doubt that Germany, with all is kulur, has relapsed into brutalities towards the British which are without a parallel in the modern history of war. The Globe thinks that the time has come for retaliation. Donald McMaster, M.P., points out that he had put a question on the order paper asking for information as to the treatment of British prisoners but as the House adjourned next day, the Minister had evaded the question, although at that time the Government must have had in its possession the report of Major Vandaleur. "Nothing but an outburst of outraged public opinion," declares Mr. MacMaster, "will bring the Government to its senses. Germany must be given to understand that when the day of reckoning comes all these things will be taken into full account."

Col. G. Sterling Ryerson of Toronto, president of the Canadian Red Cross, has arrived in London by the Lusitania and will proceed to France in a few days to inspect the work there.

PAINTING HORRORS OF WAR

Disciple of Futurism, Back From Trenches, on Sights in Battle.

C. R. W. Nevinson, one of the chief disciples of futurist painting, has been invalided home to London, Eng., from the front where he went six months ago, in charge of a motor ambulance.

"It needs an iron nerve to find poetic inspiration in such scenes of horror as one must view over there," he said on his arrival here, "but the war will be a violent inventive to futurism, for we believe there is no beauty except in strife and no masterpiece without aggressiveness.

"In the pictures which I have painted in France I have tried to express the emotions produced by the apparent ugliness and dullness of modern warfare. The futurist technique is the only possible medium to express the crudeness, violence and brutality of the emotions seen and felt on the present battlefields of Europe.

"All arists should go to the front to strengthen their art by a worship of physical and moral courage and a fearless desire of adventure, risk and daring. Thus they will free themselves quickly of the canker of professors, archaeologists, antiquaries, and beauty worshippers.

"Modern art needs not beauty nor restraint, but vitality. The sooner the exploitation of the old masters and the wastage of millions of money ceases the sooner will come the opportunity for the artist to make a livelihood. A masterpiece must disappear with its author. Immortality in art is a disgrace, which has built up a prison of timidity, imitation, and plagiarism."

For emergency use by firemen there has been invented a fire and water proof hood that can be carried in a pocket and which, when opened, will give a ten-minute supply of fresh air.

Bullets Disturb Funeral Party

Touching Scene at Funeral of Former Peterboro' Boy

A touching story is related of the burial, within sight of the Germans, of Lieutenant Galaugher, Chatham, and formerly of Peterborough, who was shot by a sniper on March 20. Major George Smith, writing of the incident, says: "Poor Galaugher was inspecting posts at the front early that morning. A flare went up and a sniper shot him through the head and he died immediately. . . .

"We all went down and buried Galaugher. He is buried about 1,600 yards behind the firing line in a small plot that our battalion has. The moon was shining brightly and we all stood beside the open grave with the body lying beside it. All was quiet when a bullet went singing overhead. While waiting for the 'pioneers,' a chap 50 yards away, not knowing what was going on, whistled 'Home, Sweet Home.' The body was then lowered in the grave.

"The Chaplain of the regiment, Major Beatty, in a low voice, spoke the funeral service. In the midst of all this the Germans were shooting up flares, illuminating the scene. The boys from Chatham feel it. Some of them went down and put flowers on his grave."

Foster Did Not Even Try To Get Vouchers in Horse Deals Was "A Contemptible Steal"

OTTAWA, April 13.—Arthur de Witt Foster, M.P. for King's, N.S., was the chief witness before the public accounts committee yesterday. He gave evidence regarding the purchase of horses in his constituency for the Government, but was in possession neither of vouchers nor receipts for the purchases. These are in the possession of an Americanized Canadian named Keever. Ten days ago Mr. Foster saw both Keever and Woodsworth, another Americanized Canadian, who were associated with him in the purchase of the horses, but he did not ask them for the receipts.

Another feature of the day was the opposition taken by Mr. Carvell to questions asked a horse dealer witness. Chairman Murphy sustained the objections on technical grounds, but said that no objections had been raised by the Conservative members to questions asked by him and Mr. Carvell, and declared there had been a thousand worse than were asked last night.

Mr. Foster was then sworn and presented a memorandum which he had prepared for Col. Neale of the Militia Department. This showed that he had bought 428 horses, 218 cavalry, 120 artillery and 90 general purpose. The average price was $173. They were bought between Aug. 13 and Sept. 4. He had appointed as his representative Mr. Oakes and had taken with him Messrs. Keever and Woodworth, who were willing to pay their own expenses. Questioned by Mr. Carvell, Mr. Foster said he did not know that Keever and Woodsworth now have the receipts, but he believed that they have. He had seen them both in Boston. Keever at a distance, but did not secure the receipts. Asked if he thought Keever and Woodsworth had made money out of the affair, Mr. Foster said emphatically:

"Not one cent; and you know it."

"No, I don't know it," declared Mr. Carvell. "I believe this to be the most contemptible steal in Canada, and you know all about it. If you don't know all about it you are an idiot."

"You call em an idiot?" asked Mr. Foster with heat and rising in his chair.

"Yes, I repeat, 'if you don't know all about it, you are an idiot'," said Mr. Carvell.

The chairman finally restored order, and Mr. Carvell proceeded.

To the chairman, Mr. Foster said he had handled no money throughout the transaction. He had used drafts. The farmers cashed the checks themselves.

Never Again They Say

Delegates at Hague Discuss Means of Keeping World Peace

days there has been a private discussion of peace here by a conference consisting of about thirty delegates from Holland, Sweden, Norway, England, Germany, United States, Belgium and Switzerland. The conference came to an end yesterday with the drafting of a program for actions in the various countries. Only a short record of the work of the conference has been issued as follows:

"The object of the meeting was not to suggest steps to bring the war to an end, but to consider by what principles the future peace of the world would best be guaranteed. After a full discussion of the minimum program was unanimously adopted.

"The action to be initiated in the different countries will ultimately be supplemented as indicated by an international propaganda."

Vanquishes Airships

Captain of British Ship Armed With Rifle Repulsed an Attack

LONDON, April 13.—Armed with a rifle, Capt. Sharp of the British steamer Serula, which has arrived here, successfully repulsed an attack made upon his steamer by a large German hydroplane and a small aeroplane off the Noordhinder lightship, says Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent.

"The aeroplane first approached the ship, dropping bombs, which fell into the sea. As it returned to the attack Capt. Sharp fired upon it with a rifle, hitting the machine several times and damaging one of its wings. Then the hydroplane took up the attack, but it also was driven off. Capt. Sharp says he is convinced the aeroplane was so badly damaged that it was unable to reach Zeebrugge."

No Retaliation On the Part of the Enemy

LONDON, April 13.—"It is a significant fact that although a month has passed since the action at Neuve Chapelle, the enemy has made no attempt to retaliate in any quarter, but has remained inactive, while we have established ourselves securely on the ground won," is a declaration made by the Eye-Witness attached to the British army headquarters on the continent, in a communication dated April 9.

Referring to the condition bordering on panic which prevailed at Lille during the fighting at Neuve Chapelle, this writer goes on to say:

"Both officers and men have openly expressed their uneasiness, apparently a marked change has began to occur in the general demeanor of the German troops soon after Christmas. Till then they had been absolutely confident and extremely cheerful, but latterly this feeling has been steadily decreasing. German soldiers have told French civilians they recognize they would be overpowered by the masses of men England was going to place in the field."

SCANDALS HAVE BEEN WHITEWASHED

OTTAWA, April 13.—The House of Commons last night, by a large majority, adopted the report of the special committee appointed to investigate the boots furnished the Canadian volunteers, which finds that the boots were suitable and efficient, that the [illegible] negligence and the manufacturers honestly lived up to all the specifications. The Opposition did not ask for a division, and the minority report from the special committee condemning the boots was voted down.

The debate, which lasted during the entire sitting, was opened on behalf of the Government by W. S. Middlebro (North Grey), chairman of the committee, who said public opinion had been aroused unjustly. Of 86,000 pairs issued 81,446 were still in use; only 1,028 were beyond repair.

Hon. Charles Murphy, who moved the adoption of the minority report, spoke in defence of his position. The boots, he said, used for samples were inferior to the sealed sample in the Militia Department. Out of 86,000 pairs of boots, 7,000 had been condemned.

E. M. Macdonald (Pictou, N.S.) vigorously denounced the Government, declaring that the Government should have altered its type of boot when it proved unsatisfactory.

Mr. Nesbitt (Lib., N. Oxford) also a member of the committee, was the only other Liberal to take part in the debate.

Sir Robert Borden, in his speech at the evening session, congratulated the country upon the splendid work done during the war. He said the attitude of the Opposition in respect to the Canadian boots was partisan and unpatriotic, and that it had resulted in diverting a great deal of business from Canada.

Gen. Hughes said that the soldiers at the front were discarding the British boots and insisting upon the Canadian boot.

"MUTT AND JEFF IN MEXICO"

"The Real Hit of the Show World" is a Very Broad Assertion

If it were made by Gus Hill, the sole owner and manager of "Mutt and Jeff" it would undoubtedly be set down as due to an exaggerated egotism, but, coming from the critic of one of the most important and largest circulated newspapers in the Eastern country, it must necessarily have weight with the theatre-going public. The expression is an honest criticism that has been used by the critics of at least ten thousand daily and Sunday newspapers throughout the United States and Canada in the past three years, which denotes unmistakably the fact that an equal number of trained writers, whose business is to see, compare and criticise plays for the benefit of newspaper readers, honestly believe that Bud Fisher's now nationally famous cartoon comedy, as presented in an elaborate musical comedy, by Mr. Gus Hill, is the one and only real musical comedy hit of the world of theatricals. Public interest in Fisher's daily cartoons has never flagged during the four years it has been running in more than a thousand of the most prominent publications in the country. His two clever character conceits, while they represent nothing more than the dash of a pen in the hands of a clever artist with a master brain, have attracted the attention and held the interest of the best men, women and children of America and Europe, therefore it is not to be wondered at that the public never grow tired of seeing "Mutt and Jeff" in real life. "Mutt and Jeff in Mexico" is the title of the new offering which Gus Hill has prepared at the cost of a small fortune for new scenery, costumes, story, music, and everything that goes to make the most elaborately magnificent musical comedy production the stage has ever held. It all comes to "The Grand" next Saturday. Don't miss it is good advice.

Moratorium Is In Force

The moratorium, alias the Mortgagors and Purchasers Relief Act, has been signed and is now in force.

Henceforth it is necessary to secure leave from a judge in chambers before going on with proceedings in foreclosure actions already entered or before commencing new actions.

For several years India has steadily increased its production of coal, iron and copper.

3000 Cars in March

Canadian Ford Plant Has Built Wonderful Business—Factory Speeding to Keep Up With Orders

FORD, Ont., April 13.—"Faster" is the cry at the plant of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, these days. Although 3,000 Ford cars were shipped during March, a remarkable figure in itself, this is not enough, and 3,600 is the goal set for the factory to reach during April, while every possible means of increasing the output is being employed.

Since the first of the year sales have been growing at an astonishing rate and with this ever increasing demand, as indicated by the orders now on hand, factory production will have to be pushed hard to keep up with the demand.

A rate of 150 cars per day has been reached by the factory, and even this may be beaten. The week of March 29th marked the largest output in the history of the company, and on Saturday, which is a half holiday, 81 cars were made by noon. Although Friday, April 2, was a legal holiday, it was necessary to keep the plant in full operation all day. The largest single day's shipment ever recorded was on April 6th, when 163 Ford cars were sent out from the factory.

While these figures pay an excellent tribute to the Ford car, and its makers, they also afford a strong indication of better business conditions throughout the Dominion.

British Warship Will Break All Records

NEW YORK, April 13.—According to a report from London received by The Tribune, Britain has laid down a new battleship of amazing proportions, which will be by far the most powerful craft afloat. It will mark a change in battleship construction, exceeding that which came when the first dreadnought was built. It will necessitate the adoption of new methods in battleship construction by all nations, and will halt the construction program of the United States.

It is stated that this great new ship will be 800 feet in length, will carry six 15-inch guns and have the wonderful speed of forty knots.

At present the Queen Elizabeth, now at the Dardanelles, stands as the most powerful engine of war. She is, however, only 650 feet in length, but carried eight 15-inch guns. She is oil-driven, as the new ship will be. In the craft now planned armament is sacrificed for increased speed. The increased length gives the great boiler and engine-room capacity needed to produce such speed.

A hot water bottle held against a porous plaster a few minutes will soften it and facilitate its removal.

MORE MUNITIONS ARE NEEDED

Says Earl of Durham Addressing a Recruiting Meeting

LONDON, April 13.—The Earl of Durham, addressing a recruiting meeting last night, said:

"Three weeks ago, when I visited the British headquarters in France, Sir John French said to me: 'I know that, individually, our men are superior to the Germans.' I know that when the time comes for us to make our great move, we can break through the Germans, but I know what we want, and must have, and that is more and more munitions. I want to pound the enemy, and go on pounding him, regardless of expense, regardless of the number of shells I use, because by doing so I am saving the lives of our gallant men. The more ammunition, the less danger are our men incurring in making these advances.'

'Another distinguished general said:

"'The ball is at our feet, and we can kick it if we have the munitions'."

NEWSBOYS ARE ENTHUSIASTIC FOR THE COMPETITION

Race Has Started But There is Plenty of Time Yet for Entries —Prizes for Energetic Boys

It doesn't take much coaxing to get the boys into an Examiner Newsboys' Competition.

From the moment the first paper appeared containing the particulars of the contest, the boys were "on to their job"—from "the drop of the hat."

It was no surprise, therefore, to see the "grand rally" of bright lads as they lined up last evening to start in the race for the weekly cash prizes.

There is plenty of time for other boys to enter the list of "Examiner hustlers. Some who intended to enter their names could not be present last night, on account of some home duties and other reasons; and several are known to be waiting for their parents to help them out with their consent and encouragement.

It is expected that the ranks of The Examiner's Newsboys' Brigade will be swelled to-night, and a spirited advance all along the line will be made to capture every household in the city where The Examiner is known not to enter.

Every Saturday night until the end of May, the boys getting the largest number of new subscribers to himself during the week will receive the following prizes in cash:

First prize ..... $3.00
Second prize ..... 2.00
Third prize ..... 1.00

And then, at the end of the contest, the boys who will have captured the largest number of new subscribers during the entire contest will secure an additional bonus, as follows:

A Gold Watch—To the boy who has run up the largest list of new subscribers.

A Silver Watch—To the boy who has secured the second largest list of new subscribers.

A Suit of Clothes—To the boy who has captured the third largest number of new subscribers.

Boys! Here's something worth while spending a few hours after school, before your game of base ball is called.

OTONABEE TELEPHONES AGAIN UNDER COMMISSION CONTROL

KEENE, April 13. — The management of the Otonabee Rural Telephone Association was reverted to commission management at a public meeting held in the town hall yesterday afternoon, and Messrs. Wm. Anderson, Fred Easop and Gilbert Howson were appointed commissioners. Some time ago the management was handed over to the township council. A number of the subscribers and ratepayers were dissatisfied and claimed that the action was irregular. Yesterday a member of the Railway Board was present and also Messrs. Dean, Ashley and Cameron of the Bell Telephone Co. A satisfactory arrangement has not yet been made with the Bell Telephone Co., and the two systems are not linked.

Old Huronic Law Is Resurrected

Children under fifteen years of age will not in the future have to produce a parent or guardian or adult member of the household in order to gain entrance to a moving picture theatre. The provincial theatre regulations have been amended to provide that a child under fifteen years of age unaccompanied by an "adult" may not be permitted in a theatre, which means that it has been decided to drop the unworkable law of the past year or two and go back to the old plan.

Since the law has required every child under fifteen to be accompanied by a parent or guardian or adult member of the household a few attempts have been made to enforce it, but with little success. The clause was intended to remove the danger to children, especially young girls, who, unable to enter theatres alone, appealed to strangers to take them in. It was found impossible, however, for the theatre proprietors or ticket salesmen to say whether the adult accompanying a child was a member of the child's family or not, and the law, being unenforceable, was dropped.

Better Lighted.

Much of the necessity for such a restriction has disappeared in the last year or so, chiefly because the theatres are no longer kept in absolute darkness. In practically all the theatres now the auditoriums are kept light enough for the proprietor to see the audience and a sharp watch is kept for men attempting to use the theatre to molest girls.

The movie law has also been amended to provide that no municipality may charge a higher license fee to moving picture theatres than is charged by the Provincial Board.

No Change Here Yet.

Chief-of-Police Thompson has not received any notification of the resurrected movie law yet, and until he does, former laws and amendments will govern in Peterborough.

ORPHANAGE BOYS TRAMPED AS FAR AS FRASERVILLE

FRASERVILLE, April 13.—Leo Martin and Douglas McGregor, two boys from St. Vincent's Orphanage in Peterborough, arrived here yesterday. They said they were walking to Cobourg, where the Martin boy said he was to see his father. They had left the Orphanage as usual Monday morning to go to school, but instead began a hike which found them hungry and tired after dinner in the vicinity of Fraserville. A minister met them on the road and asked them if they were hungry and where they were going. They were taken to the post office at Mr. Kidd's home and fed. Mrs. Madill of Fraserville called up the Peterborough police who turned the matter over to Mr. Wm. Henry of the Children's Shelter. It seems that the Orphanage authorities had requested Mr. Henry to let them know if he obtained any information regarding the boys. He came down this morning and both the lads were glad to abandon their broad highway hike and return to Peterborough.

Mr. Henry told the Examiner that he brought the boys back at noon to-day and they were glad to return. One of them said he was going to Cobourg to see his father, but it was evident that he had little idea of his destination. They were children of nine and eleven years and appeared to be good boys. Mr. Henry stated that when the Mother Superior of the Orphanage asked him to inform her if he learned the whereabouts of the boys, he got in touch with the police. Then when the 'phone message came from Fraserville it immediately cleared up and explained the absence of the boys.

RIGHT RILEY WILL NOW BE LIBERATED

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, April 13.—In the Commons this morning Dr. Edwards, Conservative member for Frontenac, asked if it were true that a convict named Thomas Riley, sentenced less than a year ago to serve a fifteen year term for manslaughter, had been released from the penitentiary. Dr. Edwards said that if the statements were true, it was a serious reflection upon the management of the institution. Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, admitted the accuracy of the report. He said Thos. Riley of Hamilton, in April 1913, was sentenced to a term of seven years for manslaughter. A year later Thomas M. Riley of London, was sent down for fifteen years for manslaughter. It had been decided to release Thomas Riley on parole, but the wrong Riley was allowed to go free.

Mr. Doherty said that the incident was most regrettable. He intimated that in future in transmitting such orders care should be be taken that such mistakes should not occur again. Riley is now in the United States.

Replying to a question by D. D. Mackenzie, Mr. Doherty said that the order for the release of the Hamilton man would be acted upon.

ALIEN ARRESTED FOR VAGRANCY

Passing Through on Freight Train—Could Not Give Satisfactory Answers

G. Mahivniak, an Austrian, when challenged by a policeman, yesterday, could not give a satisfactory account of himself and was arrested. He came before Magistrate Dumble, in the Police Court this morning, on a charge of vagrancy.

Nahivniak came from Toronto and claimed to be on his way to Ottawa. To Chief Thompson he said he had never been in the habit of reporting to the authorities in Toronto. Nobody had asked him to report. He was going to Ottawa on a freight train, having no ticket. The last work he did was on a farm near Saskatoon.

He was remanded a week while the Chief communicates with the Toronto authorities.

Selling Spectacles.

David Hendry, who was remanded a week ago on a charge of peddling spectacles without a license, until the Chief made some inquiries about his record, appeared for judgment this morning.

"Davy" said he was guilty, but he had a wife, three children and a mother-in-law to support, and could not pay a fine. He would not peddle spectacles any more if let off this time.

A fine of ten dollars was imposed, to be paid in ten days and in default of payment, ten days in jail.

Mr. Hill Replies To Mr. Gordon Re Deputations

To the Editor of The Examiner,—

Sir,—In my letter which appeared in your paper last Saturday evening, I referred to one of Mr. G. N. Gordon's planks in his platform when he appealed to the electors of Peterborough to be elected a member of the Board of Education. One of his chief planks read as follows:

"If I am elected I will see that "expensive deputations do not go "out of town on the people's money "with the suggested object of im- "proving the knowledge of the deputation in educational fatters, when "the benefit to these members is "nil."

I pointed out that since Mr. Gordon has been a member of the Board of Education he has approved [illegible] deputation attending the Provincial convention of trustees and teachers held in the city of Toronto. Mr. Gordon in his letter in reply quibbles over the fact that he was not present at the meeting when the deputation was authorized to be sent, but he admits he was present and approved of the minutes confirming the resolution that did authorize this deputation. Why did he not rise in his place and object to this resolution?

I do not pretend to be one of those special pleaders who can make the worst cause appear the better. I did not make any attack upon the City Council for incurring expense in sending deputations out of town, but on the other hand I believe that the City Council and the Board of Education in sending deputations out of town have acted in the best interests of the City in doing so. What I did contend was that Mr. Gordon's plank in his platform was wholly inconsistent with his attitude in the City Council and in the Board of Education, in sending deputations out of town.

Yours, etc.,
W. H. HILL.

P.S.—The Board of Education sent Mr. Eastwood as its representative to the convention held at Toronto last week. Will Mr. Gordon at the next [illegible] payment of Mr. Eastwood's expenses?
—W.H.H.

The government of Colombia will establish a national institute of agriculture and an experimental farm.

Shrapnel Sheels---How They Are Made

Shrapnel possesses greater man-killing power than any other kind of ammunition used in modern field artillery, and that is why more than 1,000,000 a month are being used by the European armies now in the field. Thousands of shops and factories in this country and in Europe are working night and day to supply this demand. A superficial examination of a shrapnel shell discloses little to indicate its destructive power—it is simply a small steel shell attached to the end of a brass case; but when properly adjusted and fired from a modern field gun this steel shell becomes a veritable demon of destruction. Within the brief period of 4¼ seconds it has travelled over one mile, and 17¼ seconds later it is nearly 3¼ miles distant from the gun. At any time during the rapid flight it can be made to explode with marvellous precision and deadly effectiveness.

Each shell has a time fuse that is made with the accuracy of a watch. This fuse is graduated in seconds and is set to explode at a given range as determined by the panoramic sight or other form of range finder. As soon as the gun is fired, the fuse is ignited antomatically and when the explosion occurs in the base of the shell itself, the forward end is blown out and a shower of lead bullets hurled forward in cone-like formation, the shell acting as an aerial gun. The velocity of these bullets at the moment of the explosion of the shell at the time of the explosion by from 280 to 300 feet per second, and they cover a zone about 80 yards wide and 250 yards long.

Invented in 1784.

The first shrapnel shell (invented in 1784 by Lieutenant Shrapnel) was merely a cast-iron ball filled with bullets and powder, which was exploded by a crude fuse screwed into the shell. This type was unsatisfactory because bullets flew in all directions when the shell exploded later this defect was partially overcome by inserting a sheet-iron diaphragm, which separated the bullets from the bursting charge. Modern shrapnel is similar in principle to its early predecessor, but is a marvel of mechanical ingenuity.

The shrapnel shells used by different Governments at the present time operate on the same principle, but differ somewhat as to size and in the arrangement of the fuse. A complete shrapnel comprises a brass case containing a heavy charge of smokeless powder for propelling the projectile, a hollow steel shell containing a large number of lead bullets and a bursting charge, and the combination time and percussion fuse which forms the point of the shell. The sudden motion of the shell at the time of firing causes a small plunger in the end of the fuse to fly back and strike a cap which ignites the fuse. This fuse is composed of a slow-burning composition that is pressed into annular grooves. One of these grooves is in a stationary rang and the other in a graduated movable ring. By turning the graduated ring, the length of this fuse is varied so that the shell may be exploded at any time within a period of about 21 seconds. During this brief period a three-inch American shrapnel will travel 6,500 yards, or nearly 3¾ miles.

French Fuse Peculiar.

The French fuse differs from the movable ring type in other countries, in this respect. The slow-burning composition is contained in a tube, wound spirally around the fuse head. The fuse is set by piercing a hole through this spiral tube, so that connection is made with the interior of the fuse body. When the gun is fired and the primer or cap in the fuse head is exploded, a flame passes out through the pierced hole and ignites the "rope" powder fuse. The effective length of the fuse depends upon the position of the pierced hole, which is made by a special machine attached to the gun, the hole being located with reference to suitable graduations. Most fuses are so arranged that the shell will be exploded by concussion if it should strike before the ring of powder burns around to the exploding charge. This is effected by a secondary plunger in the fust head which flies forward when the shell strikes and fires the bursting charge instantaneously.

Shells of the three-inch size contain from 210 to 350 lead bullets about half an inch in diameter, which are embedded in a resinous mixture. This matrix, as it is called serves two purposes. It holds the bullets in position, and also acts as a traver to indicate by a cloud of smoke the point at which the shell explodes. This smoke cloud is important, especially at long ranges, and when adverse atmospheric conditions exist.

The development of a shrapnel shell represents a vast amount of experimenting and study, but the shell itself is not comparable with the wonderful processes and tools which are employed in its manufacture. The interesting phases of shrapnel manufacture are the formation of the brass case, the forging of the steel shell and the finishing of the various shell and fust parts to the degree of accuracy required. The production of a brass case 11½ inches long, 3 3-5 inches diameter (the British 18-pounder) requires 17 different operations. It is formed from a flat circular blang 6¼ inches in diameter and ⅛ of an inch thick. This is first drawn into a shallow cup shape, and is then gradually elongated by being forced through steel dies which are progressively smaller in diameter. These drawing operations are so controlled that only the sides of the case are made thinner, the bottom retaining practically the original thickness to insure the necessary strength. After a smooth seamless case is drawn by the method referred to, the bottom is turned true and a central hole bored out and threaded to receive the primer or cap for exploding the propelling charge. As these brass cases, as well as those for other kinds of ammunition, contain about 68 per cent. of copper, the importance of this metal in modern warfare is apparent. This explains why the cost of copper has increased over 200 per cent. in Germany since the beginning of the war.

Plants Produce 1,000 a Day.

The steel shell or projectile is forged to approximately the required shape, either in a powerful hydraulic press, a power forging machine of an ordinary power press such as is used in sheet metal work. The solid cylindrical billet from which the shell is forged is first heated white hot; it is then placed in the die and a steel plunger is forced through the centre of the billet and nearly to the bottom. In this way a hollow steel cup is formed and this is afterward made longer and to about the shape required, by means of other presses equipped with smaller dies, the effect being to decease the diameter and increase the length of the forging. The presses used to form shells from a solid billet are capable of exerting a pressure of several hundred tons. Owing to this enormous pressure the heated steel is made to flow like a liquid and it fills the annular space between the piercing punch and die so that the forging is quite accurate as to size and shape. With these modern processes of forging, shells are produced very rapidly. The output of one forging shipment of three presses may vary from 400 to 1,000 shells a day, the number depending upon the kind of presses used and the exact process employed.

Some shells, instead of being forged hollow, are bored out from a solid piece of steel, but this method is much more expensive. A three-inch shell made from bar stock requires about 23 pounds of metal, whereas the same shell, if forged, only requires nine and a half pounds. Assuming that the steel costs 10 cents per pound, this means a saving of approximately $1.25 on each shell. Moreover, a forged shell can be "machined" or finished much more rapidly than one made "from the solid," simply because it conforms so closely to the required shape and size.

A shrapnel shell, in common with other types, must be revolved about its axis during flight to keep the point forward. This rotary motion is imparted to the shell by a copper band that is pressed into a groove near the base; when the gun is fired this band, being imbedded into the spiral rifling grooves in the gun barrel, imparts a sudden twisting motion to the projectile. Special machines are used to force this copper band tightly into its seat or annular groove.

Assembling the Parts.

The combination time and percussion fuse which is screwed into the end of the shell is composed of many parts, which must be made very accurately. This work is practically all done in automatic machines having tools of the necessary form and size, which advance and recede in the proper order, and work with lifelike movements. The graduating of the time ring is done in a special machine.

The final step in shrapnel manufacture is that of assembling the different part. A charge of black powder is placed in the bottom of the steel shell; over this charge is a steel disc or diaphragm, and then the remainder of the space is filled with lead bullets and the smoke-producing matrix. The time fuse is screwed in place at the forward end and covered with a soft metal case, to protect the different parts. This outer case is removed just before using the shrapnel. The brass case, able annular groove. The total length ler, is attached to the steel shell by compressing the upper end into a suitable annualr groove. The total length of a three-inch shrapnel varies from about 24 to 24 inches. Much larger shells are made, but the three-inch has proved very effective, as it is used in guns which are comparatively light, so that rapid field manoeuvres are possible.

To The Electors Of No. 4 Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

It has come to my notice that reports are being circulated that I am to withdraw from the contest, and also that I am running in the interests of the C.P.R.

I wish to state that I have no intention of retiring, and that I am in the contest to the finish; also I am not controlled by any corporation or private individual, and am a candidate as a private citizen, and if any business happens to come up between the city and the C.P.R., I am prepared to stand neutral in the matter.

Soliciting your vote and influence, I remain,

Yours truly,

W. S. DODDS.

To The Electors of The North Ward

I am a candidate for alderman in the North Ward caused by the resignation of ex-Alderman William J. Johnston.

If elected I will give my time and careful attention to the ward and the citys' business and interest. My platform briefly is as follows:

1. Day work in preference to contract work.
2. I would insist on corporation work being done by local labour.
3. Municipal ownership of the street railway in conjunction with the Hydro-Electric system.
4. Municipal ownership of the Otonabee Power Co.
5. Aggressive campaign for the securing of new industries.
6. An equal and equitable assessment of properties.

I have had considerable experience in business affairs and will give my best efforts if elected to the city's business.

Yours truly,

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I am glad to see by Mr. Bebee's letter in your paper that he has received the Watch Tower that I loaned him at his request.

Query, 1: If Mr. Johnston had this Watch Tower why did his friend, Mr. Bebee have to go to one he calls "a follower of Russell" to borrow?

Query No. 2: If Mr. Johnston did not have this Watch Tower, why did he claim he was quoting from it?

Query No. 3: Is it possible that Mr. Johnston would endeavour to fasten the charge of sacrilege on a religious teacher by claiming to quote from said teacher's own writings, when he actually had not in his possession the very article he claimed to be quoting from?

Query No. 4: When Mr. Bebee says that Mr. Johnston is correct, does he mean that Mr. Johnston has quoted Pastor Russell, word for word and sentence for sentence? I do not wish to think that Mr. Bebee is dishonest. I prefer to think that when he says that Mr. Johnston is correct, that he means that Mr. Johnston has the correct understanding of Pastor Russell's thought, and therefore does not need to quote him verbatim et literatim.

Query No. 5: Would it not be better to quote Pastor Russell's own words—all of them—and let each person judge for himself what the meaning is? I hope if there are any who are really interested in knowing what Pastor Russell said, that they will take advantage of Mr. Bebee's kind offer, and compare Mr. Johnston's quotation in March 15th "Examiner" with the original, and so verify my point that Pastor Russell has not been quoted correctly. I will be willing to loan Mr. Bebee this Watch Tower for a month for such a purpose. As to what Pastor Russell means in this article, is another matter alogether, but as "Casual Observer" said in effect, it would be a queer thing if a man in just one article would contradict the line of argument he has set forth in sermons, lectures, magazine articles, tracts, public addresses, etc., for the last 40 years. Till I read Mr. Bebee's letter I had never thought that any one could read the whole of Pastor Russell's article and fail to catch his real thought. One reason for thinking this was that, whenever his opponents quoted his article they invariably mis-quoted it. Pastor Russell has for over forty years used his money, time, strength and brain power to bring to the people the truth and beauty of God's Word, and nothing gives him greater pleasure than to know that the Lord has used him as a humble instrument to give some one a better understanding of the Bible, and a grander conception of God's Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power. Those who know him best, know that nothing grieves him more than to have any person accept a statement of his just because he said it, without proving it by God's Word. He, himself, wants a "Thus saith the Lord" for every doctrine he accepts, and his whole desire is to lead those hungry for the Bread of Life to the Word of God, that they may find spiritual nourishment and be enabled to develop a righteous character.

If the letter sent you on Friday, the 9th, was published, I have been thinking that some might think I meant to disparage farmers, but such was not my intention. My two grandfathers were farmers and I was proud of them. In choosing a farmer as a debater, I was thinking of choosing the type of man that is not generally associated with debates, lecturing, etc. Such a type of man with even less than five years of careful study of "Scripture Studies" could meet Mr. Johnston in debate and prove a worthy opponent, simply because such a study of Scripture studies would have made him so familiar with God's Word that, as Paul wrote to Timothy, he would be thoroughly furnished unto all good

I have nothing more to say on the matter under discussion, Mr. Editor, and I thank you for your courtesy in according me the space you have.

As ever, yours for the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth,

Cameron, April 12th, 1915.

Editor of The Examiner,—I would like to draw the attention of the police force to the people around the De Laval Co. works who ride their wheels on the sidewalk. Any time of day you can see almost a steady stream of wheels going up and down on Park streets, and always on the side walk. There have been quite a few children hurt by being knocked down by these wheelmen, who think that the sidewalk was made just for their riding.

Now, if the police cannot stop this practice, the residents of Park street (between Albert and Lake streets) will have to do something that will put an end to the practice.

Hoping this article will have the desired effect, I remain,

PARK STREET.

Around the Theatres

RED MILL

"A Page from Life," a three part drama, is the feature photo-play at the Red Mill. It is the story of how an impoverished but skilful art writer joins a gang of law breakers and rises to affluence. His daughter meets a young millionaire and when everything is smoothest, the gang leader makes a disclosure.

There is a great ending. Pictures of Belgium show many fine scenes in Brussels and the valley of the Meuse, also infantry, cavalry and artillery manoeuvres. The bill is quite a pleasing one.

TIZ-IT

Two movie stars are at the Clayton House. Florence Turner is seen in an intensely interesting detective story, "The Harper Mystery." It is in three acts and is an unusually good picture. Mary Fuller appears in "His Guardian Angel," a pretty society drama in two acts. Both are good features. In addition there are several comedies of standard merit.

THE EMPIRE

Gaby Deslys, in "Her Triumph," is the big attraction at the Empire for the first part of the week. It is a recent release by the Famous Players Company, and is really constructed to give the movie fans an idea of Mlle. Gaby's dancing. In the photoplay she first appears as a chorus girl to whom the star has taken a strong dislike. The latter refuses to continue with the show while Gaby is [illegible] to discharge the girl, and the comedian, in love with Gaby, who understudied the star, suggests that she be given the part. The result is a triumph but the star plots Gaby's embarrassment. She is kidnapped and taken to Count Victor, the villain's villa. Follows a big scene, with the comedian, Harry Pilcer, arriving at the crucial moment.

The Apache and Deslys Dances and the villa scene, have been deleted by the Board of Censors, only part of them being shown. Just what objection could have been raised to these dances is not apparent. Mlle. Deslys and her company drew big houses to the Royal Alexandra in Toronto about two years ago, and the Dance D'Apaches, The Deslys, and several others, were the big features. As it stands, "Her Triumph" is a vivacious photo-play entirely innocuous, and it is to be regretted that when a producing company goes to the expense of filming a star danceuse that officious clippers cut out half the feature parts.

THIS SCHOOL GIRL HAD BAD FAINTING SPELLS

Was Weak and Run Down. But Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Made Complete Cure

The most critical time in a girl's life comes during the school age, when she is impelled by rivalry to put forth her best efforts in studying or examinations. At the time she should have healthful outdoor exercise and abundance of fresh air, to keep the blood pure and rich, she is confined to her studies. Is it any wonder that she becomes run down in health and suffers from headaches, indigestion, loss of appetite and spells of weakness or fainting?

The case described in this letter is a good illustration and you can read here the splendid results of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to help through this critical period.

"While attending school my daughter became weak and very much run down. She was frequently troubled with bad fainting spells, and nothing we tried seemed to do her any good. We were advised to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and did so with most satisfactory results. I am pleased to tell you that after using five boxes of the Nerve Food she was completely cured, and has no return of the fainting spells."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Hamilton Houston, Justice of the Peace.

The reason Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is so effective in cases of this kind is because of its extraordinary blood-forming influence. By creating an abundance of rich, red blood it strengthens the action of the heart, revitalizes the exhausted nerves and builds up the system in every way.

The appetite is restored, digestion improves, you rest and sleep well, and the new vigour and energy is felt in every organ of the human body. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is doing wonders for men, women and children whose systems have become weak and run down. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

FOUR TEAMS IN THE CITY LEAGUE RACE

At Meeting Last Night It Was Decided to Limit Membership to a Quartette of Clubs---East Citys, Thistles, Empires and Classics Will Fight For the Flag.

At a meeting of the City Baseball League held last evening in the Empress Hotel, with the president, Mr. C. G. Graham in the chair, the question of how many teams should comprise the League membership was decided. Five teams applied for admission, the East City Club, Thistles, Empire A. C., Classics and Marathons.

After some discussion a motion that the League consist of four teams was carried.

It was then decided that a ballot should be taken as to what four teams should be admitted, the vote resulting as follows: East City 10, Thistles 10, Classics 9, Empires 8, Marathons 3. The last named club was therefore out of the running and the League will consist of the first four.

The League will meet again next Monday night to discuss a constitution, and possibly arrange a schedule for the season.

Washington Not Crazy Over Walter Johnson This Spring

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 12. — Playing hobs with the dear old public is no business for a ball player, no matter how great an idol he may be. He may make a monkey of the umpire to his heart's content and swat the poor old baseball magnate in the bank roll, but let him attempt to fool with Vox Populi, Consant Reader and Rabid Fan all in a bunch together, and his well-known rep carries as much weight as a feather in a gale of wind. And the worst part of it is that not only the player himself, but the club he works for, not to speak of visiting teams, suffer from the boycott.

The case in point is that of Walter Johnson. A year or two ago the Iowa [illegible] was [illegible] citizen. He shared with the President the plaudits of the populace and, on occasions, loomed higher and broader than the Monument. So great was he that a loving cup was handed to him right out in front of the grand stand, and to further indicate how strong he was, his admirers filled said cup to the brim with coin of the realm—silver and gold and greenbacks.

Last fall, when Walter performed his famous grasshopper stunt, he said things about the Washington magnates, Clark Griffith and the fans that did not listen good in print. Walter could have gotten away with his swan song about the magnates, and manager, and survived, but he warbled a dirge when he tackled the public. It has soured on him good and proper, his recent alibi making matters even worse.

The tough part of the present attitude of Washington against Johnson is that the club suffers by the prevailing animosity against the famous star. The fans are giving the exhibition games the frozen mitt, few attending the contests between the locals and the National leaguers. The Phillies drew less than 400 at their [illegible] Wednesday and the Superbas had very few more on Thursday, despite the fact that the weather was propitous, as they say at a beach party. Whether the existing state of affairs will continue the most optimistic refuses to say, but it behooves Johnson to win early and often if he hopes to regain even a portion of his pristine glory on the home grounds.

BUCK FREEMAN IN INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

NEW YORK, April 13.—Edward Barrow, president of the International League, has announced the make-up of his umpiring staff for this season. Four new men have been signed — Wm. B. Carpenter, Robert Hart, John Mullen and Peter Harrison have been retained, while the new umpires are J. J. Cleary and Edward Eckman, who officiated in the New York State League last year; Frank Brown from the Three-I-League, and "Buck" Freeman, from the Canadian League.

Nallin, who umpired in the International last season, was graduated into the American League, while Finneran signed with the Federal League. Rorty resigned to go into business, and Cauliflower was not offered a contract for this year.

Mr. Barrow has completed the league schedule, which is expected to be adopted at a meeting in this city on Monday, and will be made public the latter part of the week.

TROUT MAY BE KEPT AS A LEAF OUTFIELDER

Describing the Toronto ball team a despatch from Durham, N.C., says:

Kelly and Konnick are being groomed as catchers and work in turn daily. Kelly is, of course, known to Toronto fans and from his work up-to-date Konnich, who is a Pole from Wilkesbarre, is ticketed through as a second choice. He is a broad-shouldered, strongly-built young fellow and should make an acceptable second string man.

Trout is carried as a catcher, but does little work at it and apparently there is no particular place for him. Whether he may be switched as extra man in the outfield remains to be seen.

Weeding Commences.

It is safe betting with only a week to go on that Hunt will be farmed out, that Brown will be sent back to Washington and that Wilson's leg will keep him out of the game this year.

That means Graham if he can show any kind of fielding in right, Brackett in centre and O'Hara in left. Trout would make a splendid fourth man and in view of his great hitting ability and of the fact that he bats right-handed, he may be carried along. What is in Manager Clymer's mind with regard to this arrangement will be seen later. As it is, Graham, Brackett and O'Hara are the regulars in the outer works.

OTTAWA UNABLE TO GET STAR INFIELDER

OTTAWA, April 12.—The Ottawa Baseball Club has evidently failed in its effort to obtain from the Detroit Club shortstop Frankie Fuller. President Navin of the Tigers notified the Ottawas to-day that he had decided to retain Fuller for two or three months at least. George Burns, the Detroit first-baseman, is out of the game, owing to an operation for appendicitis and Captain George Moriarty is down with an injured ankle, so Navin has decided that it would be unwise to allow Fuller to go for a time. He has offered to help the Ottawas to land another flashy youngster to succeed Jack Mitchell. Word has been received also from Indianapolis that Mitchell, who was drafted last fall, is doing sensational work, and that there is no chance of him returning to the Canadian League. Mitchell has improved in his hitting, which was the only weak spot he showed while here.

Pitcher Fred Bramble, who the Ottawas bought from Fort Wayne in August, announced at the close of the league that he would not play ball again. He did not answer the Ottawa contract until recently when he demanded an increase, but volunteered to return. As the Ottawas have Kubat, Shocker, Peterson and Roberts already under contract it is likely that Bramble will be passed up or dispqsed of to one of the other clubs in the Canadian League. The Senators will likely sell catcher Lage to Hamilton for backstop Fisher, while Bullock will probably be found in the spangles of the St. Thomas club. That is his home town and he wishes to play on Dad Stewart's grounds. Manager Shaughnessy has gone to Boston, and while away will probably sign a couple of players for the Ottawas.

BLOUNT LED LEAGUE IN FLY CATCHING

While Schettler Struck Out More Men Than Any Other Pitcher

Ottawa Free Press: Little attention is paid in baseball records to the number of flies caught in the outfield, greatest stress being laid on the scarcity of slip-ups in the outer pastures. Last year Curly Blount, the little centre-fielder of the Peterborough team, was the boss fly catcher of the season with 249. Curly slipped up on but eight and while he ranks second to Cy Reidy, of London, as the best fielding outfielder in the league, Reidy nabbed only 137. Dawson, of Erie, was only one behind Blount in the number of flies caught, but he blew on 20 of them.

* * *

The strikeout king of the Canadian League last season was Bobbie Heck, of London. Bobbie whiffed on an average 5.53 every game. Louie Schettler sent more men back for a drink than Bobbie, but he worked in six more games. The "Joe Lill" of the league was Bill Donahue, of Hamilton, who walked on an average 3.19 men every game. Donahue also beaned an even dozen in the bargain. Graham, of Toronto, had nine wild pitches in 21 games.

OBITUARY

THE LATE MRS. JOHN H. CLYSDALE.

The many friends of Eliza Jane Finlay, beloved wife of the late John H. Clysdale, who predeceased her six years ago, were deeply grieved to learn of her demise which occurred on March 30th, at the home of her youngest daughter, Mrs. W. Bell, on the homestead, where she was born 75 years 10 months and 13 days ago, and lived for a great part of her life.

The late Mrs. Clysdale was a kind and loving wife and mother. She was loved and respected by all. Her beautiful Christian life will ever be remembered by her now sorrowing family, four daughters and seven sons—Mrs. Mary Ellen Cardwell of Chicago, Mrs. A. D. Payne, of Lakefield, Mrs. G. J. Edwards, of Dummer; Mrs. W. H. Bell of Dummer; Samuel, of Lakefield; John, of Caledonia; William, of Lake field; Edward, of Minnesota; Albert, of Lakefield; Arthur of Peterborough; and Merd of Dummer, with whom she resided for several years. Two daughters, Annie and Estella, predeceased her. There are also surviving four sisters and two brothers, Mrs. Robert Harrison, of Peterborough; Mrs. George Elliott of Norwood; Mrs. Malcolm Kidd, of Sask.; and Mrs. James Bell, of Smith; William, of Simcoe; and Thomas Edward of Lucknow.

The funeral, which was held on Thursday, April 1st, to the family lot at Lakefield cemetery, was conducted by Rev. Mr. Irwin of Norwood, and was largely attended by the friends and neighbours of the deceased, showing the high esteem in which she was held in the community.

GEORGE PERCY ROBSON.

A very sad death occurred last evening about 6 o'clock when George Percy Robson, only child of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Robson, 511 Cross Street, passed away at the early age of twenty years and eight months. The deceased young man was well known and highly respected, and his many friends will be grieved to hear of his demise. He was a member of Nassau Orange Lodge.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, under the auspices of the Orange Order. Service will be conducted at the house at 2.30 p.m. by Rev. James Rollins. Interment will take place at Little Lake Cemetery.

Very Proud Woman Is O'Leary's Mother

Correspondent Describes Visit to Home of Gallant Soldier

LONDON, April 11.—The Chronicle correspondent, who has been touring Ireland, describes a visit to Inchigeelach, the home of Michael O'Leary, Ireland's Victoria Cross hero, who was a member of the Royal Canadian Northwest Mounted Police when the war broke out, and who, as a reservist, rejoined his regiment. Michael is the younger of two sons. His elder brother and three sisters are in America.

"It would be impossible for me," writes the correspondent, "to reproduce in print the soft accents of Mrs. O'Leary's brogue as she talked of the doing of her soldier boy, but her mother's heart was overflowing with pride at his great deed, which as resounded throughout the Empire. But oh, this is a cruel war, she [illegible] back safe and sound.' Again her lips trembled and the tears were in her eyes as she said this. 'When a telegram came,' she went on, 'I hardly dared to open it, for I thought it brought home bad news about Mike. I had a postcard from him last Saturday in which he said he was safe and sound,' but that was all Mrs. O'Leary said.

"The War Office had written offering her son a commission in some other regiment, but he did not care about leaving the Irish Guards just now. 'He has never given me an hour's uneasiness since he was in his cradle,' she said. 'He was always the best of boys, but he would leave me, and there was little enough chance for him here.'"

O'Leary's feat was in taking single-handed the salient of a strong German trench. He killed and wounded several in his exploit.

It produces a flat finish which can be washed with soap and water without injury. The color which you choose for the walls and ceiling of a room is the main factor around which the remaining decoration of the room is planned; it is therefore important that you should choose a color that will harmonize easily with the woodwork, furniture, rugs, etc. The great advantage of Sherwin-Williams Flat-tone is that the line contains such a large number of harmonious colors, that no matter what color scheme you may plan for your room, you can easily find this color in this line.

THE RUSSIAN RIGHT WING HAS ADVANCED TEN MILES

This Battle Will Decide Duration of the War

NOW IN POSITION TO STRIKE AT RAILWAY

Leading South Through Lupkow Pass—Fierce Struggl Going on For the Uszak Pass

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PETROGRAD, April 14.—The Russian right wing in the Carpathians has advanced ten miles into Hungary in the last few days of fighting and is now in a position to strike at the railway leading south through the Lupkow Pass, according to despatches to the War Office to-day. The Slav advance in this region has again been halted pending the outcome of a fierce struggle for the Uszok Pass. To the north the Germans are pressing nearer the Russian positions in Poland, particularly north of the Vistula. Fighting is going on north of Bukowina. At nearly every section of the 900 mile front, the opposing arme are again in clash.

TWO WARSHIPS DAMAGED.

LONDON, April 14.—Two allied warships were severely damaged by fire from the Turkish forts in the bombardment of the Dardanelles on Monday, according to despatches from Constantinople to-day, passed by the British Press Bureau, as without confirmation. A British cruiser, the Turkish War Office announced, was hit by several shells, and a torpedo boat was damaged. The Admiralty has issued no statement regarding the bombardment. The official statement from Constantinople and unofficial repreat from Sofia and the Island of Tenedos indicate that the attack was resumed on a larger scale than has been developed since the sinking of three allied battleships on March 18.

The Turkish War Office announced that several enemy ships entered the Strait and participated in the bombardment.

GREAT IMPORTANCE OF CARPATHIAN BATTLE

Defeat of Germans Means Surrender—Exit of Austria From Arena Clearly Forseen as a Result

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, April 14.—The battle of the Carpathians is to decide the duration of the European war, in the opinion of British military observers. There is every indication that Germany agrees with them, for not only has the German general staff taken over the active direction of the fighting, but there is a semi-official announce that the Kaiser himself, with his finest strategists, has arrived at the front.

It is conceded that defeat in the Carpathians now means the surrender of Austria-Hungary, no matter what may be the desires of the Emperor and his general staff, and deprived of their aid in stemming the rising Russian tide Germany cannot hope to meet the terrific strain to be imposed upon her troops on the western front as the forces of the allies increase. She will be confronted then in the east by army after army over 700 miles of front, each one turned towards Berlin, and in the west by other armies, who will be forcing her slowly back towards her own frontiers.

There never has been the least doubt in the minds of any military man in England what the ultimate result will be. Now they believe that victory may come months before they had hoped for it.

A reading of the despatches from Petrograd, Vienna, Berlin, Bucharest, or the battle front itself yesterday tells the story of the desperate situation in which Germany finds herself. She now has seven army corps along the sixty-mile battle front in the Carpathians with her own generals in supreme command. It was the Kaiser himself, it is said, who ordered the German wedge sent into the east towards Stry in order to cut the Russian communications, and this has failed. It is the German forces who have reinforced Uszok Pass which the Russians are enveloping without attacking. Germans have led the Austrians up the valley of Laborcz. They are animating the 700,000 or more Austrians bringing up supplies and lending munitions of war.

The scale upon which the battle is being fought is indicated by the fact that the Austro-Germans are believed to have 1,250,000 men in the Carpathians. Until lately they had three armies there; now they have five, disposed of thus: One on the upper Dunajec River in the region of Kamfeld, commanded by the Arch-duke Eugent Fredrich; No. 2 in the regian of the Mezo Laborcz, Lupkow Pass, and Rostok Pass, commanded by General Boreivitch; No. 3 at Uszok Pass, commanded by General Remormoli; No. 4 on the line of Koziouwka and Tucholka Pass under command of General Alexander Linsingen, of the Germany army, and No. 5 in East Galicia, commanded by General Pfanzer.

It is stated that the German Emperor is in supreme command of the allied Teuton forces with his headquarters somewhere behind the chief front. This one thing was needed to complete the Russian confidence that victory is certain. It is equally certain, however, that victory will not easily be won. Possibly they may have to record a reverse before the end is attained.

THE FATE OF A PAPER SMUGGLER

The Daily Mail correspondent at Rotterdam says:

For several months a Belgian has appeared regularly at Flushing every other evening waiting for the mail boat. Always he bought 200 copies of the Times and the Daily Mail and vanished as secretly as he came. His big slouch hat and warm woollen comforter became familiar objects, and when he did not put in an appearance on Saturday last interested inquiries were made.

I learn to-day that the mysterious Belgian carried his papers over the frontier to Brussels, where they brought a high price. His comrade told me that the missing man had made friends with a Bavarian sentry who, for a consideration, closed his eyes to the smuggling of papers across the frontier.

On Friday, however, the sentries were changed, and the Belgian was unable to persuade the Wurtemberg guard to let him pass. Waiting till nightfall, he crawled under the barbed wire defence works, and in doing so exploded a mine, being literally blown to pieces.

Brussels, however, is still being supplied with English papers.

Only Three Dollars For Pocket Money

MONTREAL, April 14.—The Government is only entrusting the men at the front with three dollars at a time, according to information contained in a letter from Gunner S. C. Anderson with the Canadian artillery in France.

He says: "It is interesting to travel through this country just behind the firing line, and see the people cultivating the fields, while the cafes and stores are doing a flourishing business."

NEUTRALITY HAS BEEN VIOLATED

CHICAGO, April 14.—"On account of the war," began Miss Bertha Mullegger, in Judge Kendall's court, "the chef and I don't love each other any more, and I want him arrested."

The chef—whose name had to be filled in as "John Doe" because that was the best Miss Mullegger could do about it—is said to be the chef at the West Surburban Hospital.

"He's Scotch—I'm Austrian," explained Miss Mullegger, thus hinting at what she meant when she said "on account of the war." "I came over from Austria and got a job as waitress at the hospital. I met the chef and we became quite attached to each other. Then the war broke out and he began to call me names because of my nationality. I couldn't bear it—for I've got two brothers fighting over on the other side.

"Finally it got so bad that when I told him he wasn't a gentleman he slapped me and choked me. So I want him arrested."

Accuses U. S. of Violating Neutrality

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The German Foreign Office is expected to assume full responsibility for the note accusing the United States of violating the spirit of neutrality. Unofficial despatches reaching the State Department indicated this to-day. Ambassador Gerard's report had not arrived, however, so President Wilson has directed that officials refrain from comment, because the charges affect American integrity. The President himself will prepare the reply.

It is not expected that the answer will characterize the German protest as an "unfriendly utterance," but the Cabinet officials familiar with the matter say it will show the plainness with which German contentions will be refuted. This is exactly the interpretation the President and his advisers have placed upon it. Until Ambassador Gerard has complete inquiries, however, the United States cannot act.

How Germany Feels Towards These Countries

LONDON, April 14.—(By mail to New York.) — Widespread anger against America prevails everywhere in Germany. England is the object of intense hatred, France is pitied, and Russia is regarded as merely stupid and inferior, according to David Gradwohl of San Francisco. Gradwohl has just returned from a visit to Leipzig, Nurnberg, Sennenberg and Berlin as a buyer of toys. The sale of ammunition by American firms to the allies has aroused a bitter feeling that has penetrated into every part of Germany, he said. There is no truth in the report that Germany is nearing starvation. Gradwohl said, likewise, stories that Germany has exhausted her draft of men of military age, he declared to be inventions.

Leaves $2,500 to Woman He Loved

CHICAGO, April 14.— The love of Harry C. Hughes for pretty Isadore Steele, which dawned thirty-five years ago, when they were schoolmates down in Cairo, lasted longer than life itself. When they were past the school age they were engaged to be married, but they quarreled and parted and she married another.

In all the time that she was bringing up a family, and after she was widowed, he never saw her, nor wrote to her, nor heard from her so far as any one knew. Yet when he died, several days ago, his will left $2,500 of his savings to the Isadore Steele he had loved all his life—now Mrs. Isadore Ward, mother of the Misses Irene and Isadore Ward, who are homesteading on Government land in Colorado; and of P. E. Ward, circulator of the Orange Judd publications in Springfield, Mass.

Hughes never married and never left Cairo.

Submarine Was Caught in Net

U-29 Was Attempting Attack on British Fleet—A New Method

LONDON, April 14—It is understood that the famous German submarine U-29 met her end while attempting to attack the British fleet, being caught in a net used to protect the anchorage of the warships. According to one semi-official report, all on board were dead when the vessel was brought to the surface, not only the crew perishing, but also four English fishermen who had been rescued by the submarine after their boat had been sunk.

It is also reported that three smaller German submarines have met their fate in the same way, but the Admiralty is still withholding announcement.

A new and ingenious metod of dealing with the submarines has been perfected. A new type of vessel has been built to resemble a small tramp steamer. Its mission is to act as a decoy, the submarine approaching to attack it. Then the vessel opens fire from concealed guns. It is said that one of the latest U type of submarine was destroyed in this manner.

Eton Boy Tries to Punch Nose of Prince Henry

LONDON, April 14.—An infuriated Belgian student at Eton, shook his first under the nose of Prince Henry, third son of King George, during a debate last night, at "P. U. P.," the Eton name of the debating society, vehemently denounced him as a German, and declared that he no doubt sympathized with all Germany had done to Belgium.

The society was debating peace terms, and the subject was "Can We Make Germany Pay for the War?"

Prince Henry argued that it would not only be impossible to crush Germany economically, in the manner proposed, but it would be, even if it were possible, against British interests to do so.

The Belgian jumped to his feet, declaring that the Prince was expressing the view "of the nation of savages that ruined my country." The chairman called him to order, and demanded that he sit down. Instead, in great rage, he made a rush for the Prince and would have struck him, had not two other students seized the Belgian and hurried him from the room.

For raising fire hose quickly to any floor in a building a simple attachment for elevators has been invented.

EXPORTERS ARE BUYING WHEAT

50,000 Bushels Realized $1.57 Cash Wheat Dull

CHICAGO, April 14.—The seaboard reported sales of one million bushels of wheat yesterday. This was said to have been taken by exporters. The big transactions were not reported until after the close of business, possibly for fear that they would act as a bull help and cause a complete reversal in conditions, as the market was weak and the volume of trade small. The fact that there were rumours of big takings of each wheat by exporters and that the rumours wer not confirm- and that rumours were not confirm- volunteer the opinion that the rumours were put in circulation to bolster up the market. Liquidation on a large scale was seen not only in wheat, but in corn and oats as well The buying power—if such a help existed—was cautious and awaited offers of the wheat instead of bidding for it.

Cash handlers here reported a general lack of demand for wheat and of the loss of premiums for all descriptions. Some houses reported offerings of wheat by the country as larger, and the Teasdale Co. of St. Louis, one of the largest grain concerns in the southwest, said that Missouri holders of wheat were offering considerable soft wheat outright, and that Kansas and Nebraska were asking bids on hard wheat for nearby shipment.

One of the leading factors favouring the bull side of wheat was the strength shown at Liverpool, where the spot market was up a halfpenny While this strength was a reflection of the Chicago market of Monday, it helped the general situation here during the early hours, when wheat sold ½c to ¾c higher under good buying. As the day progressed and long wheat was poured into the pit in a steady stream, there were price recessions of 1⅛c to 1½c, and there were little reactions from the bottom prices, and closings were at net losses of ¼c to ⅝c. There were no sales of cash wheat at Chicago yesterday, and the fact that 60,000 bushels were sold to go to store at $1.57 showed that the cash market was not as strong as for several previous weeks

By Frank Froest

Yet, as he turned the key, he realized that the energy and the efforts of both himself and Green might be wasted. There was a possibility that it was a blind trail—that Grell had contrived the whole thing as a blind, and had slipped out of the net that had been drawn for the brown motor car. The though induced Foyle to telephone through to headquarters to order a fresh warning to be wired through to the police at all the ports. He believed in leaving as little as possible to chance.

The night staff was still on duty when he reached Scotland Yard next morning. The detective-inspector in charge stared at a corpulent man clad in a Norfolk jacket, knickerbockers of brown tweed, whose heavy boots clanged along the corridor. The hair and moustache and eyebrows of the intruder where a shiny black, and a little trimming with scissors and a judicious use of a comb and brush had altered the appearance of the superintendent's face as completely as the clothes had altered his figure.

He was no believer in stage disguises. False beards and wigs were liable to go wrong at critical moments. He nodded reassuringly to the inspector and placed his kitbag on the floor.

"It's all right, I'm Foyle right enough. I'm thinking of a change of air for a day or two," was all the explanation vouchsafed. "I want to just run through my letters and catch the nine-ten train from Waterloo. I'll leave a note over for Mr. Mainland, who'll take charge while I'm away."

He went methodically through the heavy morning's correspondence, pencilling a few notes here and there on the letters, and sorting them into baskets ranged on the table as he finished. Precisely at a quarter to nine he touched the bell, and gave a few brief instructions. Then, carrying his bag, he descended the flight of steps at the front entrance and walked briskly along the Embankment. As he crossed the footway of Hungerford Bridge, a biting wind swept up the river and he shivered, warmly clad though he was. One of his own men passed without recognizing him, and the superintendent smiled to himself.

There were five minutes to spare when he sank into the corner seat of a smoking compartment, and composed himself with a couple of morning papers for the journey. But he read very little. There was much to occupy his mind, and as the train stopped out of Waterloo Station he tossed the periodicals aside, crossed his knees, blew a cloud of smoke into the air, and with a little gold pencil made a few notes on a visiting-card. London slipped away, and an aeroplane flying low came into his line of vision as they passed Weybridge. The open pasture meadows gave place to more wooded country, and he placed his pencil back in his pocket as they ran into Deepnook.

A solitary porter shuffled forward to take his bag. Foyle handed it over. "Is there a good hotel in this place?" he asked.

"There's the Anchor, sir," answered the porter. "It's a rare good place, an' they say as 'ow Lord Nelson stayed there once. They aren't very busy at this time of the year. Only one or two motorists stopping there."

The porter hastened to reassure the gentleman. It was a bare three minutes' walk. Might he ask if the gentleman was staying long

Foyle wasn't sure. It depended on how he liked the country and on the weather. "By the way," he went on, with an air of one faintly curious, "didn't Mr. Grell, who was murdered in London, have some property this way? Dalehurst Grange or something? I suppose you never saw him?"

"That I 'ave," asserted the porter, eager to associate himself, however remotely, with the tragedy. "I've seen him time and again. He always used this station when he came down from London—though that wasn't often, worse luck. He was a nice sort of gentleman, though some of the folks down here pretended that 'e was not what you'd call in proper society, because he was an American. But I always found 'im generous and free-'anded. And to think of 'im being done to death! My missus says she's afraid to go to bed afore I go off duty now. It was a great shock to us, that murder."

He spoke with a solemn shake of the head, as though he lived in daily dread of assassination himself. "You see the last train through, I suppose?" asked Foyle irrelevantly.

"Yes, sir. The ten-nine up. As I was saying, what with these 'ere murders and things——"

"Have they shut the Grange up, or is there still some one living there?"

"Well, they got rid of more of the servants. I believe there's still a 'ousekeeper there and a maid, as well as a gardener. I remember when Mr. Grell first took over the place—Bill Ellis—'e's the blacksmith —es to me——" He entered into lengthy reminiscence, to which Foyle only paid casual heed. He had learned what he wanted to know. Grell, if he had left the neighbourhood the preceding night, had got done so from Deepnook, where he would have infallibly been recognised.

The porter was still talking when they passed under the branching arms of the giant chestnut that shaded the courtyard of one of the prettiest old coaching inns in England. Foyle slipped a shilling into his guide's hand, and registered himself as "Alfred Frampton—London."

Local gossip is often of service to the man who knows how to lead it into the right channels. The superintendent decided that an hour or two might be profitably wasted in the lounge, where half a dozen men were sitting at a small table before a huge, open fireplace. He ordered a drink, and sat a little apart, relying on their provincial curiosity to presently drag him into the conversation. By the time the lunch he had ordered for one o'clock was ready, his habit of handling men had stood him in good stead. "Mr. Frampton of London" had paid for drinks, told half a dozen good stories, laughed at a score of bad ones, asked that many innocent questions, and deftly given the impression that he was a London business man in search of a few weeks' rest from overstrain. Moreover, he had gained some knowledge of the lay of the country and acquaintances who might be useful. One never knew.

The afternoon saw him tramping through the picturesque countryside, with its drooping hills and wooded valleys. He moved as one careless of time, whose only object was to see the country. Once he stayed to talk with a stone-breaker by the side of the wood; once he led a farmer's restive horse and trap by a traction engine. On both occasions he contrived to drop a good deal of information about himself, and his reasons for being in that part of the country. That it was false was little matter. The best way to stop local gossip is to feed it. A mysterious quiet stranger would be speculated about, the amiable business man from London with a love of chat was quite unlikely to arouse suspicions.

Sooner or later Grell, if he were in the neighbourhood, would learn of the presence of Green and Malley. His attention would be concentrated on what they were doing. Foyle, acting independently was looking for an opening to attack from the rear. He had a great opinion of Grell's capacity for getting out of awkward situations.

He sauntered through Dalehurst, stopping at a little general store to buy some tobacco and gather more gossip. The village always convenient focuses village gossip. A garrulous old dame talked at lare with the affable stranger, and when the superintendent emerged he was certain that Chief-Inspector Green and those acting with him had succeeded in maintaining an adequate discretion in regard to the events of the preceding night.

Was Troubled With Eczema.

Would Nearly Yell With Pain.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS CURED HIM.

Mr. R. J. Swales, Harriston, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer with eczema. I tried all kinds of salves, but they did me no good. Sometimes I would nearly yell with the pain, and would pass little white worms. I was told to get at the blood, so I used four bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it has made a complete cure."

All skin diseases such as eczema or salt rheum, itching or burning rashes, boils, pimples, eruptions, ulcers, etc., are all caused by the blood becoming impoverished, and while not usually attended with any fatal results, may sooner or later develop into some serious blood trouble, and the entire system become affected.

Burdock Blood Bitters will cleanse the blood of all its impurities and by this means cure all skin and blood troubles.

This valuable preparation has been on the market for the last forty years, so you do not make any experiment when you give it a trial.

WASHINGTON, April 13. — Cecil Malcolm Peoli, an aviator, was killed at College Park, Md., near here, yesterday while making a test flight in an aeroplane of his own invention and in which he had planned flights from Washington to New York and from New York to St. Louis. The machine fell 300 feet and Peoli's skull was fractured.

Peoli was the first man to fly across the Andes Mountains in South America. The machine is said to have been the largest in this country.

The dead aviator was 22 years of age and came here from Los Angeles, where his mother lives.

Mail Orders Suffer.

LONDON, April 13.—The mail order businesses in the United Kingdom propose entering a protest to the Canadian Postmaster-General against what they consider is the present unfair imposition of duty paid in advance upon small consignments. Many well-known houses here have ceased seeking business in the Dominion.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY CHARLES A. PERKINS.

IS THE STATE GUILTY OF MURDER WHEN IT ELECTROCUTES?

ONE hundred years ago there were two hundred offences included in the list of capital crimes under the English law.

To-day, in all but a few States of the Union, there is only one crime punishable by death—murder in the first degree.

In nine States there is not even one crime so punishable.

Life imprisonment has been substituted for the death penalty in these nine States. In New York State there is a movement for the abolition of capital punishment which is growing stronger every year. Public opinion in relation to the subject has recently been aroused by the statement of Thomas Mott Osborne, warden of Sing Sing Prison, that the law has no right to take life and by the introduction into the New York Legislature of a bill for the abolition of capital punishment.

Mr. John J. Dunnigan is fathering this bill in the Senate, while Mr. John J. Ryan is its sponsor in the Assembly. To these men, as to all those who are opposed to capital punishment, the case against the death penalty rests principally on the belief, expressed by Mr. Osborne, that the State has no right to take life.

There are seven men now living to whom has fallen the duty of presenting the case of the people against men on trial for homicide in the county of New York. Five of these men assert positively that the retention of the death penalty is necessary for the well-being of the community. One of the remaining two members of this professional jury is not willing to make a public statement in regard to the death penalty. The seventh man has always been opposed to capital punishment and has so stated publicly. But even he is by no means convinced that at the present moment conditions in New York are such that the penalty should be abolished at once.

The professional jury stands, then, five for capital punishment, with a possible two against—only a possible two.

If the district attorneys of New York county, past and present, are to be permitted to decide this question a life will continue to pay for a life by due process of law throughout the State of New York.

One of the first statements of Governor Whitman after he took office was his emphatic assertion that he is totally opposed to the abolition of the death penalty.

Coming as it did directly after Mr. Osborne's interview in which he denied the right of the State to take life, the former District Attorney's support of capital punishment marked more sharply than ever the conflict of opinion between the advanced humanitarians and the men whose duties have brought them into close personal relation with the enforcement of the law in this community.

Governor Whitman, who has so pronouncedly taken up the cudgels for the retention of capital punishment in the criminal code of New York State, had an unusually active experience while District Attorney in dealing with homicides. Thirty persons were convicted of murder in the first degree and sentenced to be electrocuted during the five years in which he held office.

The most startling of these cases were those of the four "gunmen" convicted of murdering the gambler Rosenthal and their accomplice, Charles S. Becker. The "gunmen" have already paid the penalty of their crime, while Becker is hopefully waiting for the courts to grant him another trial. The acts of the "gunmen" and Becker have so impressed the men of New York who are concerned with upholding the law that to-day the existence of this class of persons in the community forms one of the most stubborn arguments advanced by those opposed to the abolition of capital punishment.

Although Mr. Charles A. Perkins, who succeeded Mr. Whitman as District Attorney, taking office on January 1 of this year, has not been a sufficiently long time in the position to enable him to speak with authority as District Attorney, he has been an Assistant District Attorney for seventeen years, and as such is familiar with the work of criminal prosecution in New York.

"I have had no experience which makes me favor the abolishment of the death penalty," said Mr. Perkins. "My experiences have been entirely the other way.

"Have you ever known of an innocent person being executed?"

"No, never," said Mr. Perkins.

MR. JEROME WOULD SUBSTITUTE A BENCH OF JUDGES FOR JURY

William Travers Jerome, who preceded Mr. Whitman as District Attorney and served eight years in that office, occupied the position of public prosecutor for the county during several of the most celebrated homicide trials in the history of the world. One of these cases was that of Albert T. Patrick, the lawyer, who was convicted of murder in the first degree, but has since acquired his freedom. The Thaw case, which Mr. Jerome conducted in person for the people of the county of New York, still holds the attention of the public to some extent.

When asked what he thought of the abolition of capital punishment in New York State Mr. Jerome said:—

"I am in favor of retaining capital punishment. I believe that the existence of the death penalty is a deterrent, and that its abolishment would result in an increase in the number of criminal homicides. I do not think that imprisonment for life would be a deterrent to men of a certain grade. In the first place they would never believe that it would be imprisonment for life. They would think of it always as a term of imprisonment and they would continue to hope for a pardon. A term in prison, as prisons are now conducted, does not mean any great hardship to many criminals. The conditions of the prison are often better than those to which they are used outside of a prison.

"But I do not believe that a man should be tried for his life by a jury. When a man is put on trial for his life he should come before a bench of four or five judges instead of a jury taken from the ordinary walks of life. It is unfair to take men who have had no training in weighing evidence and expect them to get at the truth in the complicated evidence of a murder trial.

"The State may ask men to serve it even to the extent of giving up their lives in time of war. When the good order of a community is threatened by riotous outbreaks the State may call upon its citizens to come to its aid to any extent at no matter what cost to themselves and to their work. But that is a matter of necessity. It is quite a different thing to call upon men to serve on a homicide jury. What is the average bank clerk, bookkeeper, business man to do in such circumstances? He is confused by the heroics of a murder trial and the many side issues that manage to creep in. Even though he may not think himself opposed to capital punishment, when it comes to the question he hesitates to come to a conclusion in a matter of life and death. Who can blame him? It is demanding too much of a man not trained to the analysis of evidence to ask that he render a verdict which will mean an irrevocable penalty."

"If the death penalty is a deterrent how do you account for the fact that, according to the Chicago Tribune, there were nearly 9,000 homicides in the United States last year, according to statistics, and only seventy five executions?"

Mr. Jerome refused to believe that there were nearly 9,000 homicides in this country during the last twelve months.

"There never have been any reliable statistics on the subject," he said, "because the numbers given are not those of criminal homicides, which are the only ones under consideration. But undoubtedly the death penalty would be more efficient as a deterrent if the trials of men charged with homicide were had before judges instead of before a jury. The guilt or innocence of the person accused would be more clearly established. When the conviction of a guilty person followed inevitably upon the deed the effect upon other criminals or potential criminals would be greater."

E. A. PHILBIN THINKS CRIME CURBED BY DEATH SENTENCES

Mr. Eugene A. Philbin, who preceded Mr. Jerome as District Attorney, was appointed by Governor Roosevelt to serve out an unexpired term. He was District Attorney about a year. He is now a Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York. Justice Philbin, like his successors in the office of District Attorney, is a firm believer in capital punishment. He said:—

"From my experience as District Attorney I am strongly of the opinion that the death penalty should not be abolished.

"There is a class of criminals for whom I believe nothing but the death penalty has any terrors. While these men are not entirely deterred from homicide by the existence of capital punishment, the number of crimes of this nature committed by them would be greatly increased, in my opinion, if it were abolished.

"The class of men to whom I refer have become known to the people at large as 'gunmen.' To these men a prison sentence is no deterrent. They have all served time and so have their friends, and among their own it is no stigma to have been in prison. If the death penalty were abolished the law would have no hold over them whatever."

"If they were quite sure that life imprisonment meant really that, instead of believing as they now do that it is sure to be cut short by pardon, do you not think they would then fear it as much as death?" asked the interviewer.

"No," said Justice Philbin. "I do not. There is nothing that would deter them from homicide but death. The community would be at their mercy."

"Do you recall any cases where, in your opinion, innocent men have been executed?"

"No," said Justice Philbin, "but there are such cases probably—all human institutions are liable to error. But it is not possible because of this to abandon such institutions. It is necessary to consider the greatest good of the greatest number.

"In spite of the utmost efforts of the judges, the counsel and those otherwise concerned in the administration of justice, a great deal too much time is now suffered to elapse between the commission of a crime and its punishment. If there could be less delay in these matters the infliction of the death penalty must have an even greater deterrent effect than is the case at present."

Lieutenant Colonel Asa Bird Gardiner, who served as District Attorney from 1897 until 1900, has had experience in military courts as well as in those of civil life. He was judge advocate of the military Division of the South and later of the Division of the Atlantic. A cause célèbre which came under his charge while he was District Attorney of New York county was the trial of Roland B. Molineux in November, 1899, as was also the case of Dr. Samuel J. Kennedy, who in 1899 was tried for the murder of Dolly Reynolds. Molineux was acquitted and Kennedy was finally freed on a disagreement of the jury.

Mr. Gardiner said:—

"I do not think it would be wise to abolish corporal punishment.

"We have now in this State too many gradations in punishment for the taking of life.

"During the War of the Rebellion I served on military commissions under that part of the law of nations known as 'the laws of war,' as recognized for two hundred and fifty years until the invasion of Belgium, in which violations that were capital offences were tried. Later as judge advocate of a military division, United States court and finally as district attorney I had many murder cases and also represented the United States in murder cases in Maine and in Michigan where the defendants were of the regular United States army. I have never had occasion to change my opinion that the safety of society required that the man who intentionally with malice prepense killed another human being or compassed his death should be put to death if convicted on a fair trial.

"We are having too much mawkish sentimentality on this subject—illustrated by the fact that even atrocious murderers have flowers sent to them by weak minded women.

"It is further illustrated by what is now going on in Sing Sing State Prison—where entertainments are given for the pleasure and instruction of inmates as if honored guests. On holidays there are dinners with all sorts of delicacies put before these guests. Now, according to the newspapers, voting is allowed among them, permitted by the curious person who is superintendent—in order to elect among themselves a 'mayor' and other functionaries.

"These assumed humanitarian schemes are going too far, and a New York daily a few days ago sarcastically remarked that the occupants of Sing Sing apparently fared better than our excellent municipal police force.

"The object of all punishment is to deter others from committing the like offence. That is the primal idea, and not to imprison the individual to be 'coddled.'

"If the statutes against murder are vigorously enforced and the indicted person properly prosecuted the murderously inclined person would, in my judgment, in most instances hesitate and be deterred from taking life.

"Never in the history of our city have there been so many murders and highway robberies and fights among and with 'gunmen' as since the late Senator Timothy J. Sullivan, by his 'gun law,' disarmed the good people of the State, making it a felony, with State prison imprisonment, to be thus protected and giving practical immunity to the criminal class in the use of pistols and other dangerous weapons in attacks on peaceable citizens and their houses and effects.

"Many persons have objected to capital punishment because of the way it is often enforced either by unskilful hanging or by electrocution with its unpleasant attendant preparation. Sometimes two and even three applications have to be made to bring about seeming death. Some medical men have asserted it was only suspended vitality, which cannot ordinarily be determined if the so-called dead convict is put at once on the operating table.

"The simplest and most effective and the quickest method of inflicting the death penalty is by the Spanish garrote, which, because it was Spanish, was put aside for the expensive and cumbersome one of electrocution, so called.

"The garrote is simply an ordinary armchair with a scantling behind to be raised or lowered to right height like the head rest of a barber's chair. There is a steel collar two inches wide which, being on hinges at the rear, is instantly snapped together on the neck in front without any special inconvenience to the convict, who sits on the chair without discomfort or strapping. Behind stands the executioner, who, at the word given, turns a long lever arm which pushes through the steel collar a large wooden or steel screw with flat end which instantly impinges on and snaps the spinal cord, and that is all there is of it.

"As a further deterrent to murder every convicted murderer should, by law, be deprived of benefit of clergy and no publication made of the murderer's remarks at the scaffold, in which, often putting himself on a higher plane as a good religious person superior to his fellows, he forgives the warden and all concerned in his imprisonment.

"As an argument against capital punishment the large number of homicides in the United States last year and the very few convictions is brought forward.

"The people of the community are responsible for this in not electing prosecuting officers who will vigorously and rigorously perform their duties without partiality or favor.

"How far well directed, rigorous punishment may result in deterring in the commission of crime may be illustrated by the following story:—

"While the British army was still in Canada some years ago a board of United States regular army officers, of which I was one, with the consent of the British government, was sent there to investigate and report on the British system of military prisons.

"The one at Quebec held 146 prisoners, wearing a special military garb and who had been convicted of military offences.

"It was a frame structure one story high with wooden slats to the windows and an ordinary board fence around the building. The system was one of silence, with exactly regular duties, including shot drill twice a day on an earthen floor in a seperate frame house like a bowling alley. The convicts were divided into three classes, according to behavior, handling, respectively, 32, 24 or 18 pound shot, three to a man, which they raised, one at a time, breast high, carried forward three paces and deposited on the ground, without noise. Facing about, they returned to bring in like manner the second and third shot, and then carried them back in the same order three paces to the original place of deposit. This was the shot drill, an hour and a half, morning and afternoon.

"There was no humanitarian effort to teach trades or make the prison self-supporting. Its object was by the character of the discipline to deter others from committing like offences.

"When admitted to the prison the soldier was put in the third class and slept every night, as if on guard on a board covering his iron bedstead. Good behavior advanced him to the second class, where he had a mattress to sleep on three nights in the week, and continued good behavior put him in the first class, where he had a mattress all the week and on Saturday the privilege of the library.

"The shot drill, not hard nor painful, but steady, developed the convict's muscles and general physique and made him stand in a soldierly manner, and when his sentence expired he was sent to a new regiment, a splendid looking, healthy soldier. None ever escaped and only one was ever known to come back on another conviction and sentence by general court martial.

"The contention that individuals banded together in a government have no right to take life where the individual does not conveys an implication which strikes at the root of social order.

"Governments are formed especially to curb and punish the lawless and protect individuals in their lawful pursuits."

William M. K. Olcott, who preceded Colonel Gardiner in the office of District Attorney, afterward becoming a Judge of the City Court, is the only man who has occupied that office who has a good word to say for the abolition of capital punishment. Mr. Olcott was counsel for Albert T. Patrick and publicly asserted his belief in the innocence of the lawyer defendant. In stating his somewhat modified convictions as to the advisability of doing away with capital punishment Mr. Olcott said:—

"I have all my life been opposed to capital punishment.

"The law, it has seemed to me, has no right to take life.

"It cannot give back the life it has taken should new evidence prove the convicted person innocent. The possibility of error seems to me to make the death penalty entirely wrong.

"But while I have stated my convictions in this matter repeatedly and still hold to them theoretically, I have come to doubt the wisdom of an effort to abolish capital punishment in New York at the present moment.

"Mr. Whitman and Mr. Perkins, who are fighting to maintain order under present conditions, assure me that to abolish the death penalty now would be to leave them helpless before the gunmen. As they have been actively engaged in looking into this problem very recently I feel obliged to consider their point of view as of great importance.

"I am bound to admit also that since the life of prisoners is being made so luxurious and entertaining I am myself a little in doubt as to the efficacy of a prison sentence as a deterrent to homicide."

"Do you not think that the larger part of the theatrical interest which attaches to a person guilty of homicide is due to the possibility of its being a capital punishment case?"

"Undoubtedly," said Mr. Olcott, "that is one reason for the abolishment of the penalty. The friends of a man executed for murder are likely to make a martyr or a hero of him. In this way the effect of the death penalty is bad for the community. Life imprisonment is much less dramatic and therefore not so likely to create exaggerated sympathy for the person on trial. I believe that more convictions of persons guilty of murder would be obtained if the death penalty were abolished. As I have stated, my general convictions in this matter remain unaltered, but I would hesitate to advocate the abolishment of capital punishment in New York just now because of the peculiar conditions which exist here at present."

GIANT REPTILE SEVEN MILLION YEARS OLD

BETWEEN seven and ten million years ago, in what is known as the Jurassic Age, there lived a group of giant reptiles called Dinosaurs, one family of which, the Stegosauridae, or plated lizards, is perhaps the most fantastic and curious in all natural history. The most perfect and complete fossilized skeleton of the genus Stegosaurus, a smaller branch of this remarkable family group, is on exhibition in the new building of the United States National Museum, at Washington, just as it was found and dug out of the sandstone rock. Near at hand is a natural size and very lifelike restoration in papier-maché so weird and monstrous in appearance as to give one the horrors.

Back in the very early days of the world this armor plated lizardlike monster dwelt in the western part of the United States in what is now the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains, although at that time the mountains did not exist.

He roamed about in the marsh and swamp lands of that region, feeding on the tropical grasses and plants, the fossil remains of which are found buried with his skeleton. The specimen mentioned above comes from Quarry No. 1, in Fremont county, near Canyon City, Col., where it was found by Mr. M. P. Felch in 1885. Brief articles concerning it were written from time to time, but it was not assembled and mounted until two years ago, and never completely described until recently.

With the exception of the removal of some of the sandstone which surrounds this valuable specimen, it has been left in the position in which it was discovered so that the relation of the various bones and skin armor may be seen and studied by scientists. In order that the lower side of the skeleton and the back plates may be seen, two mirrors have been placed beneath it in such a manner as to reflect the exact structure and location of the various bones.

The undisturbed position of the bones and the surrounding sandstone indicate that this monster died in the water, or on the bank of a stream, and from some natural cause. It is possible that the carcass floated down the stream, as the arrangement of the different bones and spine plates indicates a gradual washing and tipping over, rather than the crushing action of a heavy force. The skeleton is quite complete and lies partly on its side and back, with nearly all the bones in their relative positions, rendering it of infinite value to scientists for study and as a reference type.

In life this peculiar reptile of such gigantic proportions must have presented a forbidding appearance; it measures about nineteen feet in length, was evidently more than eleven feet in height at the hips and was covered with a very tough and horny scalelike skin, studded here and there with bony buttons or knobs of armor.

ACID STOMACHS ARE DANGEROUS

Nine-tenths of All Stomach Trouble Said to Be Due to Acidity.

A Physician's Advice on Cause and Cure.

A famous physician whose successful researches into the cause and cure of stomach and intestinal diseases have earned for him an international reputation, said in the course of a recent lecture that nearly all intestinal troubles, as well as many diseases of the vital organs, were directly traceable to a deranged condition of the stomach which in turn was due nine times out of ten to excessive acidity, commonly termed sour stomach or heartburn, which not only irritated and inflamed the delicate lining of the stomach, but also set up gastritis and stomach ulcers. It is interesting to note that he condemns the use of patent medicines as well as of medical treatment for the stomach, stating that he and his colleagues have secured remarkable results by the use of ordinary bisurated magnesia, which, by neutralising the acidity of the food, removes the source of the trouble. He contends that it is as foolish to treat the stomach itself as it would be for a man who stepped on a tack to rub liniment on the foot without first removing the tack. Remove the tack and the foot will heal itself—neutralise the acid and the stomach troubles will disappear. Irritating medicines and medical treatments are useless, so long as the contents of the stomach remain acid; remove the acidity, and there will be no need for medicine—the inflamed lining of the stomach will then heal itself. Sufferers from acidity, sour stomach or heartburn should get a small bottle of bisurated magnesia from their druggist, and take a teaspoonful in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after meals repeating in fifteen minutes, if necessary, this being the dose which the doctor has found most efficacious in all cases.

In Great Britain there has been patented a trousers protector consisting of a wire frame to be inserted in the top of a shoe to hold a trouser leg out of the mud.

GROWING SWEET PEAS

Practical Pointers For Amateur Gardeners--Getting Vigorous Plants and Good Bloom

Sweet peas should be sown just as early as soil conditions will permit. They are not difficult to grow providing sufficient attention is given to the preparation of the soil. Even under indifferent culture fair satisfaction may be obtained for a short season, but to grow the best and largest flowers and to enjoy them for a long period calls for careful soil preparation, constant care and ample cultivation.

MUST BE DEEP-ROOTED.

If given a chance the sweet pea will send its roots two feet or more in search of food and cool, moist (not wet) soil. They can only do this, however, when the soil has been broken up and prepared to this depth. If deep-rooted they are not nearly so likely to suffer from drought and heat as when only shallow-rooted. The result of deep rooting is to prolong the bloom season of the most beautiful and fragrant of all flowering vines.

To have sweet peas deep-rooted and properly nourished insures luxuriant growth, large flowers and a long season of bloom. The object of early planting of sweet peas is to give them a long period of cool weather after sowing as this will retard top growth and encourage a lengthening and strengthening of the roots. To gain these advantages it is absolutely necessary that the soil preparation be thorough.

Trenches should be prepared to a depth of two feet. The soil should be removed and thoroughly broken up. Work into a portion of the soil removed a good quantity of well rolled short manure, mixing it well and breaking up all chunks. With the mixture refill the trench to within six inches of the surface, trampling the earth well down with the feet.

To obtain the very best results it is necessary that each vine be allowed ample space in which to develop. Those who aim at producing quality in preference to quantity with regard to bloom, go on the theory that 6 to 12 inches between the plants. The other extreme is where the broad row planting is practiced. In the latter case the seed is sown broadcast over the width of the trench and a thick growth encouraged. The result in this case is a profusion of bloom though the flowers are much smaller than where greater space is provided. A good plan is to strike a happy medium and sow the seeds in rows a few inches apart in the rows. Not all the seeds will germinate and even should they do so it is an easy matter to thin them out as desired.

When seed has been sown cover with two or three inches or soil and press this well down. As the plants appear above the surface fine earth should be worked about them. This should be repeated as they develop until the trench is almost filled to a level with the surrounding surface. As the weather grows warmer it will be necessary to supply something in the nature of a mulch over the surface surrounding the vines in order to protect the roots and keep them from drying out. Lawn clippings are excellent for this purpose.

LIME AND BONE DUST.

If before completing this preparation of the soil a sprinkling of equal parts of lime (unslaked) and bone flour (½ lb. of each to the square yard of surface) is mixed through the top five or six inches of soil, growth will be stimulated and improved.

Sweet peas should be well cultivated right through the season, all weeds removed and the surface kept loose until the time comes for applying mulch. Watering should be done whenever needed and at such times a thorough soaking should be given. Watering when not necessary is nearly as bad as neglecting to water when necessary. A good plan is to hoe a shallow furrow on each side of the rows about six inches away from the plants. If this is done water may be liberally supplied where necessary where it will do the most good.

The same furrows may be used to supply stimulants to the roots when the vines begin to show signs of exhaustion. A weak solution of liquid manure (made by steeping manure in water) or nitrate of soda solution (one ounce to a bucket of water) may be applied in this manner. A bucketful will suffice for a single row 15 feet long. Apply once a fortnight.

Bloom should be frequently cut right from the start. If seed pods are allowed to form bloom will soon cease altogether. Spraying the vines with clear water will keep off the red spiders that often destroy the foliage.

Sweet pea vines present a most naturally graceful and beautiful appeared when twined on brush supports, though coarse soft string or wire netting may be used. Wire netting, however, is liable to become heated with the sun's rays and cause a withering of the vines unless the growth is thick enough to shade them.

It is a common practice to plant sweet peas along a board fence or shed. They will do much better if placed where a free circulation of air through them is assured. If necessary to place them near a fence or building let the trench be made a foot or two away from it, this will allow the air to pass through and behind the vines.

It has been found a good plan to plant dwarf nasturtiums on the sunny side of the rows and a half a foot or so away from them. The nasturtiums, with their large leaves, will shade the roots of the sweet peas and keep them in a cool, moist condition. When the pea vines have withered and are removed the nasturtiums will still remain until the frost nips them.

Burning the Candle at Both Ends

You cannot burn a candle at both ends without greatly shortening the period of its existence. The same applies to the nerve force—the power which drives the machinery of the body. The supply is limited. The waste resulting from the activities of the day is replenished by the night's rest and sleep—for sleep is Nature's greatest restorative.

When the hours of activity are greatly increased and those of restoration cut down you are burning the candle of nerve force at both ends, and sooner or later nervous collapse must follow. There will be warning symptoms, such as headaches, sleeplessness, irritability, indigestion and feelings of fatigue and depression. If you will heed this warning take things easier and use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. You can prevent serious developments.

Fainting Spells—Sleeplessness

Miss Emma Scott, Athens, Ont., writes:—"Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me a world of good. I was troubled with fainting spells, bodily weakness, and spent restless, sleepless nights. I frequently had cramps in the stomach, and would at times become entirely insensible, not knowing what was going on until others told me afterwards.

"I doctored with several doctors, and they told me I was threatened with paralysis. They gave me relief, but could not cure me. After suffering for three years I began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and it has done me more good than all the medicines I ever used."

These letters bring a message of good cheer to all who suffer from exhaustion of the nervous system. They tell of the most successful nerve restorative of modern times—Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. There is new hope and courage, new health and strength for you in the use of this great food cure. It has proved its efficiency in so many thousands of cases that it can scarcely fail to benefit you. Fifty cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

GERMAN PRESS HAS GLOOMY VIEW OF THE FUTURE

AMSTERDAM, April 13. —The socialist newspaper Vorwaerts calls attention to the enormous increase not only in temporary but also in permanent expenditure which is required by the exigencies of war. Discussing the new German budget, the newspaper calculates that interest on war loans, deficit for war years and the making good after the war of military and naval expenditure will mean at the very least the doubling of all existing taxation. The annual increase of expenditure is figured at $625,000,000 to $750,000,000. Regarding suggestions of huge indemnity the Vorwaerts says:

"The Secretary of State remarked that he by no means renounces the idea of obtaining a war indemnity. It is better nevertheless, for the present to leave such a solution out of account. If one does that it is urgently necessary to deal in all seriousness with the problem of shaping our future financial system. Unfortunately, the Secretary abstained from indicating what new sources of revenue he intends to open up."

The Boersen Halle, official newspaper of the German Stock Exchange, touching on the same subject, says:

"The expenditure to cover the war loans, the maintenance of the invalids, and the survivors of the killed at the very least will require two milliard marks ($500,000,000) yearly. The damage to our national fortune is at present incalculable, and we are still a very long way from the end.

"Our markets in the East are taken by Japan and in South America they are in the hands of the United States. Whether a victorious Germany with a weakened means will be able in the long run to carry the enormous burdens in the question.

"It ought not to be forgotten that the German workman who joined the colours in August with enthusiasm will not look forward on the situation created during his absence with the same enthusiasm when once he returns to his employment, finding wages decreasing and cost of living increasing, while in all directions he will be compelled to assume his share of the unavoidable heavy taxes.

"Many, and perhaps not the least skilled, will emigrate to obtain better conditions of living, and this, again, will be a further loss to the working power and national fortune of the German Empire."

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR BLACK

Try Grandmother's Old Favourite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural colour and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or grey; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay grey! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

Flee Massacre In Far Persia. On Honeymoon

NEW YORK, April 8—An American bride and her Persian husband have arrived in New York after a perilous journey following an outbreak of the Turks and an alleged massacre of Christians in Urumia, Persia, on Jan. 2.

Dr. and Mrs. Abraham Yusseff are the only two survivors to reach America, and they brought the first authentic information of the fate of 80,000 Christians who were living in Urumia.

Their trip, which began in the middle of the night of January 2, when the Russian Cossacks who had scented trouble, rode around the village giving warning to get out immediately, was one long nightmare. The last lap of the journey was made on the Baltic, and even then they were in constant fear of the Germans.

Dr. Yusseff, who is a naturalized American citizen, is a native of Persia, while his bride is a New York girl. Mrs. Yusseff refused to tell what her maiden name was, fearing that the publicity would interfere with some of her plans for the immediate future.

They are totally without funds, having been forced to flee on fifteen minutes' notice.

Bitter Cold Night.

"In the pretty little village of Urumia, which is only 100 miles from Tabriz and about 120 from the Russian frontier, we were under the protection of Russian Cossacks and felt comparatively safe," said Mrs. Yusseff. "There were some 15,000 Persians and Turks and only about 2,000 Cossacks, so when we heard that the Turks were preparing to swoop down upon us with all their forces, strengthened by the Kurds, a powerful and brutal race of mountain brigands, we lost no time in getting out. It was a bitter cold night and the ground was covered with snow. Only about 50,000 of us left with the Cossacks, 30,000 for one cause or another remaining behind. We have heard since that they were all massacred. We heard also that the Russian bishops and the missionaries from this country had their throat cut and were hanged up in the streets that very night. The Turks and Kurds use anything they can find for weapons—axes, huge knives and spears being the most popular.

"Dimly realizing in a vague way what was before us, Dr. Yusseff and I made no attempt to bring any of our valuables with us and left with what money we had in the house, all the bread and cheese and the same few clothes we are still wearing. Some of the women rolled up their expensive rugs and silver into packs and started off with them, but it was not many days before they were too weary to carry them. The Mohammedans along the route would not let us get away with anything anyway. They stole the pitiful little packs of personal belongings that some of the saddened pilgrims still held on to.

Tramp for Ten Days.

"For ten long days we trudged along, half starved and suffering intense pain from the bitter cold. There seemed to be no beginning nor end to the line of marchers. In many cases, where the shoes had been entirely worn away, the pilgrims, bent double with fatigue and the strain, would leave bloody imprints in the snow. Their feet were so benumbed by the cold that they were unconscious of the cuts and gashes. Children would fall time and again from sheer exhaustion and hunger, and quite often we would have to turn our backs and go on ahead, leaving a moaning mother behind trying to carry her child.

"The Russian Cossacks were wonderfully kind to us. They rode along with us, cheering the downhearted and urging us on with promises of help from the Russians as soon as we reached the nearest town. They took turns in carrying the oldest and weakest of our little army on their horses. At night, when the suffering was the keenest, they made beds as best they could for the women, using their coats as covering. These nights stand out in my memory as the blackest of hideous nightmares, experiences far worse than anything I had ever imagined.

"The horses, sheep and buffaloes, hungry and thirsty, would stampede around, almost creating a panic. The shrill cry of a child who had been stepped on by one of the animals would be followed by the wailing of its parents. Few of us had any sleep. Some days we would march along for hours thinking we were going in the right direction, only to learn from the soldiers ahead that we had been following the wrong lead. Hundreds died along the way from various causes and we would not have time to stop and bury them; their bodies were just left by the roadside to be mutilated by the Mohammedans.

See Mutilated Children.

For months previous to the outbreak children were being missed daily from Urumia and no one knew what had happened them. Our worst fears as their fate were realized when in passing through some of the towns nearest to Urumia we saw the mutilated bodies of the missing young ones lying in the road, where the Mohammedans knew we had to pass, with their throats cut. The Mohammedans, who are devils, were afraid to attack us because we were under the protection of the Cossacks, but they stole our meagre supply of bread, refused to give or sell us water, and mocked at us in our misery, calling curses to the 'Christian dogs.'

"Down in the valley on about the eighth day we had to walk through mud up to our knees. Some of the stronger men and women took off their shoes and stockings and carried others over, but that retarded progress too much, so we just got through as best we could, a crawling, pushing, half mad mob.

"The first Russian city we reached was Julfa, and there over half of the refugees are now. The inhabitants threw open their homes for us, took up subscriptions, and did all they could, but even their best was sadly inadequate. There was barely food and shelter enough for the thousands who poured into the city.

From Julfa to Petrograd as many as had needed money rode; the others either stayed at Julfa or settled temporarily in the near-by towns. They all have faith in the Cossacks, who, they say, are going back to Urumia later in the spring and kill every Persian, Turk, and Kurd there, and lead the Christians back again."

French Attacks Against The German Wedge Are Renewed

German Statement Admits That the French Infantry Penetrated Their Lines at Vodun But Claim That the Attacks Were Repulsed With Heavy Losses---Martial Law is Imminent in Vienna.

SITUATION THERE DAILY GROWS WORSE

(Special Cable to The Examiner.)

BERLIN, via wireless, April 14.—The French have renewed their furious attacks against both sides of the St. Mihiel region, the war office announced this afternoon. The enemy's onslaughts have been most violent on the north side of the wedge, between Maizerey and Marcheville. East of Vodum, the war office admitted, the French infantry penetrated the German positions along the narrow front near Marcheville. Reinforcements were brought up and the Germans recaptured the positions by an equally violent assault. Other strong attacks in this same region broke down before the French reached the German wire entanglements. The German artillery tore great gaps in the advancing lines of the enemy, causing unusually heavy losses.

NO PROHIBITION

LONDON, April 14.—The British cabinet will take no action to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors. After several conferences the ministers have decided to leave the liquor question to the people through their representatives in the House of Commons. Premier Asquith made this announcement to-day when parliament reassembled this afternoon. The liquor question and rumours of an early peace were uppermost in the public mind. Parliament had scarcely opened when a member queried the Prime Minister on the result of the recent liquor discussions. The Premier replied that the ministry had reached the conclusion that the Commons and not Government should decide a matter of vital interest to the British people. In response to another query, the Secretary of State for the Colonies said that the Government would consult the Canadian and other self-governing colonies most fully when the time to discuss the peace terms arrived. He had no observations to make regarding the probability of an early peace.

MUST BE BEATEN INTO THE DUST

NEW YORK, April 13.—A Special Cable to the Tribune from London says: The Tribune is able to state on the highest authority that all German extra-diplomatic peace efforts, such for instance as interviews with the Pope, have been vised in Berlin before being allowed to be sent to New York. "Germany must be beaten into the dust," says the Tribune's authority. Germany will have to be humiliated, and the Germans are a brave people. You know we must not forget that the Germans are as brave as any of us, and it will be hard for them to accept humiliation. They will have to give up Alsace and Lorraine. They will have to give back Belgium with a big indemnity to the Belgians besides. Schlesweg, too, belongs to Denmark. They will probably have to give up Schlesweg, and Austrian Poland has already gone.

LONDON, April 14.—The situation in Vienna is growing worse daily, the Rome correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co. wired to-day. The proclamation of martial law is imminent. The population according to the correspondent, is growing extremely restless because of the Russian advance through the Carpathians.

28 YEAR TASK IS AHEAD OF GERMANY

LONDON, April 13.—Speaking at a meeting of the Houlder Line, Limited, the chairman, Mr. Houlder, told the shareholders that at the present rate of progress it would take the German submarines 28 years to destroy the British merchant marine.

LONDON, April 13.—A despatch from Lausanne, Switzerland, says that according to the Swiss Nationalle, Professor Gauph, the nerve specialist, of Tubignan, has been drawing attention to the alrarming increase in the cases of madness in the German army.

SOLDIERS' VOTE BILL PASSED BY COMMONS

Amendment That It Should First Be Submitted to Lord Kitchener Was Lost on Division

GOES TO THE SENATE

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 14. — The Commons to-day again resumed consideration in committee of the soldiers' votes bill, the discussion relating more particularly to the conditions under which the polling will take place at the camps in Canada. The Minister of Justice submitted a number of amendments which were adopted. One provides that a soldier may be sworn, another that if a volunteer's name is left off the list of those entitled to vote, he may vote after taking the oath, and still another amendment provided for the naming of agents or scrutineers on behalf the the two parties.

Mr. Hon. Rodolph Lemieux again moved an amendment that no action should be taken under the provisions of the bill until it had been submitted to, and approved by the Secretary of War for the United Kingdom, Lord Kitchener.

"The only observation I have to make in connection with this amendment," said the Prime Minister, "is that if it went into effect it would constitute a severe blow to the autonomy and independence of this Parliament."

The amendment was put and "lost division."

Hon. Chas. Marcil moved to strike out the age limit.

This amendment was also lost on division, and the bill passed, and will now go to the Senate.

FOE'S AIRMEN ARE CAUGHT

Aviators Captured Near Braine and at Luneville While Another German Birdman Is Killed Near Verdun

CIVILIANS KILLED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, April 14.—A Zeppelin dropped explosives on the old French town of Bailleul, eight miles northwest of Armentieres, killing three civilians, according to an official statement from the War Office to-day. It noted an increased activity on the part of the enemy's airmen. The Zeppelin crew aimed bombs at the French aviation camp at Bailleul, the War Office announced, but all missiles went astray. A German airman was forced to descend inside the allied lines near Braine, and also at Luneville. Both aviators were made prisoners. In the valley of the Orne river, north of Verdun, another German birdman fell from a great height and was killed.

RANGERS HAD 270 MEN OUT

Biggest Turnout So Early in the Season in Any Year—Many Old Members Coming Back and New Ones Joining

RECRUITS' CLASS THURSDAY

The attendance at the weekly drill of the 57th Regiment last night was well in excess of the best previous showing in any year so early in the season. There were 270 men on parade and most of the companies had a flock of recruits keeping the stores busy finding uniforms for the newcomers. During the evening Major Hounsell gave an interesting lecture to the older members of the regiment on "Musketry," while the newer men were drilled in the elementary manoeuvres and in physical exercise.

The weekly class for recruits will commence on Thursday night and with the extra drill the latest addition to the regiment will soon catch up to the others.

A pleasing feature about the enthusiasm being shown in the 57th is the return to the ranks of many of the former non-commissioned officers who had dropped out, but who now feel that it is their duty to "do their best" for the Empire by coming back now to help in the work. Among those noticed last night were Sergt. Waterman and ex-Col. Sergt. W. H. Moore. The latter, who was a member of the Bisley team, has rejoined B Company and his extensive knowledge of shooting will be of the greatest assistance.

The following orders were issued last night:

Headquarters,
Peterborough, April 13.

Orders by O. C. 57th Regt. P. R.:

1. Detail of duty for the week ending April 20, 1915. Captain for the week, Capt. Watt; next for duty, Capt. McPherson. Suabltern for the week. Lieut. Comstock; next for duty, Lieut Gemmell.

2. A class for recruits will be held on Thursday, April 15th at 8 p.m. and on each subsequent Thursday at the same hour until further orders under Acting Sergt.-Major Succee.

3. The captain of the week, until further orders, will act as acting adjutant.

4. The commanding officer has been pleased to make the following promotions:

B Co.—To be Col-Sergt, Sergt. J. Miller; vice,—Sergt. Succee, acting Sergt. Major.

D Co.—To be Sergt., Pte. Smedmore; vice, Sergt. Tobin, who reverts back to the ranks.

By order,
K. G. LECH, Capt.,
Act. Adjutant.

Loss of Two Valued Members

At the monthly meeting of the St. John's branch of the W. A., Mrs. J. C. Davidson, President, spoke with touching earnestness on the loss, during the past week of two valuable members. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

That St. John's ranch of the Woman's Auxiliary record their grief at their loss sustained through the unexpected death of Miss Mencke, a painstaking and faithful secretary and member for many years. Miss Mencke will be fuch missed by all our members.

Also the following: That St. John's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary hereby offers to the friends of their late beloved member, Mrs. Best, their sense of the great loss to them by her departure to higher service. Mrs. Best was for many years an officer of this branch, and also a life member of the Auxiliary. By her unique personality she held a special place in the affection of past and present members. A life member of many years' standing, formerly of Toronto, Mrs. Melbourne presented purple tokens to be worn in memory of the late members.

MORE MEN APPLIED THAN WERE NEEDED FOR REMOUNT DEPOT

Local Recruits Disappointed Last Night When Word Was Received That Complement Had Been Obtained--26th Battery Boys Working Hard at Kingston.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

There would have been no difficulty in securing twenty-five or thirty recruits up to last evening for the Canadian Remount Depot and there were plenty of disappointed men when Lt.-Col. Walker announced last night that he had been advised from Kingston that the depot was already up to the strength and it would be impossible to take more men from Peterborough than had been reported yesterday morning. Eight were taken on on Monday night and this was the number reported by Lt.-Col. Walker. During the day that many more were enlisted and last evening there were some twenty more applicants. As the matter stands now only eight have a chance to go and it is likely that a selection will be made to-night from among those already accepted.

Guns for 8th C. M. R.

Ottawa, April 13—J. B. Fraser, the well-known Ottawa lumberman, has donated two additional machine guns to the machine gun section of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles. The section will thus be increased from a two-gun equipment to a four-gun equipment and will be under the command of Lieut. Fraser, second son of Mr. Fraser. Mrs. Fraser has already donated one machine gun and the Militia Department one gun to the section. Lieut. Hugh Fraser, another son, is at the front with the first contingent and was an officer in the Governor-General's Foot Guards.

Held Back $10.

Ottawa, April 13—According to militia orders the sum of $10 is to be withheld for a period of six months from the pay of every man enlisted on or after the 1st of March, 1915, for overseas service. This amount is to provide for the cost of civilian clothing to men discharged within six months of their enlistment, and also to partly compensate the Government for military issues made to men who subsequently desert.

After six months' service, or on termination of engagement, the amount may be repaid and civilian clothing issued free on discharge.

Kingston, April 13.—Major-General F. L. Lessard and Colonel T. D. B. Hemming left to-night to inspect the 39th Battalion in Belleville on Wednesday, and are then going to Ottawa to inspect the 38th Battalion.

The friends of Harry Gamble, formerly of the local police department, who enlisted with the 24th Field Battery detachment in the 39th Battery, will be interested to learn that he has been made Farrier Sergeant of the Battery.

No New Cases.

Belleville, Ontario — Capt. (Dr.) Carron, medical officer of the 39th battalion, stated to-day that the health of that unit was good. There are no more cases of meningitis, although one case is under suspicion. The carriers at the fair ground have had attention paid to their throats and noses daily. These men are not expected to develop the disease of meningitis. Examinations are

AN INTERESTING PRESENTATION TO 57TH REGIMENT

Rangers Receive Gift of a Splendid Picture of Former Officer of Regiment Who Commanded Canadian Voyageurs in Egypt

DIED ON WAY BACK

The 57th Regiment is in receipt of a most interesting and highly appreciated gift from Mrs. Aaron A. Cox, formerly of Peterborough, and now of Toronto, of a splendid picture of her cousin, the late Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. William Nassau Kennedy, a former officer of the 57th Regiment. The picture will be hung in the officers' quarters at the Armouries, and will be highly prised. In connection with the gift the following letter from Mr. Alfred H. Cox, of Toronto, gives an interesting sketch of the career of Col. Kennedy:

Officer Commanding the 57th Battalion, Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—On behalf of my mother, Mrs. Aaron A. Cox, I beg to present herewith to the officers and members of the 57th Battalion at Peterborough a portrait of her cousin, the late Lieutenant-Colonel the Honourable William Nassau Kennedy.

The late Col. Kennedy was an old Peterborough boy, and was attached to the 57th Battalion. He was among the first volunteers to go from Peterborough to take part against the Riel Rebellion. After the rebellion he settled in the West, and was one of the founders of Winnipeg. He became Colonel of the 90th Winnipeg Rifles.

He was in command of the Canadian voyageurs with the Nile expedition under Lord Wolsey when an effort was made to reach Gordon in Khartoum.

On his way back to Canada via England one of his men was stricken with small-pox. He nursed the sick man back to health, but contracted the disease himself and died. He was buried with high military honours (Queen Victoria sending her representative) in Highgate Cemetery, England, where his grave is marked by a monument bearing the laurel crest of his battalion, the Ninetieth, also the Maple Leaf and Beaver.

In view of these facts my mother believes that this portrait will be acceptable to your battalion.

Yours respectfully,
ALF. H. COX.

A PRINCE ON THE CARPET.

The essentially democratic character, as well as the rigidity of military discipline inherently British in character, is illustrated by an incident printed on another page. No rank relieves from responsibility to discipline, nor saves from being brought to account. The action of the Prince of Wales, now in France, in saving a German prisoner from being shot as a spy is to the credit of his heart. But the military authorities are not sentimental. They argue with Sergeant Bagnet, that "discipline must be maintained." The prince was arraigned like the humblest Tommy, and only extenuating circumstances — the fact that the man for whom he interfered, was not really a spy — saved him from a much severer punishment than suspension from duty for three days. The Prince of Wales will have learned, that though "kissing goes by favour" in the court, it loses its influence in the camp.. He will have got a new and practically impressed idea of the significance of his motto —"I serve." He learns that, in war especially, he cannot at once both command and serve. He will have gained a new sense of the relations of the King and the people—that under the British constitutional system the King is more the servant than the master of the people—the embodiment of the principle of discipline, that is the vital governing force of the nation, reciprocally affecting and relating to both governing and governed.

GOOD ROADS AND THE GOVERNMENT.

Good roads is a subject of ever-green interest, and of more importance than interest, to a great many city and other municipal councils. The matter of good roads is too largely left to the initiative, or indifference of councils, hampered by inefficiency both in the matter of intelligent and aggressive municipal representation, and by scarcity of money.

It is to be admitted that lack of means is largely responsible for the bad roads that exist all over the country. And The Examiner has persistently advocated a more liberal expenditure of provincial funds, to be devoted to the building of highways, especially in the interest of farmers reaching market with their produce. Unfortunately the provincial funds are too largely diverted, to other purposes, not to say wasted, as exemplified in building a million dollar residence for a lieutenant-governor. It is therefore not amiss to demand a portion of the Dominion revenue to supplement the provincial and other money available for road building. The money collected by the Dominion Government in the form of customs duties, is paid by all the provinces —Ontario paying the lion's share. The money does not belong to the Dominion Government, which is only a committee for the expenditure of the peoples' money wisely and to advantage.

When the Borden Government took office, at the first session of the present Parliament, a measure was introduced and passed called the Highways Aid Bill, which authorized the expenditure of a large sum of money for the purpose of highway improvement—good roads. This was an action that received universal approval. The money was needed for this purpose by the provinces, and the provinces had a right to it; for the provinces collectively contributes the total revenue of the Dominion of some 100 millions a year.

While the contribution of the money was universally approved by both parties inside and outside Parliament, the Government tied a string to it, that would render its distribution ineffective; left the way open to using the money as a means of exercising undue partizan influence, and enabling it re-engine for gaining undue partizan advantage.

According to the Act of Confederation the building and maintenance of highways comes altogether under the provinces — the Dominion cannot legally spend a dollar in building a highway. But the act provides that the Dominion can grant subsidies to the provinces to be spent by the provinces. It is therefore plain that the money granted under the Highways Act should be turned over to the provinces pro rata and in the same manner as the general subsidy, leaving to the discretion of the provinces which only have the authority, the decision as to how it shall be distributed and expended.

But the Borden Government refused to be guided by this safe constitutional principle. It insisted upon retaining the power of distributing the grant, made under the Highways Aid Act, according to their discretion—according to their judgment of what mode of distribution would give the greatest party advantage. It was pointed out by those who heartily favoured the granting of the money and wished to see it most effectively spent, that the proposed retention of the power by the Dominion Government of the distribution of the money would lead to corrupt employment of it.

This was demonstrated. At the time of the introduction of the bill there was a bye-election in South Renfrew, and on behalf of the Government candidate roseate pictures were held before the electors; the prospects of large expenditures of money for good roads by the Dominion Government, which, as a matter of fact, has no legal right or power to spend a dollar on highways. As a matter of fact, in that election, the advocates of the Government promised enough grants for highways—if the Government candidate was elected—to spend half of the total amount voted for the whole Dominion.

The Liberals in Parliament, seeing this danger—seeing that the control of the distribution of the Highways subsidy by the Government would defeat the object of the grant; make its distribution unfair, and the expenditure sectional and devoid of general advantage, protested; but the Borden Government insisted that while the money might be divided according to the population of the provinces, the expenditure of it must be left under its absolute and exclusive control.

The bill was passed by Parliament in this form, and when it went to the Senate, that body, while commending the idea of contributing a generous good roads grant to the provinces, felt that the money must be distributed according to the Confederation Act, and amended the bill to provide that the initiative and responsibility of spending the money should be left to the provinces. But the Government evidently anxious to retain the power of using the money for vote-getting rather than for road building, rejected the Senate amendment, and every Government member of the House voted to kill the grant for highways rother than consent to have the money expended legitimately by the provinces.

It is to be remembered' that all the Liberal members of the House strongly favoured the granting of the money; only they insisted that it should be turned over for expenditure to the provinces, which only have the right to spend money on road building. In fact in the Government refusing the Senate's amendment the second time in the session of 1913, a Liberal mmeber moved, the House being in supply, that the sum of $1,500,000 provided for in the bill the Conservative majority in the House had killed, be made a subsidy, to the provinces for construction and improvement of highways, so that the money could be used in the year 1913. A strongly partizan chairman ruled this motion out of order, and his ruling was sustained by the Government majority vote of 42 to 21.

Thus it is seen that neither the Liberals in the Senate, nor in the House were, or are opposed to the granting of the money for good roads on legal and proper conditions. So that the responsibility of depriving the provinces of the benefits of a big sum for good roads rests with the majority of the Borden Government, which prefers to see no money granted that cannot be distributed, contrary to the constitution, or distributed in a way that will not permit it to be used as a medium of influencing votes and giving party advantage. The Senate and the Liberal party are the true friends of effective expenditure of Dominion funds to promote good roads.

How Can We Profitably Utilize Canada's Increasing Apple Crop?

Mr. Donald Johnson, Canada's Fruit Commissioner, has recently made some striking and startling statements as to the probability of an over-production of apples in Canada. In the famous Annapolis Valley of Nova Scotia, which extends for 100 miles with an average width of six miles, not more than fifty per cent. of the apple trees are bearing, while most of those that are producing are still young and will increase their yield materially. In New Brunswick, on the sloping banks of the St. John, there are thousands of acres of young orchards not yet producing. Quebec also is planting many trees, while in Ontario not one-half of the vast total of 10,000,000 apple trees are bearing. In British Columbia Mr. Johnson says he travelled hour by hour through solid orchards, kept in a state of perfection seldom seen in Ontario. It is true that they are producing only some 1,000 carloads of apples this season, yet it is only the beginning, as two-thirds of the trees are under five years of age, and the other third practically only beginning to bear. The Northwest States of Washington, Oregon, and Idaho are in like position, producing now some 15,000 cars."

The Fruit Commissioner advises a curtailment of planting until the consumption of fruit increases to meet the plantings of the present day, and the taking up by the orchardists in an adequate way of the question of distribution. He points out how greatly the growers have benefited by co-operative distribution, and adds: "As a member of one of these associations, I can testify that many a man has been made rich through his orchard, the products of which in former years went to enrich the dealers. To-day market conditions are such that much fruit is left unharvested, yet the co-operative associations are in most cases receiving a fair return for their fruit. This, to my mind, is the first and most important step in marketing: the organization of the producers. Now the time has come for these associations to go a step farther, that is, to proclaim to the world the quality of their fruit, or in other words, to advertise."

This is all sound, practical advice, and worthy of the careful consideration of the orchardist. The market for green apples can be extended greatly by judicious advertising, as the recent Government publicity campaign proved. It is not illimitable, however, and when Canada's twenty-five million apple trees come into full bearing they may produce fifty million barrels a year. When that day arrives we shall have to export not only green and dried apples, but apples in jams, jellies, and every other form in which they can find a market. Looking to this not very distant future, would it not be well to make a bid for the place of the world's chief purveyor of preserved fruit by removing all duties upon sugar and the other supplies and materials necessary to the manufacture of preserves? Britain took Germany's beet sugar, supplied cheaply because of an export bounty, and used it to turn oue preserves which she exported to every part of the world, Germany included. If Canada is to produce within a few years something like a hundred million dollars' worth of apples and immense quantities of other fruits, we should begin to lay the foundations of an export business in preserved fruit on a scale commensurate with the amount of raw material at our disposal.

PREMISES CLAIMED TO BE INSANITARY

At a meeting of the Board of Health that was held yesterday afternoon, a complaint was heard respecting the alleged insanitary conditions of the premises at 137 London Street. The Board decided to visit the premises complained of and take such steps as may be necessary to have the nuisance nabted.

From another quarter of the city emanates a complaint concerning a lusty lunged rooster that is wont to exercise his vocal propensities at an unseemly hour in the morning.

The Board decided to take no action in the matter, claiming that they had been doing police work long enough. If the alleged disturbance constitutes a nuisance, the matter may be taken into court, and the owner instructed to remedy he trouble.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE TWO CLAIMANTS

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

Howard Prower and Ralph Cunningham, two young Englishmen, met in the gold country of Colorado and became fast friends.

These young men, having compared notes, learned that they came from eminent British families. Prower was a younger son of a nobleman, and Cunningham claimed to be a graduate of Oxford. Besides the fact of their being fellow countrymen, there was a strong resemblance between them. They were nearly the same height and build and both light complexioned. There was one difference between them, though it was scarcely noticeable. Prower's right eye was of a slightly different shade of blue from his left eye.

But there was a great difference in the character of the two men. Howard Prower was a kind hearted, noble man; Cunningham was a devil. They prospected together for a time, agreeing that if one struck paying dirt he would share it with the other. Finally Cunningham dug a hole in the ground for which he was offered a hundred thousand dollars. He had no intention of sharing it with Prower and was debating how he could best cheat him out of his portion when a letter came addressed to Howard Prower, earl of Brokefield.

Prower was away on a prospecting tour when the letter came. Both men had been away from England for ten years. If Prower were out of the way Cunningham might return, pass himself off for the new earl and thus appropriate the title and estates. While he was deliberating on this plan word was received that Prower had been attacked by claim jumpers and murdered.

Cunningham went to the place where the fight had occurred and tried to find his friend's body. He was told that a number of persons had been killed in the fight and they had all been buried side by side. He was shown the graves, but saw no reason why he should exhume his friend's body. Returning to his cabin, he opened the letter that had been received and learned that Prower's father and two older brothers had been taken ill and all had died within a period of a few weeks.

A month from that time Cunningham appeared in England and claimed to be Howard Prower, now Earl of Brokefield. There was no one of the family to receive him except a sister of the late earl, who did not doubt that he was her nephew.

No one disputed the identity of the claimant except Lady Gladys Pembroke, the daughter of a neighboring nobleman who would have been Howard Prower's wife except for his poverty. She had not married and when the heir returned expected a happy meeting. To play the part of her lover was more than Cunningham could accomplish, and she at once pronounced him an impostor.

But notwithstanding this assertion, which was not very largely accepted, Cunningham established himself as the Earl of Brokefield. He had played the part of a peer some four months, when who should appear but the real earl. Prower had been left for dead by [illegible] who had attacked him and those who had joined in his defense. Before they had returned to bury the dead he had crawled away. When he had recovered he looked for his chum, but did not find him. Later he had heard of his father's and brother's death and at once started for England.

When one day Howard Prower walked into his home and met his old friend face to face the latter turned pale. There was one of two courses which he might choose—step down and out or claim that the newcomer was an impostor. He chose the latter course. He ignored his visitor, saying that he had come to personate the real Howard Prower, but that he would be unable to substantiate his claim.

Prower, aghast at such treatment, withdrew and entered suit against the man who had usurped his title and his property. His aunt unfortunately adhered to the opinion that Cunningham was her nephew. This left Lady Gladys Pembroke the only witness in Prower's favor, and her evidence was not counted so valuable as that of a member of the claimant's family. Nevertheless, Lady Gladys warmly espoused Howard's cause, and the relations of lovers that had existed before he left for America were resumed.

One witness was found in an old woman who had nursed Howard when he was a baby. But she had never seen him since that time, and her evidence was not considered of much value, especially since in her old age she had lost her eyesight. However, at the trial she was called to the witness stand and testified as follows:

"I have not seen Howard Prower since he was a baby, when I used to give him his bath and wheel him in his perambulator, but if I could see plainly now as then I would know him, for I noticed on him a defect I have never seen in any one else. His eyes were of a different shade of blue."

The two claimant's were at once examined carefully. Nearly all the examiners pronounced that the blue of Howard's right eye was slightly lighter than that of his left.

This settled the case definitely, and he was adjudged to be the Earl of Brokefield. He married Lady Gladys. Cunningham was sent to prison for a term of years for making false pretenses.

TWIN BABIES LEFT IN PARLOUR OF HOME

FRANKLIN, April 14.—The mystery surrounding the abandonment of the twins, found by Isaac McCormick, a railroad section foreman, and his wife, in their parlour, has been solved. They are the children of a young married woman of this city whose husband deserted her in Pittsburg. Her name is being shielded by friends as she has secured a position here and will remain in the city.

The twins, a boy and a girl, are about three weeks old and when discovered were richly dressed. In their basket were also two fine dresses, nighties and the following note:

"Take us in, use us well, for we haven't any place to dwell. We will be a comfort to you. Feed us on oatmeal gruel and sugar and milk."

The woman who left the babies was traced through a taxi-driver. She was arrested by Detective Brown and Sheriff Homan and placed in jail on the charge of abandonment. The McCormicks had meanwhile taken a liking to the twins and after the police had conferred with them the mother was released. It then developed that Mrs. McCormick's daughter-in-law, Mrs Foster McCormick of Limestone, would like to take one of the children. She arrived to-day and selected the boy. The girl will remain in Franklin. Neither of the two families previously had children.

Why the McCormicks got the babies has been explained by the mother. A relative told her he had once ever heard Mrs. McCormick remark that she dearly loved children and, having none of her own, wished some person would leave a child on her doorstep as she had often heard was done.

"SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" Can't Harm Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, sore throat, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. ### ALL FOR THE FLAG.

There's many a tear, and many a sigh
And many the hearts that ache.
For the men who bade their homes good-bye,
And left for their country's sake.
And some mother's son will never return
To a maid who longs and hearts that yearn.
But oh! 'tis a fate no man would spurn
In defence of his native land.

There's many a smile, and many a joy,
And many a waiting heart.
For some mother longs for her darling boy
That e'en she was loth to part,
But oh! she can smile tho' it cost a tear,
As the days roll on from year to year,
For she gave up the one she loved most dear
In defence of her native land.

But what of the cost while the flag waves free,
And the foeman's beaten back,
For our's is the joy with the victory
'Neath the folds of the Union Jack.

RETURNS FROM FRONT.

President of France Back in Paris Again.

DUNKIRK, April 14.—President Poincare and Minister of War Millerand left here yesterday for Paris after a visit of three days' duration with the French and Belgian troops in this vicinity.

The French President had a long conversation with King Albert of Belgium at the Belgian headquarters. He was received also by Queen Elizabeth.

U. S. Cruiser To Go to Smyrna.

PHILADELPHIA, April 13.—The scout cruiser Chester arrived at the Philadelphia navy yard yesterday from Hampton Roads. After a few minor repairs she will leave for Smyrna to protect American interests in the Mediterranean. It was said that the work upon the cruiser would be rushed and that she probably would be able to get away within two weeks.

The Chester, which is the speediest ship of her class in the navy, will relieve either the North Carolina or Tennessee, now in Mediterranean waters.

Austrian Transports Sunk.

CETTINJE, Montenegro, April 13.—At least 23 persons were killed and more than 109 were wounded in the Austrian air raid over Podgoritza last week, according to figures given out yesterday. King Nicholas and the crown prince went to Podgoritza on Saturday. Albanian insurgents attacked Austrian troopships on Lake Scutari Saturday, sinking two of them.

WATCHING JOFFRE

All Eyes Are Directed Towards Strategy on Western Front.

GENERAL OFFENSIVE WAITS

Expectation That Advance From Verdun Would Launch the Long-Looked-For Advance Is Not Justified by Events — Southern Column Is Moving on Important Railway Junction.

LONDON, April 13. — The first phase of the battle of the Woevre also apparently has come to an end, and interest now centres on the next move of Gen. Joffre, the French commander, in his effort to compel the Germans to release their hold on St. Mihiel, and that part of the plain of the Woevre included in their wedge. The capture of Les Eparges was, in the opinion of British military critics, a long step in the direction desired by the allies, but they place even more importance on the advance from Regnieville toward Thiaucourt in the south, as the latter town is a railway centre from which the force at St. Mihiel draws its supplies.

This battle has not as yet proved the prelude to a general offensive in the west, as was expected. This is probably due to the fact that instead of moving troops from other points along the line to assist the army of the Woevre, the Germans have brought their reinforcements from the interior of Germany, or perhaps right from the eastern front, and consequently the situation remains comparatively quiet on the western front.

The Official Press Bureau last night issued a narrative furnished by the British officer who is acting as an eye-witness observer with the French forces. He describes a trip along the front from Thann to St. Mihiel, touching the French positions in the southern Vosges. The narrative follows:

"By means of human, mule and ox draught, even the heaviest guns have been dragged up the mountains and cunningly established. It was in a great measure due to the accurate and overwhelming artillery fire against the German trenches at Hartmanns-Weiler Kopf that this position was captured with such trifling loss to the attackers.

"The capture of this hill was of the first importance to the French. From it and the neighboring heights, which they already held, southern Alsace lies open to the view.

"Now the French can shell the railways, factories and cantonments used by the Germans in the valley.

"Throughout the winter the fighting in this area has been most severe, the attacks often taking place through snow up to the men's waists.

"The trenches are from 40 to 300 yards apart, but nearly always now the French trenches are on higher ground and overlook the German ones.

"The morale of the French troops is splendid. They are full of confidence, as they know that they have the upper hand."

Harpalyce Had Safe Conduct.

LONDON, April 14. — The Daily News correspondent telegraphs from Rotterdam: "Further facts which I have gleaned to-day regarding the torpedoing of the relief ship Harpalyce render the whole affair more serious than was at first supposed.

"I am officially informed that the Harpalyce, which was returning to America to report to the American Commission for Relief in Belgium, was actually carrying papers issued by the German Minister at The Hague, taking the form of a safe conduct and intended to protect her against attack by the German submarines while on the voyage to the United States."

Could Hardly Straighten Up For The Pain in Her Back.

Many women suffer from an excruciating pain in the back. They are not even able to look after the common duties of their housework, and cannot even walk at times.

The whole trouble is that the kidneys have become affected, and when the kidneys get "out of kilter" the whole system becomes deranged. On the first sign of a weak, lame, aching back you should not neglect it, for if you do, you may be sure that some serious kidney trouble will follow.

What you want is a kidney medicine for kidneys only. This you will find in Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's Kidney Pills know nothing but kidney disorders, because they're made for kidneys only.

Mrs. George Craigie, Rose Valley, P.E.I., writes: "I am writing to tell you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills did for me. I was suffering with a lame back, and for several days I could hardly straighten up for the pain. I had used quite a lot of other kind of pills, but received no relief. Just then my sister told me about what "Doan's" had done for her, so I decided to try them. I used three boxes and I am completely cured. I do not hesitate to recommend them to all."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c a box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

AFRAID SHE WAS DYING

Suffered Terribly Until She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

ST. JEAN DE MATHA, JAN. 27th, 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered so much that I would not dare eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives". I did not wish to try them for I had little confidence in them but, seeing my husband's anxiety, I decided to do so and at once I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was cured. While sick, I lost several pounds, but after taking "Fruit-a-tives", I quickly regained what I had lost. Now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am completely cured, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives".

Trent Canal.

The term 'Trent canal' is applied to a series of water stretches, which do not, however, form a connected system of navigation, and which, in their present condition, are efficient only for local use. By various works this local use has been extended, and by others, now in progress and contemplation, this will become a through route between lake Ontario and lake Huron.

The series is composed of a chain of lakes and rivers, extending from Trenton, at the mouth of the river Trent, on the Bay of Quinte, Lake Ontario, to Lake Huron.

Many years ago the utilizing of these waters for the purpose of through water communication between Lake Huron and Lake Ontario was projected.

The course, as originally contemplated and modified, is as follows:

Through the River Trent, Rice Lake, the River Otonabee and Lakes Clear, Stony, Lovesick, Deer, Buckhorn, Chemong, Pigeon, Sturgeon and Cameron to Lake Balsam, the summit water, about 155 miles from Trenton; from Lake Balsam by a canal and the river Talbot to Lake Simcoe; thence by the River Severn to Georgian Bay, Lake Huron; the total distance being about 200 miles of which only about 15 or 20 miles will be actual canal.

The full execution of the scheme, commenced by the Imperial Government in 1837, was deferred. By certain works, however, below specified, sections of these waters have been made practicable for navigation, and the whole scheme is now being carried out. A branch of the main route, extending from Sturgeon Lake south affords communication with the town of Lindsay, and, through Lake Scugog to Port Perry, a distance of 174 miles from Trenton.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| From Trenton, bay of Quinte to Nine Mile rapids:— | | |
| Nine Mile rapids to Percy Landing | 19¾ | 9 |
| Percy Landing to Healy's Falls dam | — | 14½ |
| Healey's Falls dams to Peterborough | 51¾ | — |
| Peterborough to Lakefield | — | 9¾ |
| Lakefield to a point across Balsam Lake | 61 | — |
| | 132½ | 33 |
| Total distance, Bay of Quinte to a point across Balsam Lake | | 165¾ |
| From Sturgeon Point on Sturgeon Lake, 46¾ miles from Lakefield, the branch through the Town of Lindsay to Port Perry, at the head of Lake Scugog | | 27 |

The works by which the Trent navigation has been improved comprise canals, with locks and bridges, at Young's Point, Burleigh rapids, Lovesick, Buckhorn rapids, Bobcaygeon, Fenelon Falls and Rosedale; also dams at Lakefield, Young's Point, Burleigh Falls, Lovesick, Buckhorn, Bobcaygeon and Fenelon Falls. By these works there is afforded communication between Lakefield, 9 1-2 miles from Peterborough, and Balsam Lake, the head waters of the system; opening up a total of about 160 miles of direct and lateral navigation.

At Lakefield, 9 1-2 miles from Peterborough, the dam at the head of the Nine Mile rapids of the River Otonabee maintains navigation at Lake Katchewannoe up to Young's Point.

At Young's Point, 5 miles from Lakefield, the dam between Lake Katchewannooka and Clear Lake controls the water level through Clear and Stony Lakes up to the foot of the Burleigh canal.

At Burleigh rapids, 10 miles from Young's Point, a canal, about 2 1-4 miles in length, passes the Burleigh and Lovesick rapids, and gives communication between Stony Lake and Deer Bay.

At Buckhorn rapids, 7 miles from Burleigh rapids, there is a canal about one-fourth of a mile long.

At Bobcaygeon, 15 3-4 miles from Buckhorn rapids, a dam 553 feet long, controls the water level to Fenelon Falls.

At Fenelon Falls, 15 miles from Bobcaygeon, a canal about one-third of a mile in length, connects Sturgeon with Cameron Lake.

As stated some time ago, the Trent Canal may be open this summer for traffic through to the Bay of Quinte. Should this be the case, it will mean a further increase in the freight traffic on the canal, which will then be open through to Montreal. At the present time workmen are engaged in putting the Lift-Lock in shape for the opening of navigation.

War-Court Wigging For The Prince of Wales

Court-martialled for "Committing an Act Grayely Violating Military Discipline"

LONDON, April 12.—The London Daily Telegraph publishes the following: The Prince of Wales recently saved a German prisoner taken at St. Eloi from being shot as a spy under circumstances that led to a court-martial inquiry to investigate the charge made by Major Deane against the Prince of "committing an act gravely violating military discipline."

The Prince was sent with despatches to Major Deane, the officer commanding at a village near St. Eloi. On the Prince's arrival he saw a German being led off to be shot as a spy. Asking the reason, the Prince was told that the man had been found in the British lines wearing a British officer's overcoat and that he was trying to make his way back to the German lines when captured.

The Prince spoke to the German in his own language, and learned that the man had become detached from a German patrol, and was simply endeavouring to rejoin his own lines when he was taken prisoner. He had taken the coat from a dead British officer, as he had lost his own and had no intention of acting as a spy.

Prince Believed Story.

The Prince believed the man's story, and asked the British lieutenant in charge of the firing squad to send the German to the local prisoners' camp and to have his case inquired into.

The lieutenant declined to do this on the ground that his orders were to shoot spies in British uniform on the spot. The Prince, however, persisted that the German should be sent to the prisoners' camp, and pointed out that there was every probability the man was not a spy.

The matter ended by the Prince taking the German himself in his motor car to Major Deane, to whom he reported the whole occurrence.

No Right to Interfere.

Major Deane informed the Prince that whether the man was a spy or not the Prince had no right to interfere with the Lieutenant who was carrying out definite and strict instructions, and that he would be compelled to report to the British Headquarters, that the Prince had used his rank as the son of the sovereign to prevent these instructions being carried out.

As a result of Major Deane's report a court-martial was held which resulted in the Prince being severely censured and suspended from duty for three days. This sentence was passed as a matter of discipline for the court-martial was satisfied the prisoner was not a spy and he has been sent to England as an ordinary prisoner of war.

Had it not been for this extenuating circumstance and the fact that Major Deane had the reputation of being an excessively severe and unpopular officer, the Price would have suffered a severe punishment as his offense was regarded as a grave one by the General Staff.

BROTHER OF LOCAL WOMAN IS KILLED

Mrs. P. Anderson Receives Word of His Death in Action

Mrs. Peter Anderson, East City, received word yesterday that her brother, serving with the British Expeditionary Force, had been killed in action in France. Another brother was taken prisoner by the Germans early in the war.

Suggests Attention To Returned Soldiers

There are several invalided Canadian volunteers returned from Salisbury, who are recuperating from illnesses which necessitated their discharge. "It seems to me," said a widely-known citizen this morning, "that if some of the automobile owners knew these soldiers they would occasionally offer a little outing for them. I have only a horse and buggy, and I am providing for one man this afternoon. It is not much, but it is better than nothing. There must be gentlemen in the city who would like to afford a litle pleasure for the few returned soldiers who were unable to reach France, but who underwent the Salisbury ordeal."

Three Calls Were Voted On

Peterboro' Presbytery Also Considered Changes in Hymn Book

The Peterborough Presbytery in session yesterday afternoon in St. Andrew's Church voted on three calls, namely, that from Millbrook to Rev. Mr. Lee, from Pontypool, Ballyduff and Janetville to Rev. Mr. Maybon, and from Grafton and Vernonville, to Rev. Mr. Bennie. The first named is without a charge at present, his last pastorate being at Waterloo. The latter two were recent graduates. Arrangements have been completed for the induction of Rev. Mr. Bennie on Tuesday, April 27. Rev. Mr. Lee on Thursday, April 29, and Rev. Mr. Maybon on Friday, April 30.

During the afternoon Rev. Alexander McMillan, of Toronto, gave an address on "Church Praise," touching upon the proposed changes to the Presbyterian Hymn Book. A delegation of Sunday School teachers was received, Mr. S. J. Keyes speaking in their behalf in favour of the introduction of hymns suitable for "Beginners."

In the evening St. Andrew's Church was the scene of an open meeting under the auspices of the Peterborough Presbytery, when Rev. Alexander McMillan, of Toronto, addressed the congregation. His subject was "Church Praise." He has made a careful study of this subject for several years, and is an authority on Church Hymns. The choir last evening was composed of members of Presbyterian choirs of the city.

In the course of his remarks the speaker dealt with the Church Hymns in four groups, Songs of Praise, Prayer Songs, Songs of Instruction and Songs of Personal Experience. Song was one of the most beautiful and most previous gifts that God had given to His children. Song was pure and true. We were brought up with song. Had not our mothers sung lullabies when we were babes? In song we should be led away from thought of ourselves.

Eighty-five Cases Since War Began

And Forty-seven Soldiers Have Succumbed to Cerebro-Spinal Meningitis

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, April 14.—In the Commons this morning, replying to a question by J. H. Sinclair, the Minister of Militia stated that since the opening of the war there have been eighty-five cases of spinal meningitis among the Canadian soldiers. Of these forty-seven had proved fatal, and in the case of twenty-eight the patients had completely recovered. He stated that the disease was regarded as contagious.

General Hughes also gave further information concerning Major McQuarrie, who in the Public Accounts Committee, acknowledged having given a receipt to W. Wylie for $1,200, received by him for his influence with General Hughes. The Ministed stated that Major McQuarrie resigned. He presumed that the money which he had received had been paid to the Major just as the commission is paid to any agent. The Department had not yet considered whether the Major would retain his rank or not.

Mr. Gordon's Rejoinder To Mr. Hill

Editor of the Examiner, City:

Dear Sir,—Upon my return to the city I found that Mr. Hill had written a letter trying to crawl out of the position he had taken.

My letter does no quibble in saying that I was not present at the meeting of the Board of Education. If Mr. Hill knows what quibble means, he is falling over himself even in his second letter. Any person with any intelligence knows, or should know, that the confirming of minutes of a former meeting must follow as a matter of course, and no person can vary them if they are a true statement of what has actually taken place at a former meeting, and talking such nonsense as Mr. Hill does about objecting to the minutes, is another instance of where he is unintentionally humorous. If his letter was not an attack upon the City Council of former years, and which he now tries to crawl out of, I am unable to understand English.

Mr. Hill's last weak shot is the most lame excuse that was ever attempted to be offered by a man who aspires to hold a public office.

For Mr. Hill's own benefit and in answer to his inquiry, I will tell him now that I do not intend to object to the payment of the expenses of the delegate who was authorized to attend a convention by a majority vote of the Board of Education. I am willing to accept a majority rule which is a thing Mr. Hill has not been willing to adopt, notwithstanding the fact that I obtained the highest vote in the recent election. This is ordinarily considered in some degree, the measure of a man's size.

From the recent exhibition Mr. Hill has made of himself through his letters, I would suggest that if some of his friends do not advise him, he should let me offer the suggestion, that for his own sake he should keep out of print.

Yours truly,
G. N. Gordon.

When You Wash Your Hair Don't Use Soap

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

WESTERN TROOPS ARE FINE BODY OF MEN

Capt. Anderson, Formerly of Peterboro, Says the 6,000 Troops Stationed at Winnipeg Are Splendid Intellectually and Physically—Are Anxious to Get Away

Mr. W. B. Anderson has received an interesting letter from his brother, Capt. G. W. Anderson, formerly of Peterborough, and now with the 28th Battalion, Second Contingent, C.E.F. at Winnipeg, Capt. Anderson says:

My Dear Brother,—I infer from your letter recently received that you failed to get my reply re the troops in training here. There are now about 6,000, mostly infantry, with artillery and C. A. S. C. units, and so make quite an imposing parade on the day of any garrison review, of which we have had several during the past winter. That portion of the Second Contingent stationed here is certainly a fine body of men, judged from both an intellectual and physical standpoint, and the manner in which they took hold and made themselves proficient in those parts of the work which could be taken up here during the winter season, was a most agreeable surprise to those in a position to observe their work. The length of time, however, that we have been detained in garrison here has been a disappointment, and many of the men are becoming quite impatient over the delay in being sent abroad. I note you say the Peterborough companies of the C. E. F. expect orders to leave almost any day now, and I hope to have the pleasure of meeting some of my former 57th friends before reaching for the front. I have already had the pleasure of meeting two of the 57th officers who were attending the R.S.I. during the last term here. The weather has been very mild for some weeks past, which enables us to take up such work as field tactics and scouting, visual training, range finding, etc. We hope to get work started on the rifle ranges soon, if we remain here much linger, but many of the men are now first-class marksmen, with either stationary or moving targets. I could write a great deal more in favour of our men here, but time forbids.

Should we pass through Peterborough on our way to Halifax I will wire your previously in order that you may meet us at the depot there.

Trusting to see you soon, I remain,
Sincerely Your Brother,
GEORGE.

STAMP TAX WILL GO INTO FORCE TO-MORROW

The Dead Letter Office Will Claim the Letter That is Improperly Posted—Cheques Issued Before the 15th Are Exempt

To-morrow a letter with only two cents in stamps affixed, which heretofore has been sufficient to carry it practically all over the world, will go to the dead letter office, or where there is the usual "after ten days return" it will go back to the sender. The little stamp with the "War Tax" across it makes all the difference "getting there" and "not getting there." If the stamp with the "war sign" isn't handy, why, the Post Office Department isn't going to stop your letter if you put on an ordinary one cent stamp. It prefers the war stamp, but the really necessary thing is to have the third cent. If the letter is just going to another address in Peterborough, why, put on another cent and make it two.

GOOD START WITH RAILWAYS.

It develops that the 15th of the month is a fine day to have the tax start—that is, so far as the Government is concerned. The 15th is pay day in many establishments, including the big Canadian railways. It is said that the taxes on these checks will amount to $3,000 to-morrow alone. A stamp tax of two cents is required for every cheque or cheque receipt paid to anyone by the bank, including savings account receipts, bank drafts, money order or travellers' cheque.

WHO MUST AFFIX STAMP.

The stamp on cheques, drafts, etc., must be affixed by the issuer—in the case of a cheque by the person who draws it; in the case of a draft or money order, etc., by the issuing bank. Stamps on promissory notes or bills of exchange lodged with or transferred to the bank must be affixed by the person lodging the item. Stamps on such items must be cancelled by the bank which pays or receives the item. Stamps on bank drafts and bank money orders are to be cancelled by the paying bank.

The bank has no authority to affix the stamp to a cheque, promissory note or bill of exchange for a customer, but may sell stamps for this purpose.

PENALTIES FOR NEGLECT.

A penalty of $50 is provided for the person who issues a cheque or signs a savings bank receipt without affixing a stamp, and of $100 for the bank which issues any item which should be stamped without a stamp, or does not cancel the stamp on cheques, receipts for money, bills of exchange or promissory notes, etc., when paying them.

A cheque must be cancelled at or before the time of payment; a bill or promissory note at the time the bill or note is transferred or delivered to the bank.

CHEQUES ISSUED BEFORE 15TH EXEMPT.

When the act comes into operation there will no doubt be many cheques presented at banks that day and probably the next day or two without stamps. If the cheques have been bona fide issued prior to the 15th of April no stamps need be affixed. Bank tellers can no doubt tell with reasonable certainty when the cheque has left the maker's hand. If the cheque left the maker's hand before the 15th, no stamp will be required. If, however, the cheque leaves the maker's hands on or after the 15th the stamp will be required, no matter what the date on the cheque is.

Local Council of Women's Column

The Matter Published in this column will be supplied by the Local Council of Women and in the interest of their work.

We want to save the health of our children, so that we may nurture a strong community. That is the surest way to stamp out disease. We should therefore make it one of our first objects to secure playgrounds for the children, and keep them off the dusty, over-crowded streets.

The Moral Training of Playgrounds.

A few hours in the fresh air, a few hours of self-abandon in innocent fun, a chance to be a normal boy or girl, will do more to reinforce moral lessons than many days of mere teaching.

The playground is without any direct effort one of the regenerating and uplifting forces of the community.

Teach the girls to play instead of loitering around, that they may become strong, energetic and rosy with health instead of the pale, listless, neurotic women so common among us today.

Why should Peterborough be behind other cities, and even many towns in recognizing the value of healthful happy play in the life of the child, as evidenced by the establishment of playgrounds. Belleville has them, Stratford has three, Brockville, with a population of 10 thousand was not satisfied with one but opened another last year.

LAKE OF BAYS.

One hundred and forty-six miles north of Toronto, on the line of the Grand Trunk Railway, nestles Huntsville, and the Lake of Bays District. The region is replete with natural beauty and loveliness, and comprises some of the most beautiful water stretches and picturesque landscapes, for which that vast portion of northern Ontario is becoming so famous.

Here are lakes and winding rivers and islands innumerable; water absolutely soft and without any admixture of minerals. The scenic grandeur of hill and mountain, the placid beauty of the Lakes, the lovely rivers with their pellucid waters flowing through banks of delightfully variegated foliage, are not surpassed in any country.

Good hotel accommodation at reasonable rates. The Wawa at Norway Point accommodates 300 people. It is modern in every respect. Hot and cold water in every room. In addition to the numerous bathrooms on each floor, there are forty private bathrooms in connection with suites.

ITALIAN OFFICER ORDERED TO DULL METAL FITTINGS

Priceless Pictures in Venice Have Been Transferred to Florence to Guard Against Loss in Bombardment

LONDON, April 14.—An order is printed in The Military Journal of Rome directing all Italian army officers to dull the metal on their uniforms and the scabbards of their swords. This is a measure which usually is adopted on the eve of war.

After receiving a warning from the Minister of War that in case of mobilization the public schools could be used to house troops, the municipal council met Monday night to discuss what measures would be taken in such an emergency. It was decided to have school sessions continued in hired buildings, substituting women for male teachers who would be called to the colors. It also was decided that so far as possible street cars and other public utilities would be operated by women, provided mobilization resulted in a shortage of male employes.

The Cabinet Council yesterday decided several important military measures, the nature of which is withheld, but they are undoubtedly connected with Italian intervention in the war, which any Austro-German effort now is absolutely powerless to avert.

I am informed from an authoritative source that negotiations have been successfully initiated between the allies and Italy as a prelude to the settlement of various questions which it is necessary to decide before the intervention comes.

The most important of these questions is that of a Serbian port on the Adriatic. This has been practically solved and Italy's rights fully recognized, aspirations guaranteed and the protection of her interests assured.

The time when Italy will join the allies is not far distant, but it is not likely to be prolonged beyond the beginning of May.

It is possible that intervention may be announced when Parliament reopens on May 12, although, according to the Constitution, the King is entitled to declare war, the Parliament's approval not being necessary.

The Paris Temps says the Italian Government has removed all the art treasures from the museums and churches in Venice to Florence, in the belief that an Austrian fleet would bombard Venice if war is declared. The newspaper says the transfer took place at night in order that the population might not be alarmed.

More Men Applied Than Were Needed

made daily and when three negatives [illegible] discharged as "cleared."

The examinations of the men of the regiment are made in the Board of Health room in the police station building.

Residents in the vicinity of No. 2 or Octavia Street School need have no fears of the use to which that building is to be put. Only those men who have supposed to come into contact with a man put under suspicion will be kept there until examined to see whether they are carriers. The men who will be there will be healthy men.

The men at the fair grounds are taking their usual drill. They have something of the hospital diet along with their meals, which includes milk. Their food is supplied them by the army service corps and soldiers carry it up in tin boxes.

Kingston, April 13—This afternoon General Lessard inspected the 26th Battery, and was delighted with the class of men Major Hall has under his command. The general left the city with his orderly at 3 o'clock.

With the Battery Boys.

KINGSTON, April 13.—The work of the 26th Battery has changed materially in the last few days. The route marches are shortening, the foot drill is completed, and now merely the march. Sergeant-Major Penny of the R.C.H.A., has had the Battery in hand and "dummy" guns are being used in the absence of the real article. We have been given the entire artillery drill since Saturday morning, and for the remainder of the week will be perfecting our work. The new drill has caused considerable fun. The guns—a piece of scantling on wheels followed by the waggon a similar contrivance — are pulled by the men themselves.

Riding "Shank Mare."

In order to get the proper formation on the field privates have been pushed in to commanding positions, and in most cases as they are supposed to be mounted, they have to work at the "double" to swing into position when a change of formation is called. One day you may be a sergeant-major, and gallop around on the field on "shanks' mare;" you feel the importance of your position and get cheesty, but pride goeth forth before a fall, because next morning you may be a gunner, and in the afternoon degenerate into a horse, and with a brother equine yank an imaginary 18-pounder around the field. We are getting along nicely with our signalling, and most of the men can send and receive, but speed must be procured with practice. We still have rifle drill, and actual work on cannon to learn. The drivers are improving daily.

In the Field of Sport.

Our first effort in the field of sport was rewarded with success when we trimmed the 2nd Company, 21st Regiment, Saturday afternoon, 12 to 3. Our team lined up: catcher, D'Arcy Smith; pitcher, aTit; 1st base, W. G. Smith; 2nd base, Galloway; s.s., O'Donohue; 3rd, Wilson; l.f., Price and Armstrong; m.f., O'Gorman; r.f., Audre. The team will enter the Kingston Senior City League if they can get in.

On Wednesday night we will play the Senior Y.M.C.A. team a game of basketball, but as we are shy on shoes and have to wear fatigue trousers and an army shirt, we are somewhat handicapped. We have physical exercise every morning, mixed in with our route march. A lot of the boys are laid up with colds. The weather has not been any too agreeable and the barracks is rather a drafty place. The officers are trying to arrange better accommodation for us.

The 21st are expected to leave shortly. They have been here since October and are a well drilled body of men. We will move into their quarters when they depart. The cookes slipped over a good one on a learned Varsity student the other day, when he sent one of the men who was detailed for fatigue duty up onto the roof to paint the lightning rod. He was armed with a flowing brush and a cup of flour and water.

Will Perturb The Air Says Count Zeppelin

PARIS, April 14. — Count Zeppeling statement to a representative of the Constance Nachrichten: "Our air fleet now comprises 1,366 units, of which 36 are dirigibles. We have had far heavier losses than anticipated, but July 15 we are to deliver 15 airships of greatly-perfected type, each being armored and capable of carrying two tons of explosive. With these we shall be able to undertake safely London expeditions in the thickest fogs and on the blackest nights.

"We contemplate an excursion to London, not simply a reconnaissance like our recent Paris success, but a veritable war edition. We shall attack London with two squadrons of five dirigibles, regardless of possible losses. But we don't expect to undertake this great aerial attack until all new units are ready. That will be about August when the great offensive ordered by the Kaiser takes place. We shall employ a new process causing atmospheric perturbations which will make it impossible for the enemy machines to cross German lines without dropping like flies."

Apply Cream in Nostrils To Open Up Air Passages.

Ah! What relief! Your clogged nostrils open right up, the air passages of your head are clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffing, mucous discharge, headache, dryness—no struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh is gone.

Don't stay stuffed up! Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Ely's Cream Balm is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer has been seeking. It's just splendid.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—While I have no desire whatever to keep up the discussion between Elder Johnston and Miss Lilian S. Ward of Cameron, yet inasmuch as she persists that the quotation from Pastor Russell's paper by Mr. Johnston is not correctly quoted, I wish to say that I know of at least five persons who have seen the quotation from the paper sent to Mr. Bebee, and all have stated emphatically that the said quotation is exactly word for word as Mr. Johnston gave it. This is beyond doubt the truth and Pastor Russell does claim in that paper that his "Scripture Studies" are "the Bible in an arranged form"—"practically the Bible itself." The Russellites, of course, don't like this thing to get out on them. We would advise them to be a little careful next time, and particularly Pastor Russell, himself, who is the responsible person for the quotation in the "Watchtower."

Hoping that this will be final, I remain,

Yours for the truth,
Eye WRness.

LIBERAL SUGGESTIONS REGARDING SOLDIERS' VOTES REJECTED

Hon. Mr. Doherty Flatly Turns Down Amendment That a Commission Be Appointed to Go to the Front and Take the Vote

OTTAWA, April 14.—The House in committe of the whole spent the entire day and evening upon the soldiers' vote bill. The measure will no doubt get through committee stages and come up for third reading to-day Judge Doherty, the Minister of Justice, has been slowly piloting the bill through committee representing the Government in the many debates of the day, in which Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. Wm. Pugsley, Hon. Frank Oliver and other leading Liberals participated.

The discussion was desultory throughout. The strong point insistently urged by the Opposition was the necessity of votes in the field being taken under the direct supervision of a Government commission. Mr. Pugsley suggested a commission of three, one to be selected by the Prime Minister, another by the leader of the Opposition, and the third by these two, or in case of their disagreement, by the Chief Justice of Canada. He said that Parliament could not impose any duties upon officers of the British army. In this connection, he also suggested that the whole bill be referred to a small committee.

Judge Doherty, on behalf of the Government, rejected the commission idea, but declared his willingness to incorporate almost any amendment that might be suggested, which would not destroy the principle of the proposed legislation. It was of no use, however, he said, to propose a smaller committee unless the Opposition [illegible] that a commission must be appointed. In this connection the Minister stated that the section in the reprinted bill providing for the sending of scrutineers abroad would be withdrawn.

Mr. Verville (Maisonneuve) pressed for an amendment to the bill which would permit railway men to appear before the deputy returning officer and cast their votes either on election day or on the day previous to the election.

After some discussion the amendment was declared out of order.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier made the point that the oath to be administered to the soldier by his commanding officer would have no legal effect. If it was a false oath, he could not be prosecuted for perjury. This was conceded by Judge Doherty, who insisted that administering the oath would bind the conscience of the volunteer even though no penal sanction attached thereto.

Mr. Turgeon (Gloucester, N. B.) thought the bill should go over until the next session. If the measure were pushed through at this time it would give notice to the country that Canada was on the eve of a general election.

Many minor amendments were suggested and accepted by the Government and Judge Doherty amended section 2 of the bill, which relates to the vote in the field in several respects. Indeed so many changes were made although nearly all of them were of little importance, that Mr. Pugsley described the bill as "kaleidoscopic."

Mr. Pugsley offered an amendment providing that the bill should not become operative so far as voting at the front was concerned unless and until it was approved by the British Secretary of State for War. This the Government refused to accept after a prolonged discussion. Notice was given that the same amendment would be moved on third reading.

[illegible] waste paper unless it did meet with the approval of Lord Kitchener. He suggested that the election be deferred until after the war, even though an amendment to the B. N. A. Act be required.

Section two containing nine clauses and dealing with the voting outside of Canada was then adopted.

Battery For Submarines

Edison Can Preserve Life for 100 Days in Diving Craft

NEW YORK, April 14.—It was announced yesterday, on behalf of Thomas A. Edison, that a new form of storage battery is being made for the United States submarine L-8, under construction at the Portsmouth, N.H., navy yard, which will do away entirely with the chief danger now existing in the operation of submarines—the danger of the crew of chlorine poisoning. Other improvements are claimed for the new battery, among them being the lengthening of the vessels under sea cruising radius to 150 miles.

It is claimed that in addition to eliminating the peril of chlorine poisoning the submarine could remain submerged for 100 days without danger of asphyxiation to the crew.

Miller Reese Hutchison, chief engineer at the Edison plant in Orange, N.J., who made the announcement, said that the danger of chlorine poisoning was eleminated by the substitution of a potash solution for sulphuric acid, which is used at present in the batteries. The potash, he said, would purify the air in the submerged vessel, absorbing the carbonic acid gas exhaled from the lungs. The lead lining of the hard rubber battery jars, Mr. Hutchison said, also will be dispensed with. The only metals in the new batteries will be nickel and steel. The batteries have been tested for two years, it was said.

Big Report on Land Scandal Is Complete

OTTAWA, April 14.—The remaining reports of Commissioner T. R. Ferguson were tabled yesterday, and they contain a mass of evidence concerning the alienation of the natural resources of western Canada under the late administration. One report deals with the trafficking in Indian lands by three Government officials, Frank Pedley, James A. Smart and W. J. White, in which they made $84,000 profit out of Moose Mountain Indian Reserve lands.

The commissioner states that hundreds of blank tenders were sent from Ottawa to Toronto to be filled in, and then returned to the department, where nearly all were accepted. It is stated that Pedley, then deputy superintendent-general of Indian affairs; White, immigration inspector, and Smart, deputy minister of the interior, had formed a partnership for acquiring and re-selling Indian lands, which were offered for sale by the Government by tender. A. C. Bedford Jones, a Toronto lawyer, tendered for them and held the lands for them. A deed of trust, providing for this, said that it was inexpedient that they should tender in their own names.

THE PRICE OF BREAD ADVANCED IN LONDON

LONDON, April 14.—It has been decided by the master bakers to advance the price of bread, beginning next Monday, to 11c per quarter loaf. A quarter loaf is about four pounds.

"The Wonder Car"

You will have only yourself to blame if you are "talked into" buying an "unsuitable" or a "theoretical" Car.

The two commonest mistakes made in buying an automobile are—First, Buying a car not suited to your needs.—Second, Buying a car that has not passed the theory stage.

The first mistake—buying an "unsuitable" car—is perhaps made even less often than the second. But for your own sake study your needs sensibly, just as you study your household needs, and buy a car you can afford to enjoy—a car you will have pride in, and yet one that will not be a "ghost of reproach" to your good sense.

The second mistake—buying a "theoretical" car—is perhaps the sadder mistake of the two—because when you have made this mistake, you have on your hands some engineer's or designer's untried theory, instead of a tried, known, successful car. And you have paid a price that, put in the right car, would never have been a reproach—but would have bought an automobile of real pride and joy.

It is because we see these two mistakes being constantly made—because we see sensible people being constantly talked into these "automobile fiascos" that we boast so much about the record of the car we sell—The Maxwell.

38,000 happy satisfied Maxwell owners are driving 38,000 handsome streamline Maxwell Cars to-day—at an up-keep cost that any man of any standing can afford, and at an original cost that is simply a practical investment.

200 Maxwell Cars Every Day

Twelve hundred a week, five thousand a month. That is the actual output of "The Wonder Car" right now and constantly increasing.

Not bare promises that cannot be kept, but actual deliveries to Maxwell Dealers.

Stop! Think a moment. There must be something back of a production so great. There must be the hearty approval and confidence of the public in the car they buy and the car must merit it all.

26 Maxwell cars every hour of the business day. Yes, that is just what the public are buying, and when you order a Maxwell, you get one the day you want it.

Back of each Maxwell stands one of the greatest and most efficient organizations in the industry, and one strong enough financially to insure you against the purchase of an "orphan car" and to give you actual deliveries of a wonderful car on the day you want it.

The Maxwell Company's Guarantee of Service to Maxwell Owners

No other automobile is backed by a more reliable service than that guaranteed every Maxwell owner. Scores of Maxwell dealers in every part of this country are always ready to give expert advice—to make adjustments and to supply new parts at reasonable prices.

This splendid Maxwell Dealers' Service Organization is perfected and completed by the great Maxwell Service Station in Windsor, Ont. The main offices and factories of the Maxwell Motor Company in Detroit, U. S. A., are within comparatively short distance of many points in Canada. This in itself means rapid delivery of replacement parts to Canadian Maxwell dealers and owners. Maxwell Service is one of the great advantages enjoyed by Maxwell owners.

Order a Maxwell from us now, and when you want it delivered, we will give you your car—not an excuse on delivery day

THE WORLD OF SPORT

The International League is The Belgium of the Baseball World

The May issue of the Baseball Magazine has an article with the significant title "The International League, the Belgium of the Baseball War." The article shows that while the majors and the Federal League have been fighting the minors have been paying the freight.

To quote from the article:

The International League was once great, respected, prosperous. Her clubs were composed of players but little inferior to the major league standard. The salaries she paid her leading stars exceeded those which many major league players are receiving.

But one short year ago and the International League represented a capitalization of well over a million dollars. Her eight franchises could not have been purchased for that amount. Charles Ebbets refused an offer of $135,000 for the Newark franchise, and Newark was by no means the most valuable of the franchises in that league.

The Innocent Bystander.

The International League, like Belgium, wanted no baseball war. Like Belgium its one supreme need was peace.

And, like Belgium, the storm burst with its greatest fury on the International League. At Baltimore, the largest city in the continent outside the major leagues and much larger than some within the ranks, the perseverance and ingenuity of Owner Dunn had built up what was generally conceded to be the most powerful club in minor league history. But then came the Federal League and the entire population of Baltimore welcomed the invader, forsook the banners of their one-time favourites and let the Baltimore International club drift on toward bankruptcy. At the end of the season the International, making a virtue of necessity, abandoned Baltimore utterly to the invader and transferred the franchise to Richmond.

At Buffalo, another great stronghold of the league, the invaders, while they failed at so sweeping a victory, gained the lion's share of the patronage. Another paralyzing blow was the establishment of a third Federal League club in a position to draw from both Newark and Jersey City, thus shattering the standing of the league in the east. In Canada the effects of the mighty European conflict must at least be felt, and there is a general disposition to believe that this effect will be sufficient to wipe out the narrow margin of profit there and leave the International with the remnant of its circuit in Providence and Rochester, with the new and doubtful acquisition of Richmond.

Big Fellows Predict Disaster.

The International League is making a game fight, but the odds are hopelessly against it. Naturally the owners and backers are willing to admit defeat. But their future is dark in the extreme.

Within the past few weeks I have talked with several magnates of the major leagues. One of them said: "Whether or not the International League will start the season I will not say. But this much I can say, if they start, it will never finish," cogently. "The International League" cogently. "The International League," he said, "is dead and merely waiting for someone to bury it." Rather scant comfort in these statements for a league that has always been conspicuously loyal to the majors.

MAJOR LEAGUES START THEIR SEASON TO-DAY

American League.

Boston at Philadelphia.
Chicago at St. Louis.
New York at Washington.
Cleveland at Detroit.

National League.

Philadelphia at Boston.
St. Louis at Chicago.
Brooklyn at New York.
Pittsburg at Cincinnati.

The major league season of 1915 will open this afternoon with games in eight cities. Pittsburg, Cleveland and Brooklyn are the only towns that will not have games in their home parks. Since Brooklyn plays the Giants at New York, that is nearly as good as a home game for the Dodger fans, so that only Pittsburg and Cleveland will be among the slighted.

Barring the possibility of bad weather to-day's games should provide some interesting baseball, particularly in Philadelphia, where the Athletics, American League champions of 1914, clash with the Boston Red Sox, who are called to win this year.

Eddie Collins will make his bow with the Chicago White Sox in St. Louis against the Browns. Bill Donovan pilots the Yankees against Walter Johnson in Washington.

Sherwood Magee, acquired from the Phillies, will play for the first time with the world's champion Boston Braves in Boston against his old club. Roger Bresnahan does a similar trick, making his bow as manager of the Cubs against the Cardinals, whom he once led. In New York there is a civic rivalry between the Dodgers and the Giants. Pittsburg, without Firstbaseman Konetchy, who jumped to the Feds, meets Cincinnati, which is reinforced by Catchers Ivy Wingo and Charley Dooin, Outfielder Tommy Leach and Infielder Ivan Olson.

A large number of sporting writers—in fact, nearly all of them—express the opinion that the Red Sox are almost certain to win the American League pennant and that the Braves excel every rival in the National League. The consensus seems to be that Boston will have a little world's series all to itself this year. Washington is expected to provide the stiffest opposition to the Red Sox, and the Giants are figured to be the closest rivals of the Braves.

Brantford's 1915 Players

BRANTFORD, April 13.—With possibly one or two exceptions, the Brantford Canadian League team will be chosen from the following players:

Catcher, "Matty" Lamond and Harry LaCroix; pitchers, Del. Chase, Nickel, Eddie Taylor, Lester Worfel, Ed. Peck, George Young; first base, "Rube" Deneau; second base, Wagner, R. Kuhn and another; shortstop, Fried; third base, Mike Mullin; outfielders, "Buster" Burritt, Long, Cooper and Carey. Lamond and Taylor have thus far failed to return signed contracts.

The men behind the application for a charter for the newly-organized Brantford Baseball and Amusement Company have received intimation from the Assistant Provincial Secretary that the application will be granted on condition that no liquor or gambling be allowed.

Pennant Club Met

The newly organized Pennant Club had a most enthusiastic gathering last night in the basement of Murray St. Church, when it was decided to enter a basketball team in the Church League, following the request of Mr. Carson of the Y.M.C.A. On Tuesday evening of May 4th, Mr. Keys will give one of his famous lectures, when the club will provide an enjoyable evening for their many friends. They are also going to have a carpet ball team fit to meet any other team, which they will challenge in a few weeks. This newly formed club is growing weekly, having applications for membership at each meeting.

Postal Facilities.

"Look in them pigeonholes and see if you've got a pound of butter for me, Hiram."

"Butter?" echoed the postmaster. "That wouldn't be among them pigeonholes. I keep all that mail in the ice box."

FINALS IN BASKETBALL LEAGUE THIS EVENING

The play-off in the Basketball League between the winners of A and B divisions will take place to-night, when the Excelsiors will meet the Collegiates. The Collegiate boys have made a good showing right through the league, and they should give the top-notchers a good game. It is hardly expected that they can beat them, but they are in hopes of holding them down to a close score.

Another big attraction on the card will be an exhibition game between Cressmans and the Veterans. The old Veterans, winners of the first league, have organized again, and as Cressmans are strengthening their team, one of the best evening's entertainments for the lovers of the indoor sport will be on to-night. The Veterans are getting in shape to meet the Excelsiors next week, so to-night will be a good chance for the fans to see the two teams working out.

Admission—Silver collection.

A big group of the Collegiate students are planning to be on hand to cheer for their team.

First game starts 8:15.

CITY LEAGUE NOTES

Manager Vic. Fowler had some of his Classic "rookies" working out on the Market Square yesterday. Some people were inclined to blame the squad for stopping the town clock, but after looking them over decided that stopping anything wasn't their strong point.

The Thistles have already been hit by the war, losing three men whom they were counting on. Harold Hill, who caught for the team for several years, is going to the front with the 39th Battalion as a lieutenant. Harold Morrow has enlisted with the Canadian Remount Depot, and "Merry" Huycke, one of the club's pitchers has also heard the Empire's call. Geo. Minorgan, team-mate of most of the Thistle boys, is already at the front with the First Contingent, so that the Thistles are well represented in the khaki-clad ranks.

The East City team will take some beating this year. They not only have a good team, but they have the advantage of the united backing of the city, all of whom are not only pulling for, but also working for the team. And with Dan McCabe at the helm, the East City's should not be lacking in knowledge of the fine points of the game.

Mayor Baller wants it understood that he is only bench manager of the Empires. His Worship says that he can't cover enough ground to catch the team, but intimates that he will be able to cover ground all right when the Radial scheme gets working perfectly.

The Thistles will meet on Friday night for organization purposes, and election of officers.

By the barring of the Marathons, the fans are deprived of the opportunity of seeing Vic. Fowler and Knut Belting make a joint attack on the umpire.

To The Electors Of No. 4 Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

It has come to my notice that reports are being circulated that I am to withdraw from the contest, and also that I am running in the interests of the C.P.R.

I wish to state that I have no intention of retiring, and that I am in the contest to the finish; also I am not controlled by any corporation or private individual, and am a candidate as a private citizen, and if any business happens to come up between the city and the C.P.R., I am prepared to [illegible]

Soliciting your vote and influence, I remain,

Yours truly,
W. S. DODDS.

To The Electors of The North Ward

I am a candidate for alderman in the North Ward caused by the resignation of ex-Alderman William J. Johnston.

If elected I will give my time and careful attention to the ward and the citys' business and interest. My platform briefly is as follows:

1. Day work in preference to contract work.
2. I would insist on corporation work being done by local labour.
3. Municipal ownership of the street railway in conjunction with the Hydro-Electric system.
4. Municipal ownership of the Otonabee Power Co.
5. Aggressive campaign for the securing of new industries.
6. An equal and equitable assessment of properties.

I have had considerable experience in business affairs and will give my best efforts if elected to the city's business.

Yours truly,
W. T. Holloway

Life Insurance In a Crisis

Every time a great Crisis occurs LIFE INSURANCE has an opportunity to show what a giant of trength it is. Tremendous burdens are placed upon its shoulders, but it never shirks, never hesitates or groans.

When the Titanic took its awful plunge, carrying 1500 human souls into the deep, thousands of widows and orphans were left throughout the world. LIFE INSURANCE accepted the burden without the quiver of a muscle, and spread its protection around the Globe.

When seven years ago the financial world was labouring under an attack of indigestion due to undigested securities, and people could not get even their own money outof the Savings Banks, LIFE INSURANCE furnished spot cash to its policy holders upon application.

To-day when a gigantic struggle wages across the Seas and it is difficult to get loans from banks or money lenders, they find the solution again in LIFE INSURANCE.

It is to-day saving thousands of men all over the world, not only embarrassment but actual failure.

LIFE INSURANCE protects your wife and family.
" " will meet their needs when you are gone.
" " is always a resource.
" " contributes to your estate.
" " increases your savings.
" " increases the savings habit.

Money invested in LIFE INSURANCE is sure to come back to you or your family.

Your credit is made better by the amount of LIFE INSURANCE you carry.

The need for LIFE INSURANCE to every man with a family is as fixed as the daily need for bread, and that need is well met by a policy in THE SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA.

A case concerning Robert Maxwell Hamilton versus Robert Miles Hamilton, in which defendant is suer as executor of the estate of the late Hon. HEADACHY, COSTIVE, BILIOUS,—"CASCARETS"

To-night! Clean Your Bowels and End Headaches, Colds, Sour Stomach.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system, is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.

Bombs From the Zeppelins Did Little Damage

Four Million Men Are Battling in the Passes

THREE PEOPLE HURT AND BUILDING DESTROYED

Sum Total of Destruction as a Result of Zeppelin Raid on Several English Towns Last Night—Missiles Tore Great Holes in the Ground.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

NEWCASTLE, April 15—Two men and one woman hurt, one building destroyed by fire and three damaged was the sum total of destruction wrought by one of Count Zeppelin's aerial dreadnoughts in a 35-minute cruise over the Tyne district. Eleven towns were attacked with explosive and incendiary bombs, according to information gathered by the Newcastle officials to-day. The Zeppelin hurled at least thirty destructive missiles that tore great holes in the ground or spurted into flame, and then it fled eastward across the North Sea, while machine guns and rifles rattled harmlessly at the sky. Newcastle was the objective of the Zeppelin raid, but it escaped entirely. England knew of an instant after a telephone message from Blyth to the north was sent out long after a long-expected warning "A Zeppelin is coming."

REACHED BLYTH FIRST.

It appears that the Zeppelin reached Blyth from across the North Sea at about 8:10 o'clock, passed over Blythe and Cramlington, and proceeded to the neighbourhood of Seaton-Burn.

Bombs were dropped on several of the villages passed by the airship—five at Choppington, three at Wallsend, two at Seaton-Burn, and one at Bedlington.

The airship passed near North Shields and Newcastle. While neither city was visited, both took precautions against attack by extinguishing the electric lights.

AN AREA OF EIGHT SQUARE MILES.

Most of the points attacked are contained in an area of about eight suare miles, resting on the. River Tyne, between Tynemouth and Newcastle. Blyth is eight miles north of the Tyne and Bedlington three miles inland from Blyth. Cramlington and Seaton-Burn are villages between Blyth and Newcastle. Wallsend and Hebburn are on opposite banks of the Tyne, four miles east of Newcastle.

Blyth is a seaport of Northumberland, at the mouth of the River Blyth, nine miles southeast of Morpeth. The population is between 5,000 and 6,000.

Wallsend, also in Northumberland, is noted for its colleries. It is situated four miles northeast of Newcastle, and is named from its being at the end of Hadrian's Wall. Many Roman relics have been found there. This town has a large population.

Cramlington lies north of Newcastle and about midway between there and Morpeth.

The Tyne, a northern English river, is formed by the confluence of the North and South Tyne, a mile northwest of Hexham, and flowing thirty miles east of the sea between Tynemouth and South Shields. The Tyne flows through a rich coal-mining region, and on its banks stand Newcastle, Gateshead, Jarrow, North and South Shields, and other places, where there are great iron and steel industries and shipbuilding works.

Horse Said to Be A "Dead Beat"

Peterboro' County Farmer Bought a Horse That Was Grey on the Head

TORONTO, April 14.—Cases arising out of horse dealing are becoming pretty numerous in the Toronto Police Court, and Thomas Beard, of 107 Brunswick avenue, was Tuesday charged with obtaining $75 from Allen A. Payne of Warsaw, Peterborough County, by false pretences.

Complainant said he saw an advertisement for the sale of a mare in foal to a prize-winning Clyde. He wrote, inquiring about the animal which was offered to him for $100. He wrote offering $75 if the vendor would guarantee the mare sound in wind and limb, and free from faults. The warranty was given and a cheque was sent for $75.

"What did you get in the way of a horse?" asked Crown Attorney Corley.

"It was a dead beat, it was no good," replied complainant. "It was grey on the head, but the rest of her colour was brown. She was also very old and lame and worth nothing."

Remanded for a week for a veterinary examination of the mare.

"Bail will be $1,000," said the Crown Attorney. "I have about seven complaints in regard to him."

Wheat Once Cost Only $3.85 In Time of War

An interesting table of comparisons of grain prices in Britain during the past three hundred years has been compiled at Ottawa. The figures are of commercial value just now in view of the European war. Thoroughly to appreciate the significance of the price fluctuations in these tables many factors would have to be considered, as, for instance—especially for the earlier years—the changes in the purchasing power of money and—more recently—the large increase of population and of the volume of production.

This year Britain has been paying in the neighbourhood of $1.60 per bushel for wheat. This price can most properly be compared with the preceding two decades, when values for those years themselves averaged around 91c. As other factors, including those mentioned above, are fairly constant excepting the factor of war, the latter may be considered chiefly responsible for the considerable prace disparity existing.

There has been only one struggle anything like parallel to this one in modern history, and that was the Napoleonic wars. In reviewing war prices then and now, however, the consumer may be thankful that he is living at the beginning of the twentieth century rather than in the early part of the nineteenth. From the years 1799 to 1820 wheat never went below $1.79, while the average in 1810, 1812 and 1813 was well over $3 per bushel. The high record was reached in 1812, when $3.64 was not merely the high point, but the average through the year. The low record price for all these three centuries was paid in 1894, when the average for the year was 69c. Only twice between 1641 and 1685 did the price go below $1. Since the latter year the average went below $1 twenty-four times. Britain's overseas Dominions, the United States and the Argentine have been chiefly responsible for the new and lower basis prevailing for twenty years back up to the outbreak of the war. Relatively speaking, the price of wheat is not yet high for war time. With greater production promised for the coming season, the consumer need not have had dreams of 1812 prices, with wheat at $3.85 per bushel.

STRUGGLING FOR THE USZOK HEIGHTS

Petrograd Sanguine as to Outcome of Carpathian Battle One Thousand Prisoners and Two Guns Captured

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, April 14.—The battle of the Uszok Pass is still fiercely raging, the fighting favouring the Russians, who capture daily thousands of prisoners, and are steadily advancing. The conflict chiefly centres around the summits of the Uszok Pass, which are still in the enemy's hands. East of the Uszok Pass the Russians captured a village and are threatening the Austrian right in this region.

In Bukowina and eastern Galicia the Austrian offensives have failed, and the German attacks on Kozieuswka have so far met with no success.

A TREMENDOUS STRUGGLE.

The Petrograd correspondent of The London Daily Telegraph cables:

struggle that the war has yet produced. It is computed that the forces of the two opponents number something like 4,000,000 men.

Evidently on both sides the process of concentration on this portion of the frontier is still proceeding. It is impossible to say when it will stop. All the other sections of the line have became absolutely subordinate to the stupendous fight for the ridge separating Galicia from Hungary.

Any show of aggression made by the enemy elsewhere is probably with the sole object of the detention of Russian troops that might be thrown into the scales in the Carpathians. It seems certain that the issue of this battle will have great influence on the future course of the campaign. The results may be decisive.

The adoption of the offensive by the allies on the west front is lending Russian material support, as it prevents the Germans from drawing reinforcements from that quarter. Rus sia, by accepting battle on so large a scale at the present moment, when general quiescence was anticipated on this front, is lightening the immediate task of Great Britain and France.

It is likely that the Germans, by the transfer of their troops to Hungary, hope by a violent blow temporarily to exhaust the strength of Russia and so leave themselves free to turn their attention to Belgium and France with redoubled energy. It is believed that Germany has absorbed all her strategic reserves, and can reinforce one front only at the expense of the other.

Very sanguine views have been expressed here regarding the outcome of the Carpathian battle. The Russians are still either advancing steadily or repulsing all attacks with enormous losses to their enemy. The daily toll of prisoners has mounted to thousands. The battle now involves practically the entire ridge between the Sanek-Homonna railway on the right and the Stryj-Munkacs on the left.

PENETRATING INTO HUNGARY.

A few miles west of the former line the Russians, who were pushing forward to the south of Stropko, penetrated about twenty miles of Hungarian soil. Eastward from the point where the railway crosses the range to the immediate vicinity of the Samber-Uzgorod railway they hold the southern slopes just beneath the ridge. The summits of the Uszok Pass, by which this line is carried through the Carpathians, are apparently still in the hands of the Austrians, but are being most stubbornly contested.

A desperate attack by the Austrians on the main ridge south of Velsestje, which was captured by the Russians a day or two earlier, is evidently intended to prevent the Czar's troops from reaching this line and so securing the Uszok Pass from the rear. Six miles east of the pass, however, the Russians have occupied the village of Valsekonizi and are evidently threatening the right of the Austrian local position.

East of Uszok the battle line lies north of the Hungaro-Galician frontier. Here the Germans have resumed, so far without material success, frantic assaults upon Kezlouwka, which bars their progress on the most direct road to Lemberg.

French 55 Centimetre Guns Will Batter Forts

NEW YORK, April 14.—Besides an account of an experience with a German submarine, the Niagara, of the French line, which arrived in port yesterday morning from Havre, brought some information about the latest developments in French artillery. Some of the new guns have yet to be used against the Germans.

Not until the French army has driven in the German salient that has its apex at St. Mihiel and thrown back the Teutonic line to the edge of the fortresses of Metz will the latest guns be tried out, said an officer of the Niagara. The details of its construction have been carefully guarded, but this product of the most skilful artillery designers of France has not been kept altogether a secret from the French people.

The cannon will be of a calibre of 55-centimetres—as compared with 43-centimetres for the now famous German siege howitzer — and the shell which it will hurl into the defences of Metz weighs approximately two tons. It stands about five feet high. In its most recent tests this siege gun has developed sufficient power to throw the shell about fifteen miles—a range sufficient to outshoot any artillery that so far made its appearance in the land fighting.

It is on guns of this size and a little smaller that the French artillery makers are now centring their attention. The labour of supplying a sufficient number of lighter guns and the ammunition for them has been completed. In the case of the wasplike seventy-five millimetre rifle the artillery makers have supplied General Joffre with about four hundred pieces to an army corps, and France at present has forty corps in the field and in reserve.

Fighting on a basis of 100,008 rounds a day being used by the light artillery at present active, there is sufficient shell and shrapnel to last for about one year. With this great reserve supply, the French gun makers now are devoting their energies to the manufacture of larger and more devastating units, and in this new activity can be read the contemplated move of France against the more strongly fortified positions of the German second line of trenches and other fortifications.

Canadians Have Splendidly Upheld the Traditions of Empire

LONDON, April 14—Gen. French's report, issued to-day, pays a high tribute to the Canadian troops.

"All the Canadians serving in the army," he says, "have splendidly upheld the traditions of the Empire, and have proved a great source of additional strength to the forces.

"On February 15 the Canadian division began to arrive. I inspected the division which was under the command of Lieut.-General E. A. H. Alderson. They presented a splendid and most soldier-like appearance. They were in good physique, hard and fit. I judged that they had been well trained and were quite able to take their places in the line of battle.

Since then the division has thoroughly justified the good opinion which I formed of it. The troops of the Canadian division were first attached for a few days by brigades for training in the third corps trenches, under Lieutenant-General Sir William Pulteney, who gave me such an excellent report of their efficiency that I was able to employ them in the trenches early in March.

"During the battle of Neuve Chapelle they held part of the line allotted to the first army. Although they were not actually engaged in the main attack, they rendered valuable help by keeping the enemy actively employed in front of their trenches."

Auto and Wagon In a Collision

PORT HOPE, April 1—Yesterday afternoon an automobile collided with a farmer's waggon. The car was overturned and the occupants thrown out. Mr. Bert Tinney, who was in the car, received a bad gash on the head, necessitating his removal to the Port Hope hospital. The accident ocurred about five miles north of here. It appears that the driver of the car was turning out to pass the vehicle in question when the car struck the hind wheel, causing the spill.

Glasgow has the largest individual cyanide factory in the world.

EXPOSITION VISITORS INTERESTED IN BEAUTY AND WEALTH OF DOMINION OF CANADA.

The Grand Trunk Railway officials in charge of the Company's Exposition pavilion report to headquarters in Montreal that over 2,500,000 people have already visited the big fair at San Francisco.

Thousands of these visitors have admired the showing of Canada's exhibits made by the Grand Trunk and there is a constant stream of inquiries from people who contemplate future settlement in the Dominion, or desire to return East via Prince Rupert and the Yellowhead Pass.

The Grand Trunk Building was complete and ready for the official opening on February 20th. Since that date the Grand Trunk cinematograph hall has been crowded several times each day with visitors eager to see portrayed on the screen the beauties of the Canadian Rockies, Mount Robson, and the newly opened up districts along the Grand Trunk Pacific line.

DROWNED LANDS CLAIMS ARE DISCUSSED

'One of the Sufferers" Threatens to Expose a Scandal

Bobcaygeon, Ont., April 12.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Allow me space in your valuable paper to make a few comments on a certain article in your issue of the 8th April in which a certain farmer condemns Mr. Burnham's actions with regard to drowned lands, which are caused by the government dams. I might say that we had hoped for something better from Mr. Burnham and I for one must give the writer of the article credit for what he has said, but I can see that the writer is not aware of all the facts in connection with this matter. Why ask us to go to law with the government when they have been paying some at different times this last year and a half. The writer of this knows of six different parties quite near him on both sides of him who have been paid, notwithstanding the fact that their claims are not near so strong as a great many of the rest of us. Why advise us to take the matter to court and pay those other parties without any hesitation. There appears to be a nigger in the fence somewhere, as all some of them had to do was to write their representative in Parliament a personal letter and the money came at once, while there are others who have written and written and there was a promise made by the department that would be settled without delay this past spring. I do not intend, Mr Editor, to give any names at present, but when the right time comes I will be the means of having the whole thing exposed, and it certainly will not be any credit to our present government. If we are not paid, it certainly will be the meanest scandal in the history of Canada. If nobody was paid we could not find so much fault. But the way this matter is being handled it certainly looks as if the government or representatives who have influence with the government, had favourites. The government is apparently agitating a rebellion by their actions in this matter, as everyone should be used alike regardless of their politics.

Yours truly,
One of the Sufferers.

Hairs Quickly Vanish After This Treatment

(Helps to Beauty)

Science has aided in simplifying the banishing of hairy growths from the face, and according to a beauty specialist, the most effective treatment yet devised consists of applying a delicious paste to the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes. The paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. When this paste is removed and the skin washed every trace of hair has vanished. Be sure to get real delatone.

"THE GRELL MYSTERY"

By Frank Frost

As Foyle passed on, he observed a man hurrying towards him and recognized Malley. Abruptly the superintendent turned his back and, leaning his arms upon a low stone wall, seemed lost in contemplation of a little churchyard. When the divisional inspector had passed on, Foyle resumed his walk.

It cost him some little trouble to find the road in which the motor-car had been left derelict. The sodden earth still retained wheel tracks, and it needed but a glance to show that the car had been removed but a few hours before. He walked on till he came to the place where Green had found the strip of brown cloth, which was fairly plain to find, for the footsteps of Green and the other police officers when they followed the trail ceased there as Grell's had done.

Here he drew a small pocket-compass from his waist-coat pocket, and pressing a spring released the needle. As it came to rest he thrust aside the hazel bushes and plunged in among the undergrowth. Now and again he consulted the compass as he walked leisurely forward, wet branches brushing his face and whipping at his clothes. For the brief portion of the [illegible] progress, but at last he was forced to abandon this and return to the milder portion of the wood. He was making a detour which he hoped would lead him to the back of Dalehurst Grange.

At last he could see a clear space ahead of him, and in a little, sinking on his knees on a bank, was peering downhill to an old-fashioned, Jacobean manor-house, from whose chimney smoke was lazily wreathing upward. Between him and the house a meadow sloped for a hundred yards, and the back of the house was bounded by an irregular orchard.

"Pity I didn't think to bring a pair of field-glasses," muttered Foyle, as his eyes swept the place. "I can't tell how those mullioned windows are protected. Well, I may as well make myself comfortable, I suppose."

A little search rewarded him with a great oak tree, and in the fork of a branch twenty feet high he found an easy seat from which he could watch the house without any great risk of being seen himself. Immobile as a statue, he remained till long after dusk had fallen and a steady light appeared at one of the windows. It was, in fact, ten o'clock, and the light had disappeared when he dropped quietly to earth and, with quick footsteps, began to cross the meadow to the orchard.

Under the fruit trees the detective moved slower and held his stick before him, softly tapping the ground as though he were blind. He had not taken half-a-dozen steps before the stick touched something stretched about a foot from the ground. Stooping, he groped in the darkness.

"A cord," he muttered. "Now I wonder if that is merely a precaution against burglars or——" and, stepping over the obstacle, he went on cautiously feeling his way. Twice more he found cords stretched across the grass, so that an unwary intruder might be tripped up, but his caution enabled him to avoid them.

The walls of the house loomed before him. He stepped to the nearest window and tested it. It was fastened tightly, nor could he see inside. Foyle had no taste for the haphazard, and would have liked to be certain of the run of the house. But one window was as good as another in the circumstances. Te worked deftly with a glazier's diamond for a while, and at last removing one of the diamond panes of glass thrust his hand through and undid the latch. The window swung open, and the superintendent sat down on the grass underneath and swiftly unlaced his boots.

In another two minutes he was inside the house, and pulling an electric torch from the capacious pocket of his Norfolk jacket, he swept a thin wedge of light about the room. It was furnished as a sitting-room, but there was no reason for examining it minutely. Foyle pulled open the door and moved into a [illegible] corridor, which made his stockinged feet almost unnecessary.

Door after door he opened and noiselessly examined with the aid of his single beam of light. By the time he had come to a finely carved, old oak staircase, he had a rough idea of the plan of the house as far as the ground floor was concerned. The upper floors demanded more caution, for there the servants might be sleeping.

The first door that Foyle tried after the landing was locked. Pressing his ear to the keyhole, he could hear the deep, regular breathing of some one within.

Twice he tried keys without success. At the third attempt the bolt of the lock gave. He pushed the door back and there was a crash as a chair which had been wedged behind it was flung to the floor.

A woman shrieked, and Foyle drew back into the shadow of the landing, cursing his luck. Then there came the sound of rapid footsteps. The superintendent drew himself together, and his muscles grew taut as a man came running. A light blazed up as the man passed through the doorway. Foyle caught one glimpse of a square-faced man fully dressed and acted rapidly. He dashed forward and his hand twined itself round the other's wrist.

"Mr. Robert Grell, I believe," he said suavely.

CHAPTER XLVII.

When Heldon Foyle leapt forward, his whole body had been keyed for a struggle. Whatever resources Grell might have in the house the detective stood alone, so far as he know. It was possible that Green might have arranged to have the place watched, but, on the other hand, it was unlikely that he would do more than have the roads patrolled and the railway station warned. To have watched the Grange so effectively that no one could get away from it would have taken a score or more of men, and even so the position would have made it impossible for them to have remained hidden.

All this Foyle reckoned on. He had hoped to find Grell and to catch him unawares, perhaps asleep. That project had failed, and when the man had replied to the woman's scream, Foyle had deemed the boldest course the safest. Grell had wrenched himself round, the first of his free hand clenched, but he made no attempt to strike. An elderly woman sat up in bed, surprise and terror in her face. Just behind Foyle stood two maids in their night attire, shivering partly with cold, partly with fright, their eyes wide open.

"That is my name," answered Grell, speaking as quietly as Foyle himself. "I can guess who you are. If you will wait just a moment while I assure these women that there is no need for alarm I will come down and talk with you. You had better go to sleep again, Mrs. Ellis. And you girls get back to bed. This is a friend of mine."

The maids retired reluctantly and Foyle linked his arm affectionately in that of Grell. The alarm in the housekeeper's face did not abate.

"But who—who is he?" demanded Mrs. Ellis, extending a quivering finger in the direction of the superintendent.

Grell lifted his shoulders. "Mrs. Ellis is my housekeeper here," he explained to Foyle. "The maids didn't know I was in the place. It's all right, Mrs. Ellis. I'll just have a chat with this gentleman. Don't you worry."

He closed the door as he spoke. Foyle's right hand was resting in his jacket pocket. "I may as well tell you, Mr. Grell," he said, "that I am armed. If you make any attempt at resistance——"

"You will not dare to shoot," ejaculated Grell smilingly. "Oh, I know. We're in England, not in the backwoods. Come downstairs and have a drink. I don't want you to arrest me until we've had a talk. By the way, may I ask your name?"

Despite himself the superintendent laughed. If Grell was a murderer he certainly had coolness. But there might be some trick in the wind. He was keenly on the alert.

"Foyle is my name," he answered — "Superintendent Foyle. I am afraid I shall have to refuse that drink, and as for the talk, I may presently determine to arrest you, so anything you say may be used as evidence. Of course you know that."

"Yes, I know that. No objection to my having a drink, I suppose, even if you won't join me?"

"Sorry to seem ungracious, but even that I can't allow."

"Ah. Afraid of poison, I suppose. Just as you like. Well, here we are. If you will let go my arm I assure you I will neither attack you nor try to escape. Then we can sit down comfortably."

They had entered a room whose walls were lined with books and pictures, apparently the library. Foyle shook his head at the other's request. Of course it might be all right, but the man was a suspected murderer. He would accept no man's word in such a case. "I am afraid it is impossible, Mr. Grell," he said gently. "I am anxious not to seem harsh, but you see I am alone with you and my duty. . . . If, however, you will allow me, I have a pair of handcuffs."

Wide as his experience had been he could not recall a notable arrest taking place in this way. He had fallen in with Grell's mood for many reason, but he chuckled to himself as he made the polite suggestion of handcuffs. Grell did not seem to mind. His self-possession was wonderful. Foyle reflected that it might be reaction — the man was possibly glad the tension was over.

"By all means, if it will make you easier," he said. Foyle slipped the steel circlets on his wrists, not with the swift click that is sometimes written of, but with deliberate care that they should fit securely, but not too tightly. The juggling feat of snapping a pair of handcuffs instantly on a man is beyond most members of the C.I.D.

Grell selected a chair and Foyle, watchful as a cat, sat by him. "May I ask what you intend to do now?" queried the former.

"Wait till daylight and then send one of the maids with a message to the nearest police station," replied Foyle. "Would you like a cigar? I can recommend these."

He proffered his case and Grell took one. He held it between his fingers with a whimsical smile. "Do you mind cutting it and giving me a light?" he asked. "It's rather awkward with these—er—ornaments."

Germany Refuses Bulgarian Loan.

PARIS, April 14.—Germany has failed to pay Bulgaria the portion of the loan she agreed to remit April 1, [illegible] to a Sofia special to The Petit Parisien, which says it is believed Germany distrusts the Bulgarian attitude and suspects she already has decided to join the allies

When it was announced in February that negotiations had been completed for a loan of $30,000,000 to Bulgaria by German and Austrian bankers, it was stated that no political conditions were attached to the arrangement, but it was regarded as significant that Bulgaria had refused the proffer of a similar loan made several months before by the powers of the triple entente.

Wrong Idea of Deity.

TOKIO, April 14.—Addressing a well-attended meeting of Japanese and foreign Christians held in Tokio yesterday, to inaugurate an evangelistic movement preparatory to the International Sunday School Convention of 1916, the Premier made reference to the situation in Europe when he said: "There must be a wrong conception of the Deity in Germany; otherwise this war could not have come."

A New Year's Prescription

By SARAH BAXTER

"Good morning, Jim."

"How are you, Tom?"

Tom Gooding looked uncomfortable. He had come into his friend Tom Olcott's law office for a purpose, but he seemed to have difficulty in announcing it.

"Jim, I want you to get me a divorce," he said at last.

"What?"

"A divorce. Edith and I can't get on together any longer."

"Whose fault is it?" asked Jim.

"Whose fault is it? Why, it certainly isn't mine. The truth is Edith is continually making mountains out of molehills."

The lawyer looked grave and said:

"The smaller affairs of life are more in keeping with a woman's nature than a man's. How do you know that you're not making molehills out of mountains?"

"What do you mean?"

"Why, it's quite likely that you have very important faults that you do not consider at all. Perhaps you are unconscious of them, and yet they may be breaking up your home. Now, this is a good time to remedy them. The new year is at hand, when we all expect to take a fresh start. New Year's [illegible] you a rule of action for the next twelve months, and if you adhere to it you won't want me to secure a divorce for you."

"What is it?"

Instead of replying the lawyer wrote something on a bit of paper, put it in an envelope, sealed it and wrote on it "To be opened New Year's morning." Then he handed it to Gooding.

The next morning Mrs. Gooding appeared at the law office. She did not know of her husband's appearance there the day before, and Olcott did not mention it.

"Jim," she said, "it's all up between Tom and me. I want you to get me a divorce."

"Is there any special accusation you have to make against Tom?"

"Only that he rubs me the wrong way all the time."

Olcott looked up at the ceiling.

"How long will it take to separate us?" she asked.

"No time at all. All you have to do is not to go back to the house."

"I mean legally."

"Oh! You wish to marry again?"

"No such thing. Why do you say that?"

"Because I see no other advantage in your case in a legal separation. Do you still love your husband?"

"Of course I do! It's on his"—

"Never mind his faults. Would you prefer to keep your home as it is if you could get on together?"

"Certainly."

"Edith," said the lawyer after a pause, "tomorrow will begin the new year. I will give you a rule for your guidance, and if you will follow it I guarantee that you won't need a divorce."

"What is it?"

Olcott wrote a few words on a bit of paper and, after sealing and addressing it as he had in the case of her husband, handed it to her, saying:

"Take that, and, as the doctors say when they give you a prescription, if it doesn't cure you let me know and I'll begin divorce proceedings."

New Year's morning was pleasant, and after breakfast Tom Gooding said to his wife:

"Sweetheart, don't you think, this being a holiday, we'd better make some sort of a trip?"

"The very thing. Holidays are best utilized. To sit around at home doing nothing is depressing."

So they arranged for an outing.

The best day when the husband was about to go to business his wife asked him if he would go to a dry goods store, six blocks out of his way, and buy her a spool of thread of a certain hue. He bristled up, but suddenly surprised her by very affably agreeing to oblige her. But he was too late. With a kiss she said that she had no business to trouble him with such small [illegible] on his mind. She was going to the shopping district anyway and would attend to the matter herself.

These are samples of many such instances by which petty quarrels were avoided, and every day showed an improvement in the couple's domestic relations. Often when they bristled at some fancied cause for dispute one or the other would suddenly stop as if having remembered something and swing around like a weather cock from the bitter north to the balmy south. Scarcely a month passed before one day Mrs. Gooding put her arm about her husband's neck and said:

"Tom, I've a confession to make."

"What is it, sweetheart?"

"Last December I gave up trying to live with you and went to Jim Olcott for a divorce. He wrote me a prescription. I began to practice it on New Year's day. It has shown me that our troubles were all my fault."

"What was the prescription?" asked the husband, opening his eyes very wide.

"'Look within yourself.'"

Tom Gooding's only reply was a hug and kisses. Not a word about having received the same prescription himself.

And yet there are those who claim that man is the nobler animal.

AFRAID OF SEPARATION.

Officers and Men of 32nd Battalion Are Feeling Anxious.

LONDON, April 14.—Officers and men of the 43nd Canadian Battalion, which since its arrival in England has been stationed at Shorncliffe, are considerable uneasy concerning their future. Briefly the fear is that the battalion is in danger of being virtually disbanded in order that its present personel shall be used as reinforcing drafts for battalions already on active service on the continent. The prospect arouses little less than dismay among both officers and men. The 32nd battalion was raised in Saskatchewan and Manitoba from the cavalry regiments.

The great proportion of the men enlisted at the personal invitation of individual officers, or at any rate were attracted to service in the battalion by the prospect of serving under officers whose leadership they valued for special reasons. It is felt if members are used merely for filling gaps in other battalions the feeling of esprit de corps created within the last five months will be destroyed at a stroke while the future will hold out the rather cheerless prospect of men serving under strange officers and officers commanding a strange set of men.

Further List of Casualties.

LONDON, April 14.—The casualty list issued yesterday of further losses in the fighting last month at Neuve Chapelle is much smaller than those given out previously. It totals 295 men, of whom 119 were killed and the remainder wounded.

This is the seventh list of losses given out by the British authorities on the Neuve Chapelle battle, and it brings the total of killed and wounded up to 7,835 men, of whom 2,412 were killed.

Blow To Christian Scientists.

ALBANY, April 14. — Party lines were cast aside yesterday when the assembly defeated the Thorn bill, intended to exempt Christian Science practitioners from the state law requiring physicians to be examined and licensed. The vote was 44 ayes to 79 nays.

British Slain By Own Guns.

LONDON, April 14. — Rumors ascribing heavy British loss at Neuve Chapelle to some extent to British artillery are finding their way into print.

It is said the artillery was directed to fire at certain points, but owing to a deranged field telephone service and a land fog the angle of fire was not raised when the impetuous troops took the German lines.

FIVE KILLED AT LERWICK.

Fire Starts Explosion of Gun Cotton In Naval Station.

LONDON, April 14.—At least five persons were killed and more than forty hurt, many of them fatally, in the terrible explosion at Lerwick yesterday. A press agency despatch from there says:

"An explosion occurred in a store near the fish market. Fire followed, causing a tremendous explosion of gun cotton in the naval station. Many houses were destroyed and the fish market gutted by fire. Four men and a boy were blown to pieces and more than forty hurt.

"A military investigation is under way."

French Fire On Gaza.

PARIS, April 14. — The Marine Ministry issued the following statement yesterday:

"Monday a battleship, in connection with French seaplanes, bombarded the important Turkish encampment in the neighborhood of Gaza."

The bombardment of Gaza marks the development of hostilities in a new quarter. Gaza is in southern Palestine, near the Egyptian frontier.

The city lies two miles inland from the Mediterranean and 49 miles southwest of Jerusalem. The Turkish encampment near this city may have been established in connection with the advance of Turkish troops across the Sinai peninsula to the Suez Canal.

HEART WOULD PALPITATE.

HAD WEAK and

DIZZY SPELLS.

Palpitation of the heart is one of the most common of all heart troubles. The heart will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over the system accompanied by weak and dizzy spells, making you feel that you are surely going to die. When you feel this way what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic; one that will strengthen the weak heart and build up the nerve system. For this purpose we know of nothing that can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to try your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better within a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble ever since childhood and finds great relief in using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, April 13.—Signs that pointed to a falling off in cash demand more than wiped out today an early advance in the price of wheat. Quotations at the close were weak, ½c to ⅞c under last night. Other leading staples, too, showed a net decline—corn ½c to ¾c, oats ½c to ⅝c and provisions 5c to 25c.

Speculators were not slow to draw the inference that sales of wheat to go into store here implied an absence of cash demand. Whether or not the conclusion was correct, the fact remained that the impression created was bearish, regardless also of whether the sales to go to store were merely for effect or not. There could be no doubt either that a number of active houses were well supplied with selling orders in both May and July options, after the market at the start had taken a somewhat decided upward swing, owing to Liverpool advices of a threatened decrease in stocks.

Increased offerings from the country pulled down corn. At first the market evinced a disposition to advance with wheat, but it did not take much of a bulge to invite selling pressure.

Favorable weather for seeding and growth brought about an easy feeling in regard to oats. Shipping inquiry was not of an urgent kind.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, April 13.—Wheat futures opened ⅛c to ⅛c up, oats ⅛c higher, and flax ⅝c to ¾c up. Trading was quiet and of light dimensions, the attitude taken by the members being one of waiting.

There was an excellent demand for spot wheat on all grades, but little enquiry for opening of navigation. Spot No. C.W. was in demand. Offerings of wheat and oats for the opening were fairly heavy. Buyers of spot wheat and oats were principally exporting houses. While there was an enquiry for export, there were no sales reported.

Total inspections Monday, 606 cars, and in sight today 300 cars.

Wheat futures closed ¼c higher, cash ⅛c to ⅛c up, oats ⅝c up and flax unchanged.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, April 13.—There was considerable enquiry from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat for both May-June and July-August shipment, but owing to the scarcity of ocean grain room and the fact that most of the bids were 1c to 1½c per bushel below cost, no business resulted. The local trade in coarse grains continues quiet and prices are unchanged. The foreign demand for spring wheat flour was better, and a little more business was done for May-June shipment, but the local market is still very quiet. Demand for millfeed continues good.

There is an easier undertone to the butter market, owing to the larger arrivals from the United States, which have relieved the temporary scarcity.

Demand for cheese is fair.

An active trade continues to be done in eggs at steady prices.

Farm and Dairy Market Report

TORONTO, April 13.—The people of Canada have become so used to business prosperity, that they refuse to allow their business spirit to remain long under a shadow. As the spring opens up, trade continues to improve and wholesale houses report that the volume of orders is increasing. Just how much of this development is due to psychological causes, and just how much to real improvement in conditions, it is difficult to estimate. The aggregate reduction in rents throughout Canada, however, must have been considerable, and much money that previously went to pay the landlord will now be turned into productive channels. Money, too, that at this time last year was flowing into real estate investment, is now being used for more productive purposes, hence the country is adjusting itself to the new conditions.

The farm produce market and estimates as to the length of the war must be considered together. Market authorities evidently look for several months of war yet and grains are firm, cattle firm and butter slightly higher. May shows a slight decline; eggs and poultry are firm.

WHEAT

Foreign markets seem to have purchased ahead of their requirements and demand for wheat is now quieter. It is noticeable, however, that on every decline in the market, agents of European firms or governments have immediately started to buy and put the price back again. The United States winter wheat crop is now an important factor in quotations. The increased acreage is estimated at 10 per cent, but with a normal crop this would not give a greater yield than the bumper crop of last year. There is also the dangerous season of its growth still to go through, and the situation in this quarter is bullish. No. 1 Northern is now quoted $1.60; No. 2, $1.59½; No. 3, $1.56½.

COARSE GRAINS

Oats are firm and changes in other lines of coarse grains have been to lower levels. This may be done in some measure to the near approach of the season of light consumption. Quotations are as follows: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 69c; No. 3, 67½c; No. 1 feed, 67c; Ontario oats, 57c to 60c; corn, 82c; peas, $1.75 to $1.80; buckwheat, 82c to 83c; rye, $1 to $1.10; barley, malting, 73c to 76c.

The Montreal market quotes as follows: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 67½c; extra No. 1 feed, 67½c; local oats, 64½c to 66½c; corn, 81c to 82c; barley, feed, 80c; malting, 90c to 92c; buckwheat, 72c.

MILL FEEDS

The market tends to easiness. Bran is now quoted $26 to $27; shorts, $28 to $29; middlings, $33 to $34; feed flour, $38 to $39. At Montreal bran is quoted $26; shorts, $28; middlings, $33 to $34; moullie, $35 to $40.

Prices on red clover and timothy have declined 50c to $1. Quotations a cwt. in wholesale quantities are as follows: Red clover, No. 1, $20 to $21; No. 2, $19 to $19.50; No. 3, $17; alsike, No. 1, $19.50 to $20.50; No. 2, $17.50 to $18; No. 3, $16; timothy, No. 1, $10.75 to $11.25; No. 2, $9.25 to $9.50; No. 3, $8.50.

POTATOES AND BEANS

A contemporary remarks that it is a fine thing that potatoes are so plentiful and the price so low, the low quotations in question affording some relief in the high cost of living. The situation may be a rosy one from the consumers' viewpoint, but the producer who is selling potatoes at less than cost of production, will not be greatly encouraged to increase his output this year. Ontario potatoes still sell at 60c a bag and New Brunswicks at 65c, car lots, on this market. Montreal reports increased consumption, induced by low prices and good quality. The price runs about 60c to 65½c in car lots.

Beans here are quoted: Primes, $2.25 to $2.35; hand picked, $2.35 to $2.50. At Montreal an easier market is reported, with three-pound pickers at $2.20 to $2.25 and one and one-half pound pickers, $2.10 to $2.12½.

EGGS AND POULTRY

The consumption of eggs continues to increase to a very satisfying degree, and the market holds steady in spite of large receipts. The price throughout the country runs from 18c to 19c, with the price to grocers in central cities, 21c to 22c. Many eggs are going into storage for keeps, which is an indication that egg dealers are not looking for lower quotations.

Poultry quotations average as follows: Chickens, live, 13c; dressed, 17c to 20c; fowl, live, 10c to 11c; dressed, 15c; ducks, alive, 11c; dressed, 17c; turkeys, live, 14c; dressed, 20c.

DAIRY PRODUCE

We intimated last week that some dealers were looking for higher prices in butter and the market in the meantime has certainly improved. Receipts at Montreal now run 1,400 packages a week, as against 3,977 packages for the same week last year and a consumptive demand of 7,000 to 8,000 packages. Were it not for the butter brought in from Chicago and laid down at Montreal at a cost of 31½c to 32c, duty paid, the better market would be much higher than it now is. Choice new creamery commands 30c to 30c at Montreal; finest field creamery, 30c to 30½c and less desirable grades, 30c to 30½c. The Trade Bulletin remarks that new creamery butter is just 6c a pound higher than at this season last year. On the Toronto market fresh creamery prints command 30c to 32c; solids, 29c to 30c; dairy prints, 27c to 28c and bakers, 26c to 26c.

The ruling quotation on fodder cheese is 17½c to 17¾c. Such quotations, it is believed, will stimulate the new [illegible] and already a number of factories [illegible]ed in several sections of Ont[illegible] the main bulk of the present exp[illegible] is in American cheese, and as th[illegible] time American cheese predomina[illegible] on the English market, a situation b[illegible] about by reduced consumption at home due to depressed conditions.

LIVE STOCK

Heavy weights seem to be in disfavor nowadays, and are not taken readily. However, all here found a market, and the last day was cleaned up with no stock to carry over. The general tendency has been for higher levels. The week started strong, with advanced quotations, a fair demand from butchers and a light run. Prices were cut slightly on the final market of the week but on the whole stayed higher than on the final market of the week previous. In addition to fat cattle stockers were moving with a fair demand, as some buyers [illegible] follows:

Shipping steers, $7.40 to $7.75; handy choice steers, $7.40 to $7.75; good butcher steers, $7.15 to $7.40; com to med., $6 to $7.15; heifers, $6.75 to $7.40; choice cows, $6.25 to $6.75; cows, good, $4.75 to $6.25; butcher bulls, $4.50 to $7; feeders, $6.25 to $7; stockers, $5.75 to $6.75; canners and cutters, $3.75 to $4.75.

Choice milch cows are finding a ready sale at $65 to $90. Common and medium command $40 to $65 and springers, $60 to $90. Calves are quoted $3.50 to $10 and bob calves, $3 to $6 each.

Light lambs are in even stronger demand than a week ago, but spring lambs are becoming more common and are priced down accordingly. Quotations: Lambs, light, $7.50 to $12; heavy to medium, $7.50 to $9.50; culls, $7 to $7.50; spring lambs, each, $5 to $9; light ewes, $7 to $8; heavy sheep and bucks, $5.50 to $7; culls, $3 to $4.25.

Swine, whether being purchased for army supplies or not, are decidedly strong and now quoted $8.65 to $8.75 f.o.b. country points.

LONDON, April 14.—Further losses in the Canadian battalion in the fighting last month at Neuve Chapelle are announced in the casualty list issued today. The total is 295 men, of whom 119 were killed and the remainder wounded.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT.

Timely Comments and Comparison of Prices

Spring is here. So is seeding-time on the farm. Therefore the markets of the next month will not be so well attended as were those of the last two or three weeks. Saturday's market was a bumper one. Butter and eggs predominated, the former at 34c to 35c, the latter at 18c to 19c, though the weaker price prevailed. Chickens sold from 50c to 80c apiece, according to size, but few were offered.

Potatoes continued firm at 50c to 55c, and were fairly plentiful.

Maple syrup maintained its price of 40c a quart, and is dwindling in quantity.

One load of hay brought $24 a ton.

Pork was fairly plentiful at 12c for the front and 13c for the hind quarters. A small quantity of veal brought 12c to 14c.

There were several lots of small pigs offered at $7 a pair.

Apples continue to decline both in quantity and quality.

Wool and hides have taken another drop.

Granulated sugar is down 15c a hundred.

Sirloin steak has advanced to 25c a pound.

Speaking of eggs reminds me that some vendors have not yet come to realize that they should present their goods for sale in a style that will attract buyers. There is nothing quite so disgusting as dirty eggs; yet some farmers persist in bringing them to the market in a filthy condition. It is a lamentable thing to see how blind some people are to their own interests.

The two greatest potato-growing countries in the world are at war, Germany and Russia.

Without potatoes and sugar beets Germany to-day would not be the ambitious, warring nation that she is, for on these she has built up her wonderful agricultural industry which formed the basis of her industrial and commercial prosperity.

Germany uses potatoes to enrich her light soils and sugar beets for rendering productive her heavy soils.

THIN FOLKS WHO WOULD BE FAT

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal amount of fat the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength-giving, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect is remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Caution:—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous indigestion and general stomach disorders, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.

Was at The Battle of Mons

a letter a short time ago from his nephew, Gunner F. Hogarth, who has been with an English regiment at the front since the war started.

In part he says:

"At last I have your address. I have often wanted it, so I could write a line to you in your far distant home. We have been having a very hard task out here. I have been here since the beginning of the war, and was also at Mons, which will always live in my memory. How our boys did fight. Even if we did retreat we left our stain behind which the Germans will not forget. We held the position three days against 20 to 1. We fought as we never fought before, never thinking of retreating until our generals realized it was useless with such a small force and to save us getting completely done up he gave the order to retreat. It was with a downcast heart we retreated. It was like one eternal "hell," shells bursting all around us. We were firing away for all we were worth. Every two seconds a shell left our guns. It is too terrible to talk about, but when we did start advancing we never forgot old scores, and we put it into them. Our officers are wonderful. They are not frightened to work with the men. They do nearly the same work as the ordinary soldier, and have the same rations. There is no question about who will win this war. It may take a long time, but we will win.

We have some of your contingent out here, and they are a real good lot of fellows."

BISURATED MAGNESIA

An absolutely harmless antacid in all cases of fermentation and souring and belching of food, gas, indigestion, etc. A teaspoonful in a fourth of a glass hot water usually gives INSTANT RELIEF. Sold by all druggists in either powder or tablet form at 75 cents per bottle.

With towers 600 feet tall a new wireless station to be erected near Manila is expected to receive messages all the way across the Pacific ocean.

The latter is cut all in one piece and forms the top of the sleeve at the same time. ### PRINCE RUPERT SENDS MILLION POUNDS FISH TO EAST EACH MONTH.

Some striking figures showing the remarkable growth of the fishing industry in the coast waters of Northern British Columbia have just been made public at Prince Rupert by the fishery committee of the city. Over nine million pounds of halibut, in addition to salmon, cod and herring, was landed there in 1914. Since the inauguration of through service between Prince Rupert and Winnipeg over the Grand Trunk Pacific it was claimed that a million pounds of fish has been shipped east each month to the Prairies, Chicago, Montreal, New York, etc. The catch was worth more than half a million dollars in 1914 and in the present year it will be even larger and more valuable. Many communities are now able to secure fresh sea fish for the first time and all markets obtain it in much fresher and better conditions than heretofore.

The fishery committee of the city was entertained by the Prince Rupert Board of Trade to a luncheon served on the Grand Trunk Pacific Steamship "Prince George," when the results of the year's work were made known, and Mr. G. W. Nickerson, the chairman, announced that new facilities for handling the trade were planned. Prince Rupert, it was shown, was now in the centre not only of the deep sea, but of the salmon fishing industry, which provided an annual revenue of over $2,000,000.

TRY THIS IF YOU HAVE DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the ger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

PLAN MANY SCHOOLS IN NEW G.T.P. DISTRICTS.

Splendid educational facilities are being provided for the children of settlers in the newly opened districts of British Columbia, near the Grand Trunk Pacific Transcontinental line. Dr. Robertson, Superintendent of Education for the Province, announces that during the present year two schools will be constructed at Prince George, the Grand Trunk Pacific divisional point, and a third school nearby. Schools will also be erected at other points, including Willow River, McBride and Vanderhoof. No community where an attendance of twenty children can be maintained will be left without a schoolhouse and teacher.

FAN EARNS $1,650.

Queen Mary's Gift to Red Cross Is Auctioned Twice.

LONDON, April 14. — The crowning incident of yesterday's auction sale at Christie's, in aid of the Red Cross Funds, was the sale and resale of a fan presented by Queen Mary. The production of the fan by the auctioneer was the signal for applause from the crowded room, and this increased in volume as the bidding rose rapidly from $50 to $950. At this figure it was knocked down, but the purchase, amid applause, at once offered it for further auction, expressing the hope that it would fetch more than she had given for it. Somebody began the second bidding for the Queen's gift at $500, and amid enthusiasm unusual in an auction room it went up to $700, at which price the hammer fell.

The much-coveted treasure was a tortoise-shell fan set with her Majesty's monogram in diamonds surmounted by a gold crown. Thus the Queen's fan realized $1,650 for the fund.

One of the simplest razors, patented by its New York inventor, consists of a comb into the back of which a blade can be set.

THE BEST TREATMENT FOR CONSTIPATION

The Experience of One Who Knows and Places Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills First

It is not difficult to secure a medicine that will effect movement of the bowels. To cure Constipation and the complications which arise from it is another matter.

Constipation of the bowels is usually preceded by torpid action of the liver. Hence it follows that if Constipation is to be cured the liver must be set right. And here lies the secret of the success of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They awaken the action of the liver and insure a good flow of bile, which is nature's cathartic. The liver, kidneys and bowels are invigorated and regulated, and the troubles with the digestive system disappear.

Mr. H. M. Bell, Innisfail, Alta., writes: "For some considerable time I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I have obtained through your firm. I suppose during my life I have used nearly all the best-known pills, as I have been subject to Constipation and digestive troubles. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I can honestly say that of all the pills I have tried nothing has suited me better — no griping—action always assured, and fine for the kidneys. This is how I have found them after a thorough test, and you may use this statement if you like."

This letter should convince you of the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, but there is nothing like personal experience. If you do not feel like risking 25 cents for a box, write to us for a free sample box, mentioning where you saw this advertisement. Put this medicine to the test when you have indigestion, constipation, biliousness, backache or kidney derangements. The results will soon prove to you the superiority of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

TWO MILLION ACRES OF AGRICULTURAL LAND FOR SETTLERS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

The interior of Central British Columbia has a vast area of rich soil, and enjoys splendid climatic conditions. It has hitherto been practically closed to settlement owing to lack of transportation facilities, but with the completion of the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway through to Prince Rupert, is now attracting attention from experienced cultivators, who realize the great possibilities of this new district.

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, while it has not an acre of agricultural land for sale, has just issued a comprehensive booklet of information for intending settlers, with a map showing the natural resources of the various localities. It deals with the Coast district of British Columbia, as well as the Central Interior and is called "Plateau and Valley Lands." Copies may be had free from Grand Trunk Agents.

Extra Large Crop

REGINA, April 14.—With an extra large area of land prepared for seeding to grain this year, and early seeding operations, the prospects are for an extra large crop in Saskatchewan. Official reports received by J. A. Among the places named were Aberdeen, Zelma, Junata, Ardath, Beadle, Biggar, Viceroy, Alberthethy, Cupar and Tregarva. Travellers also report that seeding has commenced at Francis, Radville and Baildon. Several farmers near Regina are arranging to start seeding immediately and some have already made a start.

MAY MONOPOLIZE TRADE.

London Chronicle Professes to Know Plans Regarding Liquor.

LONDON, April 14.—Probably no session of the British Parliament since the opening of the war has been awaited with keener interest than the sitting which will begin to-day. A "dry" Britain, unknown except for a period of two years 150 years ago, is not beyond the possibilities, but the Government has given not the slightest official hint as to what action may be expected in its undoubted determination to attack the problem of restricting the consumption of alcoholic liquors. Several days ago an Opposition paper published a forecast of the Government plan, which, it asserted, contemplated the prohibition of all liquors except light beer, which would be manufactured by the Government.

This prediction received some confirmation last night from a Government organ, The Evening Chronicle, which declared that the entire business of the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors is to become a Government monopoly.

Six hundred women had been given employment at the Board of Trade, Mr. Runciman added.

ACID IN STOMACH SOURS THE FOOD

Says Excess of Hydrochloride Acid is Cause of Indigestion.

A well-known authority states that stomach trouble and indigestion is nearly always due to acidity — acid stomach—and not, as most folks believe, from a lack of digestive juices. He states that an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach retards digestion and starts food fermentation, then our meals sour like garbage in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. We then get that heavy, lumpy feeling in the chest, we eructate sour food, belch gas, or have heartburn, flatulence, waterbrash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive acids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast while it is effervescing, and furthermore, to continue this for one week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousand of people for tomach trouble with excellent results.

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 15.—When the Commons assembled this morning for the closing day of the session, both sides were well represented to hear the statement of Premier Borden in connection with the work of the Public Accounts committee regarding war purchases and contracts.

Mr. Morphy, chairman, moved the adoption of the motions passed by the committee regarding further investigation into the purchase of horses, etc.

Premier Borden, whose motion was being put, stated that six or seven weeks ago the committee had commenced the investigation of matters which had not yet been reported by the auditor-general.

"We deemed it our right and our duty," declared the Premier, "to investigate and know if any fraud and irregularities had been practiced upon the government and the people of this country. One possible result of such a hourse, however, was that if any

LIEUT. REID INVALIDED HOME FROM BELGIUM IS HERE TO-DAY

Seized With Rheumatism Which Which Rendered Him Unfit For Duty—Is Visiting His Sister Mrs. F. C. Cubbitt, Reid Street.

RETIRED BEFORE PRESS

Lieut. C. H. Reid of the Montreal heavy artillery has been invalided home from Belgium with rheumatism and is visiting his sister, Mrs. F. C. Cubitt, 278 Reid Street. He arrived in Peterborough on the early C.P.R. train this morning, having crossed the ocean on the Grampian, and will make an indefinite stay in this city. Lieut. Reid enlisted with the first contingent with which he crossed the channel and went into action unil he was laid up with rheumatism. He was able to walk down town this morning, although still stiff and sore from his rheumatic attack, and this afternoon rested after his all-night train journey.

Lieut. Reid threw up advanced entanglements for the beenfit of reporters, and was proof against any turning movement, but the explantion was offered that he did not wish to be interviewed for the reason that he had instructions not to make statements to the press regarding his experiences. Lieut. Reid obeyed to the letter whatever advices he received in regard to the press and they must have been sufficiently stringent to leave no loopholes. Lieut. Reid is a former resident of Peterborough, and a son of the late Dr. Reid of Reid street, this city.

Sergt. Reed says that they have come into contact with a number of units of Kitchener's new army and remarks that the Canadian troops compare favourably in training, discipline, and especially in physique. The 22nd Battery, of which Capt. C. P. Fee of Peterborough is second in command, is housed in Moore Barracks, Shorncliffe.

Died At Belleville

Private Harry Nicholls, 2 Anson Avenue of the 57th Detachment of the 39th Battalion, Victim of Outbreak

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

The first death in any quota recruited in Peterborough for overseas service occurred this morning in Belleville, when Pte. Harry Nicholls, of the 57th detachment of the 39th Battalion, third Canadian overseas contingent died after a short illness from cerebro-spinal meningitis. Pte. Nicholls was taken ill with the dread disease only two days ago and sank rapidly. His condition was soon seen to be most serious and his parents were summoned to Belleville. They were with their son when he passed away at 4 o'clock.

The remains will be brought to Peterborough on the 5.30 G.T.R. train this evening and arrangements for the funeral will be announced to-morrow. The dead soldier will, it is expected, be buried with full military honours.

The late Private Nicholls was eighteen years of age and was born in England. He had lived in Peterborough for the past four years and was a member of D. Company of the 57th Regiment. Before enlisting he had been employed in the Auburn Woolen Mills. He was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Nicholls, 2 Anson Street, and is survived by his parents and five sisters, Julia, Nellie, Grace, Ada and Gladys, all living in Peterborough. He was a bright, likeable boy, a favourite both with the men of D Company of the 57th and with his comrades in the 57th detachment in the 39th Battalion. Capt. Lech, commanding officer of D Company, expressed deep regret when he heard the news today. "Pte. Nicholls was a member of D Company when I took it over," he remarked, "and he was a very popular boy."

Since the war broke out the unfortunate young fellow has been endeavouring to secure the consent of his parents to go. He wanted to enlist in the first and second contingents, but they persuaded him not to go, but finally consented to his enlisting when the call came for volunteers for the third contingent.

The deceased was a nephew of Mr. Wm. Whitnell who died suddenly a couple of days ago.

The local detachment for the Canadian Remount Depot will leave on the 1.30 G.T.R. train to-morrow afternoon for Kingston, where the depot is being mobilized. Peterborough's allotment to this unit had to be cut down to five men, although fifteen men had been previously accepted. A selection was made last night and the five men

Battery In Which Local Boys Are Receives High Praise

4th Battery C F. A. Complimented on Its Shooting — "We Have Raised the Dickens With the German Trenches" Writes Sergt. McNaughton.

A GRAPHIC LETTER

Edmund L. MacNachtan, of the 4th Battery, C.F.A., received by his father Lieut.-Colonel Neil F. MacNachtan, C.V.O., of Cobourg, is of special interest to Peterborough people, as it gives some vivid descriptions of the experiences of the 4th Battery in which many of the Peterborough artillery men are serving. Detailed news of the work of the artillery has been lacking, and this letter will be read with peculiar interest. The letter is dated March 23.

"I am up within a few hundred yards of our trenches. We have a 'forward gun' which is a pleasant little surprise for the Germans in case they should break through our infantry. In case we should open fire, it is a good deal of a 'forlorn hope.' We cannot come into action until after our own infantry have fallen back to a line of trenches beside our gun. This would allow the enemy to get within a very few hundred yards of the gun before we can fire. You can imagine how long we would last. The orders read 'To serve gun until ordered to retire, then retreat with dial sight, clino, and breech.' They should read 'serve gun until the crew is dead, then retreat.'

"There is a sniper very close to us. He was so close one night that we could hear the empty shells from his rifle click on the ground when he ejected them. He put me down on my face six times between the gun and the house we sleep in, a distance of probably two hundred yards, while I was mounting my guard. We have all had many narrow escapes from the brute, I have been out two or three times looking for him, but we cannot locate him. He has a mighty snug retreat wherever he is. We cannot see a flash from his rifle and only a very subdued report of his rifle, he probably has a silencer.

Battery Highly Complimented.

"The 4th Battery has been very highly complimented on its shooting by Colonel Morrison, we have raised the very dickens with the German trenches. We put a shell under one of their guns and blew it up. We fire over the heads of our Canadian infantry, some of whom have told us that the effect of our fire is wonderful. They see great stretches of the parapet blown away and the Germans scuttling in all directions for cover like rabbits.

"We celebrated St. Patrick's Day in great state. It was the biggest day's work we have had since we came up to this position. I was out here at the 'forward gun.' Quite a number of German shells burst close to us. There were four in particular, 'Coal Boxes' or 'Jack Johnston's.' One burst about forty yards beyond us, and one about twenty or thirty yards short, but dead 'on line' for our shack. Two others dropped unpleasantly near us, but failed to explode. We could hear the brutes coming long before they reached us. They make a dull sort of rumble like a locomotive. It is a creepy sensation to know that they have you in a 'hundred yard bracket,' have a line on you and you are waiting for the next round to blow you to pieces. However that 'next round' did not come. The one that burst short of us threw huge clods of earth over us in showers.

Shell Was Not Loaded.

"The 'pets' they fire at us are either six-inch or eight-inch, weighing ninety to 190 pounds and filled with high explosive. Thereby hangs a tale or rather a joke. One dropped across the road from our billet. This particular one fell between two infantry officers who were standing talking. The concussion or draught (or perhaps, pure scare), knocked one of them down, but neither was hurt, not even a scratch. We dug up the shell, which had gone fourteen feet into the ground, took the 'sting,' in other words the percussion primer off, and soaked the shell in water for two days before examining it. What do you suppose we found in it? Instead of the deadly high explosive compound we found one-quarter of a pound of ordinary black powder. They had forgotten to fill it. This shell goes back to Canada to be placed in Cobourg Armouries.

"They (the enemy) have the billet at the battery registered, and dropper five 10-pr. shrapnel on us the other day. You should see the place. The tile room is commicuous by its

Bullet Which Killed His Chum Passed Through Latter's Neck and Struck Young's Pt. Boy in the Breast—Note Book Saved Him.

AN EXCITING EXPERIENCE

Mrs. Wm. E. Brooks of Young's Point, has received the following vividly interesting letter from her son, Pte. Oswald Brooks, who is in France with the 57th detachment in the first Canadian contingent.

France, March 23.

Dear Mother,—Received your letter while in the trenches, and was very pleased to hear from you. Well mother, we have come out of the trenches, where we have been for four days. While in there we had some experiences. We had —— killed and two wounded. The first one killed was out of my section. It happened about 7 o'clock in the morning. We had just got the order for day duties, and were getting our breakfast. The fire was in front of our dug-out, and the bacon was frying when suddenly we heard the call "Stretcher Bearer" and we jumped up to see who was hit. We saw it was a fellow out of No. 1 section of our Company. They carried him into his dug-out; then we sat down in ours when suddenly a "bang" seemed to strike our dug-out. We all jumped up and my chum started to run out. He cried "Help" very weakly. Our Corporal called "stop him; stop him, he's hit!" I said, "so am I," and I opened my overcoat and felt, expecting to feel blood; I didn't feel any so I ran after my chum. He staggered to the Sergt.-Major's dug-out and collapsed. He was dead in about eight minutes. After being hit he bled profusely.

The poor fellow was shot through the neck. The bullet passed through him and struck me in the breast, a glancing blow. I had a large note-book about six by three inches in my left top pocket. It cut my overcoat, struck the book and glanced against the wall. We got the bullet afterwards and I have it now. The bullet struck me with some force. I thought for a moment I had it over the heart. I was so excited I tore open my coat and ran my hand in to see. However, a miss is as good as a mile.

We got sore on the "Alla Maus," as the soldiers all call the Germans, and we got sniping at them. That night I was on sentry and we heard them out fixing their wire entanglements. I pointed my rifle in their direction. Our officer sent up a star light. I saw them plainly and got a good "bead" on one and fired. I hope I got him. I only wish it had been the Kaiser.

We buried our poor chum that night, with honours, in one of the many French graveyards. He died while fighting for dear old Canada.

To show you that a joke will some times come true, here is an instance: When we were cooking the bacon, he said that he didn't have enough the morning before and wanted more this morning. One of the others said: "You are not going to have any breakfast this morning," he said, "I don't want any," and in an instant he had a bullet through his neck. When we were all bending over him he said, "I'm done for."

One of our officers said, "Oh, no, you're not." He said, "I am," and passed away.

Well, mother, I hope I come through safely, because I want to see you dear ones at home ones again. How is Claire? Can he talk very plainly now? I wish I was there to see him. Say, mother, send me cake and chocolates regularly, will you. It is certainly a treat to get something from home. Nothing seems to taste the same over here.

Well, dear mother, I must close now. Tell father I will write him in a day or two and, with love to all, I am

Your loving son,
Oswald.

To-night will be your last chance to see the Secret Seven. This picture beat all records at the matinee and night performance yesterday.

Owing to the large number that could not gain admittance at last night's performance, Mr. Clayton will show this splendid feature at 7, 8.30 and 10 o'clock to-night. I have run some wonderful features, but this is the daddy of all detective pirtures on the market to-day. Don't miss it. Come early to secure a good seat.

New York Central Train Is Held Up By Twenty Robbers $50,000 Worth Of Silks Taken

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER:

BUFFALO, April 15—Twenty masked robbers early to-day held up in true Western style a New York fast freight train, near Sanborn, Niagara County, and escaped with ten auto truck loads of valuable silks. The train was from Boston, bound for Chicago via the Michigan Central, at Niagara Falls. The daring of Engineer Morris Goss of Syracuse, in cutting out his engine, under fire, and running into Suspension Bridge, for help, prevented more extensive looting.

The train had slowed down in passing through Sanborn, at 2 o'clock this morning, when a man suddenly appeared on the tracks and waved a warning. Engineer Goss shut off his throttle and the train came to a stop. As it did so two men climbed into the cab and levelled their revolvers at the engineer and fireman. The train crew left the caboose to find out the reason for the stopping of the train, and these three men found themselves also confronted by two masked men, who shoved revolvers in their faces and ordered them to throw up their hands. The trainmen were then ordered to march up to the engine, and they went, guarded by the two revolvers of the bandits. The five men were lined up alongside the car and, while one kept them covered with a revolver, the other robbers busied themselves in breaking into the cars. While this was proceeding Engineer Goss escaped from the robber guarding the trainmen, and boarded the locomotive, which had been detached from the train. Under a shower of bullets he started the engine on its way to Suspension Bridge, where he got a force of railroad police and returned to the scene of the robbery. By that time the robbers had done their work, and had disappeared down the State road toward Tonowanda.

This is the most valuable freight train that is run over the New York Central lines. It is taken over from the Boston and Albany road and is destined for Chicago and other points west. It is estimated by railroad officials that the stuff stolen by the robbers consisted mostly of silk in bolts, and is worth fully $50,000. Despite the alarm which was spread all over the county and adjoining counties, no trace of the robbers is to be had at 9 o'clock this morning. The Buffalo police have all been warned to be on the alert and all the railway police have been ordered out on the job.

LOCKPORT, N.Y., April 15—The official report of the New York Central on the above holdup declares that the incidents mentioned therein are much exaggerated, though individual trainmen declare that the story is true. The official report says that no guns or autos were seen, and that it is not known yet whether the hold-up men got away with one dollar's worth or fifty thousand dollars' worth.

MORE STREET PAVING?

One chief point from which to regard street paving and street work generally, is that of providing work that will give employment. Never before has the need of employment been so urgent as at the present time. Unemployment presents one of two problems—either expending money on work that will give work, or expending money on charity; for we cannot allow our fellow-citizens to suffer from want. In case we decide upon [illegible] demoralize and pauperize a large number of citizens, destroying in many cases their self-respect and developing habits of dependence and lack of thrift, that will show their effects when prosperous times return as they are sure to do. If we spend money upon needed public works we shall be providing important public utilities, and at the same time be giving the employment so acutely needed.

These remarks are apropos of the project of extending the area of street paving. The City Council has decided upon paving Charlotte street west from Bethune street, and also decided to act upon a petition said to contain the names of ninety per cent. of the property owners directly interested, for extension of the Hunter street pavement. As regards the Charlotte street paving, there does not at present appear to be any considerable objection, but it is stated that a counter-petition against the paving of Hunter street, west from Aylmer to Belmont avenue, is being circulated. This counter-petition can only secure ten per cent. of the property owners, if, as asserted, the petition in favour holds ninety per cent. of the qualified signatories. Without any idea of dictating action in such a case, it may be suggested that the majority rule might reasonably apply, especially when we consider the accompanying conditions of employment provided, substantial advantages secured, and the improvement and beautification of the city.

Last night the Board of Works decided upon the construction of a sewer on Ware street. There were eleven of the residents in favour of it and eleven opposed. Here was a case where hesitation would seem justified; but the members of the Board felt that the improvement asked for was an improvement and necessary in the interests of the sanitary conditions of the street, and that as all the residents would get the benefit, those who asked for it should not be denied; and it was decided to build a sewer, a work that will give considerable employment and provide permanent advantages, that will have to be provided some time, if not now, the time when the distribution of a little money through civic public works will count more than at any other time.

Whatever action the City Council may take in regard to revising their decision to extend the pavement on Hunter street, we may be assured that their action will be influenced by considerations of the public interests.

INVESTIGATIONS.

Investigation into the conduct of public affairs, if undertaken and conducted in order to promote the public interest, is not only defensible but desirable. The investigation into Trent Canal management by Mr. G. Hayward-Bergmon, at a cost of thousands of dollars, had evidence of being conducted more in the interests of partisanship than of the public. He conducted what it is no libel to say was a partisan investigation; and his report reeking of partizanship, made very serious charges against officials. In pursuance of this report several officials or employees of the canal, were discharged or suspended. If they were guilty of wrong-doing the investigation, the report of it, and the subsequent "disciplining" was justified. But one may well question the bona fides of all these, when it appears that all of the "disciplined" officials with one or two exceptions, have for some occult reason, been restored to government favour and are to-day drawing government money, it may be for value received in service. But according to Mr. Ferguson's report all these men were only fit for condign punishment and unworthy of trust; and the chief offender was doomed by the partizan press to a prison call. Yet he is to-day, including a member of his family, said to be in profitable government employ. What of the thousands spent in the investigation, if its fruits, the report of the investigating commissioner, and the penalties are set aside? In taking this action does not the government admit that the investigation was a farce and the money expended wasted, from a public point of view, though the government may regard the money as well spent in that it went into the pockets of a faithful partizan and gained a momentary party advantage.

Now another Ferguson has been employed by the government at a cost of $13,000, or at the rate of $50 per day, conducting an investigation into the Department of the Interior under the Liberal regime. His report has been ready for presentation for some time, but it has been held back till the closing days of Parliament, when it cannot receive adequate consideration. As may be imagined the report charges irregularities, most of which have been discussed and disposed of in Parliament. It is possible that this Ferguson report may be as abortive of results, and as unjustified, as the other Ferguson report. Anyway, the investigation, and especially the report, were not dictated solely in the public interests, for Hon. Dr. Roche, present Minister of the Interior, frankly admits that the report was intended to offset the revelations of misconduct and "irregularity" in the purchase of war supplies under the present government.

This attitude is quite in line with the policy in this regard of Sir Robert Borden, the Premier. He justified [illegible] expenditure of his government, by the charge that the Liberal Government was extravagant; as if criminality could be excused because some one else in the past had been a wrong-doer. Sir Robert forgets, or ignores, the fact that he is the responsible head of the government, and that he and his government are to be held to strict account, and be judged by what they do, and not by what a preceding government may have done or may not have done.

The Government Risks National Unity in War-Work

The great voluntary recruiting campaign in London, England, has begun, with open-air gatherings in the suburbs. Military bands paraded the main streets. Fifteen hundred meetings will be held during the next fortnight. No doubt these will be addressed by men of both political parties. A general election is due this year but it will be postponed for patriotic reasons.

What a contrast to the position in Canada. Here there are no recruiting meetings. If members of the two parties are inclined to join hands, the talk of a general election checks them. No election is due here, but the Government, since last October, has been threatening to hold a premature election. That would be the very reverse of what is being done in England. In England the election is to be postponed. Here it is to be needlessly hurried on. If that is done it will be next to impossible for a Liberal and a Conservative to appear together on the same platform, speaking for a common cause. They will be fighting each other, instead of the common enemy. Bitter things will be said. Feelings of soreness and resentment will be aroused, which will make it difficult for Liberals and Conservatives to co-operate even after the election. The unity of Canada will be lessened, the moral force of Canada weakened, during the whole course of the war.

Not even a plausible excuse is given for this proposed act of folly and crime. The excuse that is given is worse than none, for it would not be put forward if there were a good reason. The Government has a petty quarrel with the Senate as to the appointment of a few new Senators for the West, a little addition to the patronage list. The Government wants to give way the jobs to its friends now; the Senate wants to postpone the distribution until after the general election. Nobody is interested in the matter except those who are now Senators and those who hope to be Senators. Yet upon this frivolous pretext the Government proposed to plunge the country into a general election and a violent partizan quarrel, in the very midst of a conflict which may influence the destinies of the human race.

What is the malign influence that has siezed Sir Robert Borden? He has made speeches which show that he appreciates the magnitude of the struggle in which the nations of Europe are now engaged. He believes that Canada is fighting for democracy, for civilization, for progress toward a new international order, for the enthronement of right, for an enduring peace, for the substitution of order for bloody chaos. Yet he seems willing to lend himself to a petty political device by which his great work will be interrupted and his hands weakened. Instead of striving to unite the people of Canada in a cause of world-wide and enduring importance, the Government proposes to divide them at the bidding of a few self-seeking politicians, to strike a blow at the unity of Canada, of the British Empire, and of the allied forces of civilization and humanity, order and progress.—Toronto Star.

A PREMATURE ELECTION TO AVOID INVESTIGATION?

A campaign of scandal is predicted by the Toronto World. Liberals are exposing war graft and alleged war graft. The Toronto World, Conservative, says:

"Conservatives are feeding out the evidence collected within the last two years of frauds perpetrated on the country in connection with the Northwest, when the Liberals were in office."

We are not told what this evidence is, or how it is being fed out. The graft in connection with war supplies was brought out in a committee of the House of Commons, in which both parties were represented. It is with these that the country has now to deal. If there are charges against Liberals in connection with the West, they should be brought out. But one set of charges ought not to be allowed to offset another. When a man says, "One party is as bad as another," that is a lazy way of avoiding the duty of punishing wrong-doing. We do not want to balance the offences of one party against the offences of another for half a century back. We want to deal with the present.

The World perceives this, and while it demands the punishment of offending Liberals as well as offending Conservatives, it says:

"The Conservatives are on trial even more than their opponents, as the frauds now being exposed are of recent occurrence and under the rule of men now in office. If the Borden Government is to servive, it must confess, reform, reconstruct. Sir Robert Borden may have to do now what he should have done long ago; not only reorganize, but put in some better and more capable men, and change the methods. No more patronage, no more politics in civil service appointments, no more of the leeches that infest and have infested Ottawa for ten years or more, in selling and renting to the Government, supplying the departments, looting like professional cracksmen.

"And if loot was taken in former days it is not too late for Liberals now in public life to join in punishment of the guilty in compelling restitution."

The Conservatives are in office and in power, and they can stay there for a year and a half if they desire. It is for them to make further investigations and to punish the grafters and reform the methods. If there is anything in the old methods that impairs the efficiency of the organization for war, the Government has the power to root out the evil.

But if there is to be an election in the coming summer, there will be no time for investigation or reform. The country will not be able to deal fairly with the charges. Party spirit will be aroused. Everything will be looked at through party spectacles. Ministers who will be making stump speeches and pulling wires will have no time to carry out administrative reforms. The question that will be asked in regard to a manufacturer or contractor will not be whether he is furnishing supplies honestly for the war, but whether he is working for the Government and the party.—Toronto Star.

CONSIDERATE—BUT

Sir Robert Borden complained in the House the other evening that "gentlemen opposite," by their comments about defective war supplies had been taking bread out of the mouths of Canadian workingmen. He omitted to mention what his Finance Minister was taking out of their pockets. And there was not a word, either, about the toll of the Government's middlemen.—Montreal Herald Telegraph.

BATTERY IN WHICH LOCAL BOYS ARE RECEIVES ETC.

absence of tiles, the floors and doors are riddled with holes from shrapnel bullets, and nearly every pane of glass broken. Apart from this they did not do much damage. One of our fellows was struck with a bullet near the eye and one of the rifles has a splinter as big as the end of a finger embedded in the stock.

Guns Well Concealed.

"Regarding the battery work there is not much to tell you. The drivers [illegible] have just a gun crew, a few spares and a couple of cooks up here. Concealed positions are used, of course. We have built very solid gun epaulments at this positin with sand bags, sods, and brush, and even planted trees for concealment. It is a splendid position, the fact that we have never been 'found' goes to prove it, although several shells have burst about us. It is all 'indirect method,' with aiming points. Angles are worked out with bearings taken with prismatic compass, so we cannot see the effect of our fire. Maps are used almost exclusively."

A New York inventor has combined an incandescent lamp with an ordinary electric hair dryer so that a person's hair can be given a light bath and dried at the same time.

Shell Failed To Explode

Interesting Letter From Hector Hamilton of Bethany—Used to Roar of Guns

Dr. Hamilton of Bethany has received the following letter from his brother Hector, who is now at the front, under date of March 13:

"I am writing this in the gun pit of my gun while No. 2 gun is registering German trenches by firing on them. We have opened fire on them as a battery five times and did considerable damage to their trenches, besides killing a few and wounding a number.

"We had one man receive a flesh wound near the eye last Sunday by shrapnel when they dropped a few erratic shells around us. The sound of shells whistling through the air is becoming quite common to us now as we are getting quite used to it.

"We have gathered quite a collection of souvenirs in the shape of fuses and shells.

Found Buried Shell.

"The other day we dug up an unexploded 8-inch (80-lbs.) Howitzer shell, German high explosive. It was 17 feet in the ground and is some prize; a lot of their shells are bad, and do not explode.

Last night the detachment of men necessary to work the gun, including myself, slept in the pit and kept our night lights for aiming purposes going all night.

"The Major has just taken a snap of our gun in the pit with the working detachment, so if I can possibly secure one I will send it home; it will give you a slight idea.

Not Past Joking Yet.

"Last night I slept with a comrade under the ammunition waggon which is also in the pit. I must have rolled for I pushed him off the hay and from under the blankets, so he said, 'Sergeant, get over a bit, you've pushed me off the bed.' [illegible] early this morning.' So you see we are not past having a joke yet. In fact we are all happy and have a good time in general. It has been a pretty hard week, working day and night.

Zeppelins Wrecked By Shells at Ypres

ROTTERDAM, April 15.—Another Zeppelin has been wrecked in Belgium while flying over the district of Ypres. It was heavily shot at and badly damaged. It managed to fly as far as Thielt, but in the early hours Tuesday morning it came down, a complete wreck, amidst the trees near Marie Aeltre.

At The Age of One Hundred And Four He Shod a Horse

Michael O'Neil Who Recently Died at Age of 107 Possessed Remarkable Faculties Which He Retained to the Last

"Old age hath yet its honour and its toil."

None would dispute the singular honour due Mr. Michael O'Neil, of Uxbridge, as one of the oldest men of the province. He died on Saturday at Uxbridge at the age of 106 years and 10 months. From being the village blacksmith just out from Ireland, up till his passing on Saturday, his remarkably long life has been crowded with interesting episodes of the endurance of old age.

Sage of District.

From an ordinary citizen, close to fourscore years ago, Mr. O'Neil saw the passing of one generation of citizens and eventually became the great sage of a younger one. His personage looked so large in the life of the town that on his 106th birthday, last June, a public holiday was declared for him. Michael did credit as the central figure. He mounted the platform as a youth. His stentorian voice was heard even by the outer circle of the 4,000 assembled.

Never Sick.

Up to two weeks ago he had never admitted a day's sickness in his life. Ex-Mayor W. Low was with him during the last twenty-four hours. He stated to The Telegram that the old man was bright and had all his faculties right up till the time he dozed off, a sleep which proved to be death. He had known deceased for the past 50 years, and as a neighbour was in close association with his habits and disposition. One week ago he made his will, "which," declared Mr. Low, "is as shrewdly a worded document as one could find. For a man of 107, he was a marvel for retaining his mentality."

"Just two years ago he sold a lot to the Sterling Bank here, and was most careful in the way the transfer was made. The bank admitted it would have done credit to a young

Spry at 105.

Mr. William Burns said that just two weeks ago the old man climbed upon a chair and wound up the clock. "Why, when he was 105 years of age he wanted me to get up on his roof to re-single it. I thought it was too dangerous and I told him so. But he got mad, and said he would do it himself, and to save him I had to do it, too."

"Well, anyway, he did shingle it the year before himself, I know," added ex-Mayor Low, "because I saw him carrying his own shingles up."

Shod a Horse.

But all other attempts to defeat Father Time and the frailty of flesh sinks into insignificance beside the story next told by Mr. Low. "I was discussing with him the way my horse threw its shoes. He said he could shoe it so they would stay on. I thought he was joking, as he was then 104, and had given up work long ago. Well, sir, he got down with his tools and shoed that horse in an expert manner."

The old man was proud of his strength in his old days, and while he sorrowfully admitted he was "not as good as he used to be," he consoled himself with reciting what he had done to emulate Samson.

Bested Giant.

Four years ago a man named Esperard came to see him from a distance. The man, a regular giant, said, "You are in your 103rd year now, I understand, so I am a better man than you at last." But the old man was game to the last and said, "Well, I guess you could put me down all right, but I can beat you yet." He then pulled out two horse shoe nails and asked the other fellow to do the same as him. He then bit the nail in two as clean as pincers would, and, believe me, the other fellow was beaten—for he had no teeth." Mr. O'Neil retained every tooth but one right to the last.

Faith of Neighbours.

No one of the long memories in the municipality's back pages questioned that Michael was less than he claimed, and as evidence of good faith point proudly to the fact that he received telegrams from Premier Borden, also Sir Wilfrid Laurier, congratulating him on reaching his 106th birthday on June 26th last.

Another honour done to his old age was to be the first person to enter the new post office two years ago. He also received the first letter from Ottawa through the new office and thus signalled the opening of the building.

A long line of genealogy is associated with him.

He survived all of his own brothers and sisters. Of a family of nine, seven died of consumption before their prime. Two of his children survive him—Michael, and Mrs. Joe Lennard. Many great grandchildren are alive, including a third Michael O'Neil.

Wife Dead 26 Years.

His wife predeceased him about 25 years ago. She was found dead by Mr. O'Neil behind the stove, after he had been absent only a few minutes. Her sudden death always remained a mystery.

Since her death the husband lived alone, except for an occasional neighbour dropping in. As a Catholic he never was known to miss Sunday service. He took it upon himself to visit all the sick within a mile, even during the past few weeks.

Results From Want Advertising

Securing results from classified advertising is not difficult. Suppose that it is a position as stenographer that is being sought. The advertiser may infer results from her ad for definite reasons. She knows that all employers who need stenographers will read the ads of all stenographers who seek positions—that is if her ad is "there" that it will be seen; and that if it impresses favourably it will be answered. It would be aside from logic to imagine that if a man needs a stenographer he would fail to read the ads of stenographers—he'd be a strange type of business man, if he did.

The same thing applies, in a like way, to all other classifications of want ads. Each classification draws its readers in a sort of automatic way from all those interested and concerned at the time in the matter involved.

To want-advertise—"in time"—is to find a tenant before the old one leaves.

To want advertise—without delay—is to avoid a vacancy at the boarding house table.

To want-advertise promptly—is to install the new cook "on the same day."

To want-advertise under 'For Sale' is to turn it into money."

To want-advertise for a furnished room is to receive offers from every section of town.

To want-advertise that land is to get into quick touch with the people to whom it is worth more than it is to you.

Voice of The People

Peterborough, April 14, 1915.

'Examiner" Printing Co.,
419 George Street,
City.

Gentlemen,— Presuming upon your indulgence to allot a bicycle rider some of your valuable space to reply to the article by "Park St." April 13th inst.

The De Laval wheelmen beg to call "Park St's." attention to the fact that it is owing to the De Laval Co. building their factory on Park Street that influenced the city to extend the fine concrete walk to the factory. There have been other notable improvements in the vicinity of the factory.

We wheelmen are a good natured lot and like to see everyone enjoy themselves, especially the children jumping rope on the pedestrians' right of way. We don't mind dismounting and walking around so as not to spoil the children's game. We would rather take a header in the Park Street mud than hurt one of them.

That word mud calls to mind some painful experiences some of us unfortunates that have to use Park Street, especially south of the C.P.R. after a beautiful rain, that does so much good, but not on south Park Street. Oh! mud, mud, mud, and holes and ruts. City Fathers, please take notice. We extend you a hearty welcome to our plant, but you must come down Park Street, and soon after the beautiful rain shower has stopped. Tie on an extra set of hydroplane tires and nail your dust shields to the fence; you won't need them after you pass the C.P.R. Put on low gear, awful low, or we will not be responsible for your condition when you land. Take it from us, the aforementioned street has no respect for persons, animals or wheels; it would let you sink out of sight without a blush. Dear City Fathers, if you come to see us, do be careful, for what would become of us if you were lost in the Park Street trenches. Now what would we do? In the first place we would rescue you from the trenches and lay you out full length on our Park Street boulevard and sit down upon you until you promised us a cinder path or good road. In some towns they might beat you, but we are too, good natured, and hope you will be, too, and not pinch us if we get on the lovely smooth concrete after a shower. Remember, you were boys once. Have some feeling for us kids, and not let the police request us to dismount when we are on Park way home.

We thank you, and beg to remain,
A Wheelman.

THE HEALTH OFFICER OF NORTH MONAGHAN ASKS FOR INCREASE

Dr. Greer Says the Sum Fixed for His Services are Entirely Inadequate---Lengthy Session of the Council Held

The North Monaghan Council met at the court house on Monday, April 12. It was nearing the midnight hour when the Council finally adjourned.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. Several deputations appeared before the Council. Dr. Greer explained his duties as medical health officer and told of the sanitary conditions of the township. He said the sum fixed by the Township of $50 for his services was entirely inadequate for the work he had to do.

Reeve McIntosh said that complete harmony and co-operation should exist and said the Council would deal with the matter.

Joseph Hopkins asked the Council to do some road work on a hill near his place as he had been there 17 years and there never had been any work done in that time. He also complained of a neighbour's fence being on the road twenty feet.

Moved by Messrs. Forster and Rye that the Road Commissioner for R. R. No. 1 be authorized to repair the road complained of and also to look into the matter of the fence being out on the road and if this is found to be the case to notify the owner to move it to the proper line.

Arthur Reid asked the Council for permission to put earth out of the cellar that he intends digging, into a ditch in front of his place on the road. He also asked Council to finish filling in the ditch after he had placed what dirt he had into the same. Moved by Messrs. Forster and Robson, that the Reeve, Mr. Bell, and Mr. Rye be a committee to visit Mr. Reid's place and see the ditch in question, and decide what is best to do.

Mr. Mumford of Sawyer-Massey [illegible] that the township intended buying an engine to operate the stone crusher. Reeve McIntosh said the Township was not in a position to talk business this season.

Moved by Messrs. Rye and Bell that the Clerk notify J. T. O'Connell to remove his fence back of St. Mary's street forthwith. Mr. Deline appeared personally in regard to this matter and the Council had previously received a petition with the request.

Moved by Messrs. Rye and Robson that the Clerk notify the City of Peterborough to stop immediately drawing sand or earth from North Monaghan from the new outfall sewer on King George Street. Also that the city be asked to give a statement as to who is going to fill King George street up to a level with the manhole on King George street, near I.[illegible] street.

Offer of Settlement.

Mr. Wearing's communication was read, stating that Mr. Geo. Lockie would accept $500 and a new fence along his property in full for his claim of $600 and he would build the fence.

Moved by Messrs. Forster and Rye that the reeve and township solicitor be given full authority to reply to Mr. Wearing's communication; also that he be given full power to act in the matter.

The following charity bills were presented for payment.

Ben McCoy, coal supplied for J. Waterson in November and February, $7.75 B. McCoy, wood for same $5.75; J. E. A. Fitzgerald, wood, $32.15; J. D. Manley, groceries, $22.37; W. J. Buyers, groceries, $45.33; A. E. Saunders, groceries, $47.03; S. E. Moncrief, milk, $2.03. Total, $162.41.

Moved by Messrs. Forster and Robson, that the charity bills be paid.

Moved by Messrs. Robson and Rye that the Clerk have prepared a by-law according to terms of agreement (prepared by Mr. Peck) between the Townships of Smith and North Monaghan regarding the maintenance of [illegible]

Moved by Messrs. Bell and Robson that by-law 705 be read and finally passed reappointing fence viewers and pound keepers the same as last year with the exception of Harry Adamson to take the place of John McIntosh and John Rutherford to take the place of Jos. H. Bell.

Dust Nuisance is Complained of ## Matter is Brought to the Attention of the Board of Works by Ald. Stratton—Flushing the Paved Streets

For some time past the merchants on George Street have complained of the dust nuisance. Last evening the matter was brought to the attention of the Board of Works by Ald. Stratton. The later wanted to know what arrangements had been made for flushing the paved streets of the city, claiming that the present service was inadequate. He enumerated a number of cases which had been brought to his attention and in which merchants had suffered considerably from the dust nuisance.

City Engineer Parsons said that this was an inter-season when it was impossible to flush the streets on account of the likelihood of frost which would have the effect of freezing the water on the streets and making them slippery.

Municipal Ownership.

Ald. Weir wanted to know why the teamsters could not fill their watering carts from the hydrants. "We own the water, we own the hydrants, we own the Commission, and why can't we do what we like?" mused the East Ward representative. "They do it in Toronto," he added.

No one volunteered a reply. At present the watering carts are filled from the standpipes provided for that purpose.

The question of formulating an arrangement whereby the firemen would flush the city's streets was revived by Ald. Edgar.

"It would be good exercise for them," observed Ald. Evans.

Ald. Green was not inclined to favour such a scheme on the grounds that it would have a tendency to interfere with their duties as fire-fighters, whereupon Ald. Edgar suggested that the firemen take the hose waggon with them when they went to flush the streets. If an alarm was sounded they should climb aboard and proceed to the fire.

After some more discussion it was decided to look into the question of providing a more adequate means of watering the paved streets in the business section of the city. The matter of flushing the streets will remain over until the committee appointed for that purpose submits a report.

W.A.A. EXHIBIT AT PUBLIC LIBRARY

The Women's Art Association is certainly doing its best to keep alive an interest in Art in Peterborough. Every year since its inception it has held an annual exhibit of pictures by artists well-known throughout Canada, and has in other ways done its best to foster a taste for the Fine Arts. It is again to the fore now with a very fine array of [illegible]hings by Miss Dorothy Stevens, of Toronto, and of oils by Mrs. B. Hagarty Robertson, of the same city. The exhibit, which is on view at the W.A.A. room at the Public Library, is open to the public till Friday night, April 16th. Admission free.—F. M. D.

PARIS RECRUITS SING ON MARCH

PARIS, April 14—Paris was enlivened on Monday by gay crowds of conscripts of the 1916 class parading the streets to the strains of the Marseilles and other patriotic songs previous to starting to-day to join their regiments in the centre and south of France.

Beginning with 5 o'clock in the evening the railroad stations were crowded with conscripts and their friends. All street car lines running toward the stations carried singing and shouting bands, the youths being as jolly as if they were out for a picnic.

These recruits, nineteen years old, compare favourably with those of previous levies and they showed the better effect of physical training in preparation for their service in the army. All appeared to be full of confidence and they went forth without a sign of reluctance or regret.

What Are The Boys And The Girls To Do

In Default of Being Provided With Properly Supervised Play Grounds

There are many complaints in our city about the depredations of the children. They are accused of throwing stones, of breaking windows, of battling where they should not battle, of playing baseball and other games on the streets and a variety of such misdemeanors. But what are these boys and girls to do? They are not allowed by law, to play games in our parks, and the school grounds are closed during the holidays.

The Local Council of Women propose to solve the problem, by providing a model play ground for the children during the holiday season. Here there will be swings, beds of sand for building splendid castles and forts and houses, the necessary apparatus for games of various sorts, such as basketball, etc., and a genial man or woman to see that the play is fair and no one gets hurt.

Mothers—would you have you have your children safe and happy during the summer months? Then help forward with your sympathetic interest, the supervised playground movement.

They have taken a course at Quebec in regard to the Ross Rifle Maxim and Colt guns and the Colt pistol.

BELLEVILLE NOTES.

Maj.-Gen. Lessard inspected the 39th Battalion this morning and was received on the drill ground with the customary honours.

He spent the morning with us and watched the regiment at company drills.

He intimated upon his arrival that what he laid great stress upon, was the organization of platoons and sections, so that each platoon and section commander could tell at a glance any casualty or change that might take place at any time.

He emphasized the necessity of this in action, and als the importance of each section and platoon commander having as many as three and four men in each of their respective commands detailed as substitutes to assume their authority in succession, if it were to be their lot to be "bowled over."

Pte. Nicholls, Peterborough, was admitted to hospital on Monday and about 25 of the Peterborough boys are housed in an old school on Catharine street for observation.

Five more men to-day having upon result of bacteriological examination being proved "carriers" have been removed to the isolation camp on the Exhibition Grounds.

HOW I DARKENED MY GREY HAIR

Lady Gives Simple Home Recipe That She Used to Darken Her Gray Hair.

For years I tried to restore my gray hair to its natural colour with the prepared dyes and stains, but none of them gave satisfaction and they were all expensive. I finally ran onto a simple recipe which I mixed at home that gives wonderful results. I gave the recipe, which is as follows, to a number of my friends, and they are all delighted with it. To 7 ozs. of water add a small box of Orlex Compound, 1 oz. of bay rum and ½ oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Use every other day until the hair becomes the required shade, then every two weeks. It will not only darken the gray hair, but removes dandruff and scalp humors, and acts as a tonic to the hair. It is not sticky or greasy, does not rub off and does not color the scalp.

NEUVE CHAPELLE VICTORY MIGHT HAVE BEEN GREATER

General in Command of Fourth Corps Did Not Reorganize Infantry With Sufficient Promptness as Directed to Do, Says Sir John French in Review of Battle

LONDON, April 15.—Field Marshal Sir John French, commander of the British Expeditionary Forces on the continent, reports the British losses in the three days fighting at Neuve Chapelle as follows:

Killed, 190 officers, 2,337 men; total 2,527. Wounded, 359 officers, 8,174 other ranks; total, 8,533. Missing, 23 officers, 1,728 men; total, 1,751. Total casualties, 12,811.

"The enemy left several thousand dead on the field, and we have positive information that upwards of 12,800 wounded were removed by train. Thirty officers and 1,657 of other ranks were captured."

The British comamander's despatch concerning the battle of Neuve Chapelle, which began early in March, is lengthy, and says among other things:

"Considerable delay occurred after the capture of Neuve Chapelle, and the infantry was greatly disorganized. I am of the opinion that this delay would not have occurred had the clearly expressed order of the general officer commanding the first army been more carefully observed."

Referring to Neuve Chapelle and the considerations leading up to this, the field marshal says:

"About the end of February many vital considerations induced me to believe that a vigorous offensive movement by the troops under my command should be planned and carried out at the earliest possible moment. Among the more important reasons which convinced me of this necessity were: The general aspect of the allied situation throughout Europe, and particularly the marked success of the Russian army in repelling the violent onslaughts of Marshal von Hindenburg; the apparent weakening of the enemy on my front and the necessity for assisting our Russian allies to the utmost by holding as many hostile troops as possible in the western theatre, the efforts to this end which were being made by the French forces at Arras, and in Champagne, and — perhaps the most weighty consideration of all — the need of fostering the offensive spirit in the troops under my command after the trying and possible enervating experiences which they had gone through of a severe winter in the trenches."

Sir John describes the action in detail, and referring to the hitch in operations says the orders of the commander of the first army to reorganise his forces were executed too slowly. He continues:

"The difficulties above enumerated would have been overcome earlier in the day if the general officer commanding the fourth corps had been able to bring his reserve brigades more speedily into action. As it was, a further advance did not commence before 3.30 p.m. The 21st brigade was able to form up in the open on the left without a shot being fired at it, thus showing that at the time, the enemy's resistance had been paralysed."

Referring to what he terms the "remarkable promptitude" in the arrival of reinforcements from England, the field marshal calls attention to the fact that, "in spite of the heavy casualties in the fighting between the 10th and 15th of March, all deficiencies, both in officers and in the rank and file, were made good within a few days after the conclusion of the battle. The drafts of the Indian contingents are much improved of late, and are now quite satisfactory."

Field Marshal French fails to reveal the name of the officer whom he so sharply blames for the delay which robbed the British of the full fruits of their victory at Neuve Chapelle.

Charlotte Street Pavement Operations Begun To-Day

Foley & Gleason Recommence Their Contract—Street Railway Company to Build New Road bed and Switch

Work preparatory to the paving of Charlotte street from Bethune to Park street was commenced with the one o'clock whistle this afternoon. The first operation is rebuilding of the Street Railway line on this section of Charlotte street. The old rails and ties are being torn up and the road will be constructed afong lines similar to those adopted on the other paved streets. The extra switching between Reid and Park street will also be laid to provide for the Charlotte street extension, Mr. Munro, manager of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, told The Examiner that the line planned for Charlotte street west and the boundary road south to Patterson street would be undertaken when the present replacement is completed.

Few Were Chosen.

Quite a crowd of labourers gathered on Charlotte street between Bethune and Stewart at noon to-day, expectant and hopeful of being hired. However, all but four of the men were Foley & Gleason employees. Local unemployed men said they mentioned the matter to Mayor Buller who, they said, replied that the work was done by contract and the city had no right to interfere. The four exceptions were employed by the Street Railway Company, who will require a gang of twenty-five men when the work has been advanced to actual rebuilding operations, that is when the old ties are out and the men are digging the new roadbed.

Felt Like A Blow On Ear

Pte. Patrick Duggan Tells of the Effect When a "Coal-Box" Bursts

Mr. Chas. Duggan, of Peterborough, this morning received a breezy letter from Pte. Patrick Duggan, 14th Battalion, 3rd Brigade, First Canadian Contingent. Writing on March 28th, Pte. Duggan says:

I am getting on well in the trenches, though they are still pretty muddy and wet in places. The weather has been fairly good, with a little rain now and then. It is nice and sunny to-day, with a regular English march wind. The Corp. Brown you mention was in the same platoon as myself. He and I had chocolate and cake together the day before we went into the trenches. The Huns were shelling the town the same day and the woman in the shop didn't know whether to serve us or run down into the cellar. The shells were dropping within a hundred yards of us then. Brown was hit the next day by shrapnel when the Huns were shelling our trenches, one shell burst about ten feet in front of our trench the same day. The concussion was awful. It seemed to me as if somebody gave me a clump in the ear. I still have the effects of it. It was a heavy shell. What we call a coal-box and it was either not timed properly or else hit the tree in front of us. We could tell by the rest that came over that they were meant for the artillery somewhere at the back of us.

What do you think of the battle of Neuve Chappelle. The casualties were heavy. The men were too eager to leave the trenches. You are an old soldier, so I will leave it to you to guess what happened.

I had a good joke played on me the other night in the trenches. I was on sentry about 11.30 p.m., when I saw something bob up on the other side of the trench. I quickly fixed my bayonet and scanned the parapet for about five minutes. I then came to the conclusion that it was imagination as the object didn't seem large enough for a man's head. About ten minutes later I saw the thing bob up again. Getting no answer to my challenge. I bent over the parapet and plugged a shot at the object and what do you think it was? A black dog! Two minutes late a rat ran along the sand bags. I was so disgusted I threw a tin of bully beef at it.

REPORTS CONFLICT

Russians and Germans Both Claim Successes

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 15.—(Special cable.)—Sharply conflicting reports regarding the progress of the great Carpathian Pass battles came from Petrograd and Berlin to-day. A dispatch from Petrograd announced that the Germans are blowing up the railway tunnels through Uszok Pass in preparation for retreat. An official statement issued at Berlin this afternoon declared that the Russians have been badly beaten and checked at every point in the attempted invasion of Hungary.

The Russians are exhausted the Berlin War Office announced. Their attacks have grown steadily weaker in the last few days, until the pressure on the Austro-German linss has almost ceased, Berlin says.

On the other hand, Lemberg dispatches to Petrograd to-day asserted that the battle for the possession of the Uszok railway and pass is proceeding with fury. The Slavs are reported pressing in upon the enemy from the west along the road leading over the mountain crest from Volosate. The Germans, according to this report, have dynamited a tunnel near Sianki, at the northern gateway to Uszok, thus admitting they have little hope of taking the offensive again in this region.

GETTING READY FOR ROAD OIL

City Engineer Parsons Will Prepare Specifications

City Engineer Parsons has been instructed to prepare specifications and obtain prices for asphaltic road oil which the city propose to use on the streets as a dust layer. The majority of the aldermen are in favour of forty per cent. asphaltic oil, while others are inclined to believe that a sixty per cent. article would be more suitable. The difficulty with the latter is that it requires heating before being applied. This means that the city would have to procure a special type of tank, whereas the tanks used for street watering can be arranged with special nozzles with which to apply the oil. A number of communications were read at last night's meeting of the Board of Works, concerning various grades and prices of road oil. Ald. Stratton asked the City Engineer if he favoured any particular company. The Engineer replied in the negative. It was a question of securing the best quality of oil at the best price. In any case the oil would have to be tested.

Street Paving.

A representative of the Warren Paving Company, Toronto, waited upon the Board in respect to street paving. Ald. Green informed the paving company's representative that the Council of last year awarded the company a certain amount of the paving, which was refused on the grounds that it was too small to justify the company moving their plant to Peterborough.

In reply the paving representative said he was unaware that the company has declined to accept the city's contract, which he believed was in the neighbourhood of seven thousand yards.

City Engineer Parsons said that the amount offered was nearer ten thousand yards.

Ald. Green regretted the action of the paving company as the Board of Works was desirous of trying out the company's paving.

The Board decided to defer the question of additional street paving until a later date.

Eleven other members of the crew of the steamer were rescued, according to a dispatch from Amsterdam. The steamer was torpedoed a few miles off the coast of Holland.

A PLEASING MUSICAL AMENITY

The Morning Musical Club, one of whose raisons d'etre, is the aim to develop music, musicians and promote musical interests generally, has been evidently watching the work and incidntal cooperation in the club's objects of the Conservatory orchestra. As an appreciation of the orchestra, the club has presented it with the music of an orchestral selection, a suite by Massenet—"Scenes Alsatian." This was a much valued contribution, both because of the spirit behind and the material value of the music. Printed music is an expensive affair, and as the orchestra, has to provide its own musical library and rehearses and plays, only for the love of concerted music, the gift of the club was timely. At the regular rehearsal of the orchestra last night, Mr. Dean and Miss Pearl McKee moved a cordial vote of thinks to the Club for its encouraging kindness in donating a much appreciated gift.

G. T. R. Bridge Was Opened To-Day

As the Grank Trunk Railway opened the bridge across the Otonabee this morning the river is now open for navigation up to the George St. wharf. It will only be a matter of a few days now until the first "chug chug" of steamers engines will be heard on the old Otonabee once more. On every hand preparations are being made to handle the season's business. At No. 6 Lock the Government storehouse is being repaired and an addition built.

At the Lift Locks men have been busy for the past couple of weeks preparing the machinery to hoist the first boat. The pontoons are being emptied and prepared and in a short time everything will be in readiness all along the canal route.

Special Car For Mystic Shriners

There will be twenty-five or thirty Peterborough gentlemen to attend one of the largest and most important Masonic events in some years past, when the Mystic Shriners will gather in Toronto to-morrow in their hundreds for the "Spring Ceremonial," the biggest event of the Shriners' year. There will be no public demonstration, but the ceremonial to be conducted in Association Hall will be on a most elaborate scale. A large number of new sons will cross the sands and the new Potentate, Mr. C. C. Mowry, promises them a most unique passage.

The event will have quite an international flavour, several large delegations planning to make the trip from Philadelphia, New York, Buffalo, Cleveland and other United States points, while the visitors from Ontario points will constitute a record number, requests having been received in Toronto from every city in the Province for accommodation. The London delegation alone, it is reported, will number 150 and they will go by special train, arriving there to-morrow morning.

The proceedings will be opened with a business meeting at 3 p.m., to be followed by the ceremonial starting at 7.30.

Mystic Shriners T. Hooper, Keith Lech and F. W. Trabilcock are leaving for Toronto this evening, while the remainder will go to-morrow by special car. Among those who are expected to go to-morrow are Mystic Shriners, R. M. Waddell, W. Lytle, I. E. L. Goodwill, W. R. G. Higgins, E. Worth, T. F. Matthews, G. A. Gillespie, R. S. Cotten, S. Taylor, A. # CHANGED THE BILL

Senate Introduces Amendment That Lord Kitchener's Concent Must be Secured

Special Cable to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 15.—The bill to extend the franchise to soldiers was passed by the Senate to-day in an amended form. The most important amendment adopted was on the lines proposed by Hon. Wm. Pugsley in the Commons providing that before the bill comes into effect the consent of Lord Kitchener, secretary of war in the British government, must be secured. Another amendment provides for the appointment of six scrutineers, three representing each party, to supervise the taking of the vote at the front. It is not known yet whether or not the government will accept the amendments.

"Geneva" Arrives At Street Railway Wharf

The "Geneva" from Harwood opened the local navigation season this morning, when she docked at the Street Railway wharf, after making the first trip of the season from Rice Lake. Although the records are not available it is a fact that the present season has opened considerably in advance of recent years. The water is much lower than usual and no high currents exist.

THE PREMIER IS HEARD

matters, even of trifling character, were proved, they should be greatly magnified and exaggerated in a way to cause unrest in the country which may not have been fully justified by the facts.

Throughout the present investigation the Minister of Customs representing the government had made it clear that everything was to be made open to the light of day and this course had been pursued, said Mr. Borden.

The Powell Case.

The first matter under consideration was the Powell case, where a young man earning $75 per month, had in three weeks made $9,000 out of bandages supplied to the soldiers..

A man named Shaver had told the committee that Colonel Jones, Director of Medical Services, now at the front, had told him that it was the custom of the Department to buy through the middleman. I don't believe that guy, Carlton Jones ever told the untruth that any such principle was laid down by the Department," said the Premier warmly. The transaction in connection with the Powell case was very unsatisfactory, he said, and he did not intend to shield anyone, Liberal or Conservative. The Premier added that the matter had been referred to the Justice Department and that everything possible in the public interest would be done. The binoculars case would also go to the Department of Justice for a most searching inquiry.

The Horse Deal.

The Prime Minister then dealt with the purchase of horses in King's county, N.S., by A. Dewitt Foster, M. P. He explained that Foster had been employed to do this work by Col. McNeill, without knowledge of any member of the government. Col. McNeill never should have appointed him, and Foster never should have appointed him, and Foster never should have accepted the appointment. It was a most unfortunate and regrettable thing. But having undertaken the duty it developed upon an M.P. above all other men, to see that the most scrupulous account was kept of all money. But the evidence showed that he did not keep such an account. There were $70,0000 at the present time not really accounted for. In the Public Accounts committee, said the Premier, men had stood up and stated that they knew they were defrauding the government and rejoiced in it.

"If the laws of a country," said the Prime Minister, "permit restitution to be enforced it will be enforced and if the laws of the country permit of the walls of the penitentiary enclosing these gentlemen they will go there."

The government would continue further investigation into the horse deals. In connection with the resolution urging a better system of purchase and audit, the government would see to it that legislation calculated to make any improvements thought necessary should be framed. The Prime Minister declared that there had been a great deal of exaggeration connected with the so-called frauds. The Premier went on to state that principle had now been laid down in the Department to buy direct from the manufacturers and to eliminate the middleman; also to away with the Canadian agents of American firms. The Minister of Militia had stated this practice had never been departed from. "If any man in Canada permits fraud," said the Premier, "and is so concerned in connection with war contracts, let him remember that the doors of the penitentiary are yawning for him."

The Prime Minister expressed dissatisfaction with Messrs. Garland, M. P. of Carlton, and Foster, M.P. of King's for their connection with the Powell drug contract and King's county horse deals, respectively, and declared that further investigation would be made. The Premier announced that a commission of three of the best business men in the Dominion would in future take charge of all war purchases.

Sir Wilfrid's Address.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier followed. He was sorry that the Prime Minister had again resorted to the old Tu quoque argument, in stating that the Opposition, when in power, had blocked investigation. That had never been done. The Prime Minister had stated that all contracts under the fifty million appropriation had been thoroughly investigated. This was not in accordance with the facts. Only a limited number of purchases had been considered at all and the Premier, himself, had admitted that these were only for the first six weeks of the war. The Committee, as a matter of fact, had only scratched the surface, and there were many other things which merited investigation. The only thing he had to say of the Powell contract was that the Department should have known that it was not Powell who was dealing with the Government, but his employee, the member for Carleton.

The latter had made little profit in the end, but he had been the man who did the dealing in reality. He was pleased to hear that high credit had been given the officials of the military department. He thought that Premier Borden made a mistake in taking credit to himself for investigating. Under public opinion he couldn't have done otherwise and it would have been criminal not to have done so.

Sir Wilfrid will continue this afternoon.

OPENING GAMES IN THE BIG LEAGUES

Pennock, Pitching For Athletics Against Boston Allowed Red Sox Only One Hit—Champion Braves Are Beaten and the Giants Slaughter Brooklyn 16 to 3

WASHINGTON, April 14.—President Wilson, several members of his cabinet, and a huge crowd to-day saw Washington defeat New York by a score of seven to nothing in the opening game of the baseball season here. The President began the game by throwing out the first ball to Umpire "Billy" Evans. With Secretaries Bryan, Lane and Daniels and Garrison, he remained throughout the game and warmly applauded the best plays.

A baseball bat and ball, inscribed with the name of Francis Sayre, the baby grandson of President Wilson, were presented to the President during the game by Manager Griffith of the Washington team.

The game, played in ideal weather, was featured by the pitching of Walter Johnson, who allowed New York only two hits, and by Williams' catch of Cree's line drive in the fifth with two on bases.

Three of Warhop's four passes, which were followed by hits and sacrifices, resulted in runs. With the bases full in the fifth, Cook misjudged Morgan's fly, which went for three bases, and Washington scored three runs. Washington scored again in the eighth on Ainsmith's hit, errors by High and Maisell, and sacrifices by Moeller and Foster. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| New York .....000000000—0 | 2 | 3 | |
| Washington .....10013011x—7 | 11 | 1 | |

Batteries: Warhop and Sweeney; Johnson and Henry.

DETROIT LOST TO CLEVELAND.

DETROIT, Mich., April 14.—Detroit fielded miserably, was unable to hit Mitchell opportunley, and Cleveland won the opening game of the season, 5 to 1. Ty Cobb ingloriously muffed Chapman's high fly in the first inning, thus making an error on his first fielding chance of the year. Chapman took second on the misplay, and scored on Jackson's single. Vitts wide throw paved the way for Cleveland's run in the sixth, while Covaleski's muff of a thrown ball and some consecutive hitting gave the visitors three runs in the seventh. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Cleveland .....10000180—5 | 7 | 1 | |
| Detroit .....00010000—1 | 7 | 6 | |

Batteries: Mitchell and O'Neill; Covaleski, Boland and Stanage, Baker.

ATHLETICS WHITEWASHED BOSTON.

PHILADELPHIA, April 14.—Herb Pennock was in such wonderful form in the opening game between Philadelphia and Boston here this afternoon that the Red Sox were not only shut out by 2 to 0, but it was not until two men were out in the ninth inning that the visitors made their lone hit of the contest. Then Hooper hit a single over Pennock's head. Lajoie made a desperate try for the ball, but he could not hold it with one hand, and Pennock lost his chance for a no-hit mark. Shore was effective except in the seventh inning, when Philadelphia scored its runs on a pass, two safe hunts, a fielder's choice, and a scratch single. Mayor Blankenburg tossed out the first ball. Frank Baker, who announced his retirement several weeks ago, witnessed the game. His place at third base was filled by Eddie Murphy, who did excellent work. The weather was cool, and the stands were little more than half-filled. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Boston .....000000000—0 | 1 | 0 | |
| Philadelphia .....0000090x—2 | 7 | 0 | |

Batteries: Shore and Cady; Pennock and Schang.

THIRTEEN INNINGS AT ST. LOUIS.

ST. LOUIS, April 14.—Chicago and St. Louis opened the American League season here to-day by a thirteen inning game, which the visitors won by 7 to 6. In the last inning Fournier's triple brought in Brief and Schalk, who had singled. In the following out Fournier came in with the winning run. In the same inning St. Louis also took on new life and scored twice, but fell a run short of tying the score again.

Mayor Kiel pitched on the first ball. Gov. Major, of Missouri, and many other notables were present. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Chicago .....1000000200103—7 | 18 | 4 | |
| St. Louis .....3000000000102—6 | 8 | 1 | |

Batteries: Scott, Jasper, Faber, Cicotte and Schalk; Weilman, Perryman and Severeid Agnew.

BOSTON, April 14.—The Braves received a setback from Philadelphia today at the start of their quest for a second pennant. With Alexander pitching remarkably well for the opening game of the season the world's champions were shut out by 3 to 0. Spectacular fielding by Whitted and Bancroft, recent additions to the visitors' ranks, aided materially in their success. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Philadelphia .....10000101—3 | 5 | 0 | |
| Boston .....00000000—0 | 6 | 0 | |

Batteries: Alexander and Killifer; Rudolph and Gowdy.

BROOKLYN WAS SLAUGHTERED.

NEW YORK, April 14.—The New York Nationals opened their championship season here to-day with an easy victory over Brooklyn, the Giants winning by a score of 16 to 3. McGraw's team got off to an early lead by hammering Pfeffer for seven runs in the first and second innings. Schmuts stopped New York for a few innings, but in the sixth inning the home team piled up five more runs on four doubles, a single, a steal and an error. Brown, who finished, was even less effective.

Doyle, up five times, hit two doubles and three singles, and scored four runs. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Brooklyn .....003000000— | 3 | 6 | 3 |
| New York .....43000631x—16 | 18 | 1 | |

Batteries: Pfeffer, Schmuts, Brown and McCarty; Tearcau and Meyers, Smith.

CUBS OUTPLAYED CARDS.

CHICAGO, April 14.—Speedy base running and St. Louis' numerous errors gave Chicago so many runs that Vaughn's pitching task was easy, and the opening game of the season went to the locals by 7 to 2. Not until the eighth inning did Vaughn permit a visitor to reach third base. He struck out eight. Sallee was poorly supported, and triples by Fisher and Saier and a double by Archer helped in the rout of the Cardinals. Long's three-base hit was the main factor in scoring the St. Louis runs. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| St. Louis .....000000020— | 2 | 8 | 6 |
| Chicago .....03021100x—7 | 11 | 2 | |

Batteries: Sallee, Butter, Niehaus and Snyder, Glenn; Vaughn and Archer.

WAS EASY FOR THE PIRATES.

CINCINNATI, April 14.—Pittsburg made a runaway event of the opener here to-day, winning from the Cincinnati team by 9 to 2. Finding Ames' curves to their liking, the Pirates started their run-getting in the second, sent Ames to the bench by scoring three runs more in the fourth, and pounded Schneider in the final two innings. Hinchman, the Pittsburg's right fielder, made three hits, one a triple, scored two runs, and his hitting was responsible for several other Pittsburg tallies. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pittsburg .....010300014—9 | 10 | 1 | |
| Cincinnati .....000010001—2 | 8 | 4 | |

Crowds Cheer "Jess" Willard in Vaudeville

They are paying "Jess" Willard $4,000 a week and a percentage of the receipts at Hammerstein's Victoria this week. The heavyweight champion of the world began an engagement there and may be seen afternoon and evening by those who felt a thrill when the news came from Havana that Willard had landed a knockout blow to "Jack" Johnson's chin and the big negro had taken the count.

In front of the theatre is the electric sign which says "Welcome, Jack Willard." It was an expression quite sincere from the management, because the theatre in the afternoon and again at night was packed. And in West Forty-second street stood another crowd eager to get a glimpse of the champion without troubling themselves about paying.

"Loney" Haskell introduced the lightweight champion. "Freddie" Welch, who carried a checked cup in his hand and looked as if he needed a shave.

Then the American lightweight champion, "Willie" Ritchie. "Bob" Vernon, stake holder of the Havana fight, was next, looking prosperous in new gray spats and a broad grin. He was followed by "Jack" Curley, the promoter. Then came "Tom" Jones, Willard's manager, and "Jack" Temple and Walter Moynihan, the champion's sparring partners. The last two were in fighting costume.

No one else but the door keeper remained back of the scenes to be introduced. Willard jumped on the stage. He was greeted by cheers and whistling. He was dressed in fighting trunks over a light baby blue training suit. He looked all of his six feet six.

His speech follows:

"Ladies and Gentlemen:—Thanks for your kind reception. I'm not a speech-maker but a prizefighter."

He did some light exercising, shadow boxing and medicine ball catching with his sparring partners. He concluded with an exhibition of his famous "punches," illustrating the blow that, in the language of Mr. Haskell, "brought the championship back to the white race."

Ottawas To Train At Chatham

CHATHAM, April 12—The Ottawa Canadian League team will train in Chatham this year, and twenty-two members will comprise the squad, which will reach here early in May. They will be quartered at the Hotel Sanita. The diamond on Tecumseh Park will be prepared for training purposes.

There will likely be a number of new faces in the squad this year, Bullock, Lage and Rogers are not expected to be on the team, and some other members are also expected to be missing.

EXCELSIORS WIN THE CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE Y. BASKETBALL LEAGUE

The Excelsior basketball team last night won the right to be called the champions of the Y.M.C.A. League, which has just finished a most successful season. The Excelsiors have played like pennant winners from the start, and have only lost one game during the series. This was at the hands of the Unknowns, and by only one point. Last night they stocked up against the Collegiate team, who were the winners of B division, but the students were out-classed from start to finish. For the first half the Collegiate succeeded in holding the top-notch boys down to 16 points, but they didn't have the scoring ability of their opponents and its getting baskets that wins games. The first half ended with Excelsiors leading 18-6. In the second half they walked right away and won 39-18. Knapman and Long played their usual good game at forward, and scored most of the points for their team. Stuart held his pivot position in grand style, while Darling and Hamilton are simply cast iron defence men.

For the Collegiate Canniff did most of the scoring. Jobbitt usually takes a big share in this, but last night his check watched him too close. Lewis and Eastwood worked hard and consistently, but they couldn't stop the speedy Excelsior forwards. Austin and G. Green both filled in at forward for Collegiate, and both worked hard while they were in the game. The Collegiate put up a good game, but were out-classed. The teams:

Collegiate—Green, Austin, Canniff, Jobbitt, Eastwood, Lewis.

Excelsiors — Knapman, Long, Stuart, Darling, Hamilton.

Referee—Dobbin.

Timer—Carson.

Scorer—Smythe.

As an opener for the Excelsior-Collegiate game, the Veterans and Cressmans put on a most interesting and hair-raising game. It was a game replete with sensations and thrills, and the first half ended with the score standing 14-14. The second half was nip and tuck, first one leading, then the other. When the final whistle blew the score stood 28 all, which necessitated overtime. In about two minutes' play the Veterans succeeded in caging a basket, making the score 34-32. The Veterans showed last night that they were just as good as ever, and can hold up their end with the best of them. They will meet the Excelsiors next Wednesday night for the championship of the city.

The apectatirs thought that the eighth wonder of the world had been found when Fred Cressman started and caged the ball from the length of the gym. Fred looked a bit surprised himself, for as a rule he is not a long range man, and Ross Dobbin was there with his aeroplane twist on the ball that makes it ascend into the beams and then naturally drop through the ring. But with all this it was one of the finest games to watch seen in the gym this year. It was close right through.

Saturday night's boute will be a great game. Both teams are confident of the outcome, and both will work hard to win. A great treat is in store for the fans on April 31st. Last night's line-up:

Cressmans—F. Cressman, H. Long, Smythe, Palmer, Horsfield.

Veterans—Best, Dobbin, Richardson, McCarrell, Robertson.

Referee—Carson.

Timer—Grandy.

Scorer—Jones.

A Scots Guardsman's Protest

A private in the Scots Guards, who cultivates the poetic habit with his soldiering, writes to "Gossip and Grumbles": "We Scots here in London are sick unto death reading in the papers about 'England' this and 'England' that I have been requested by the men of the Scots Guards, as well as by a few Scottish friends in London, to hand you the accompanying protest in the hope that you will help us to make a stand for puir auld Scotia's rights":

Still England.

The "English" Navy in its might,
Is out upon the main;
The "English" Army, some in kilts—
Is at the front again;
The dogs of war are loosened
And gathered to the fray,
But the British ships and British troops,
I wonder where are they.

'Twas England that declared the war
And "she" will see it through—
How kind she is to Britain,
Doing all there is to do.
We Scots and Irish do not count,
We're nothing in the scale;
I wonder, if the Scotsmen fled,
Would England have turned tail.

England will stand by Belgium,
And France, and Russia, too;
But English papers never say
What Britain means to do.
For treaty obligations,
We are told that England fights;
Yet our country's name is Britain,
We all know by treaty rights.

When blood has flowed like water,
And, 'midst the heaps of slain,
Lie brawny Scot, and stalwart Celt,
Who vict'ry helpec to gain—
The glory will be England's,
Like every other thing;
'Tis "England" this and "England" that,
Flag, Navy, Army, King!

Still let Scots do their duty—
In Britain's day of war;
A greater cause than "England's"
Nerve Scottish hearts by far.
For Britain, and the Empire,
We Scotsmen drew the sword,
And, not like hired mercenaries,
As if "England" was our lord.

Chases Shells To Show Ruins

Famous Photographer on Job Soon After German Missiles Fall

LONDON, April 15.—Christopher Pilkington is making an official regimental record of the doings of the Scots Guards at the front. Armed with a camera he has permission to go anywhere and photograph anything.

Lecturing before the Selborne Society, Mr. Pilkington's descriptions of the terrible fighting round Ypres were full of the realism possible only from a man who had lived with the soldiers as one of them.

Of the 1,000 men who left the Tower with him on Sept. 15 only 100 now remain and of the officers there is a remnant of two.

IN THICK OF GERMAN FIRE.

Round about Ypres the Seventh Division got into the thick of the German guns. "You continually heard men who had been through Indian campaigns and South Africa say that what they had been through before was an absolute picnic compared to what they had to put up with from the Germans." The battle of Ypres, which lasted for weeks and is not over yet, was for Mr. Pilkington a time of cycling about with his camera, usually under shell fire, taking extraordinary pictures of smashed up houses and anything particularly exciting that happened.

Mr. Pilkington was so near the actual thing that he would see a shell fall into a house full of sleeping soldiers, and a few minutes afterward would rush in with his camera and take a photograph of the horrible mess inside. He said that after a time men became indifferent about the shells, and he showed a photograph of some transport drivers calmly gazing round to see exactly where the shells were going to fall and if it was time to move on.

ON RUINS EARLY.

"Custom becomes, as it were, another nature." People seem to hate been living much as usual in the houses on the Meuin Road during this terrible time, and ten minutes after a shell had wrecked a house Mr. Pilkington photographed people hunting for souvenirs. One thing that astonished him was the sight of some children playing with tops on a doorstep in one of the hottest places.

He photographed a soldier having his hair cut by a comrade with shells falling all around at a spot christened by the soldiers "Hell Corner." He saw the French burying their dead in layers in a big hole made by a Jack Johnson. "They were like herrings in a barrel." He insisted that there is nothing picturesque to be seen, and his photograph of a line of guardsmen advancing to the attack showed nothing but a few blobs of khaki in a muddy field.

GIANTS WORKED A REVERSE STEAL

In a recent game with the University of Tennessee nine at Knoxville, the Giants worked a reverse double steal.

During the progress of the game, when Thorpe was on third and Smith on second, a reverse double steal was staged, Smith bolting for first and Thorpe scampering back to second, much to the delight of the crowd and the chagrin of the college players, who realized they were being toyed with by their more experienced players. This burlesque play just about explains the entire game, as the Giants won as they pleased and under double wraps.

JOE JACKSON HAS NERVOUS COLLAPSE

COLUMBUS, O., April 13. — Joe Jackson has suffered a nervous collapse as the result of his family troubles. Within the last ten days he has lost fifteen or twenty pounds in weight as the result of not eating and brooding over his troubles.

In an effort to get in shape after his lay off of nearly two weeks he worked throughout Saturday's game and looked like the same old Joe. Twice he sent Mensor back to the left field fence to capture his long drives. He got a single and a triple, his other two times up and stole third base.

As soon as the game was over, though, he went to bed, being unable to eat. He was feeling somewhat better yesterday and said he would play as Manager Birmingham had allowed Leibold and Graney to go home to Detroit and St. Thomas.

BULLOCK AND LAGE NOT WITH OTTAWA

Shaughnessy stated yesterday that Bullock and Lage would not be seen in an Ottawa uniform this year. "I wrote both players to the effect that I would not bring them back," stated the Ottawa manager, "and I told them to go ahead and make a deal [illegible] may go to St. Thomas if we can arrange a deal, while Lage may ultimately be seen in a Hamilton uniform. Both men will be replaced on the local team.

Manager Cristal of the Hamilton team, is anxious to sell "Red" Fisher to the Senators. Shag may obtain the big fellow if satisfactory arrangements can be made. When the Ottawa get out on the diamond at Chatham around May 10th, there will be lots of new material anxious to try for places. Lage, Bullock, Rogers, Nill and one or two others will be missing from the squad, however.—Ottawa Journal.

GRAHAM—HAVERY.
DAVIS—HAVERY.

A quiet but pretty double wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. A. Havery, 471 Albert Street, at 6 p.m., April 14th, when her two daughters, Jessie and Christina, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Wilbert Graham, of Lindsay, and Geo. W. Davis, of this city. Rev. J. A. McKenzie, of Knox Church, officiated. Owing to recent bereavement in the brides' family, the wedding was of a quiet nature.

The brides were beautifully attired in ivory duchess satin with shadow lace trimming, and entered the parlour to the strains of Lohengrin's "Wedding March," played by Miss Lottie Chiles of this city.

The presents, including a cheque from Matthews-Blackwell Co. and a handsome Morris chair from the staff and drivers of the Matthews-Blackwell George Street store, with whom Miss Jessie had been employed for a number of years, also costly presents from Mr. A. E. Micks, with whom Miss Christina had been employed, and a beautiful silver sugar and cream set to Mr. Davis from the Letter Carriers' Association and numerous other presents, not only costly, but very useful, bore testimony to their popularity among their many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham left amid showers of best wishes for Toronto, Galt, and points west, and on their return will reside on King Street, Lindsay, and Mr. and Mrs. Davis at 585 Sherbrooke Street of this city.

EVA MAY CHOATE.

Napanee Beaver: At her home, Woodville, on March 19th, 1915, there passed peacefully away, Eva May, the seventeen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Choate, of congestion of the lungs. All that loving kindness and best medical skill could do could not keep little Eva. She was stricken with infantile paralysis when a child. She will be greatly missed by her sorrowing parents and one sister, Lillian. The funeral which was held on Monday, proceeded to Smith's cemetery, followed by a long cortege of sympathetic friends and neighbours.

We had our darling, Eva,
We cannot see her now,
As she lives in a snowy garden
With glory on her brow.

For God in His wisdom hath recalled
The boon His love had given,
And though her body slumbers here,
Her soul is safe in Heaven.
—Mother.

Vote Will Be Very Small

Less Than Half the Number of Qualified Voters Exercise Their Franchise

The bye-election in the North Ward attracted little attention today and if the vote that was cast up until noon is any criterion, there will be less than five hundred votes polled.

At noon to-day the vote stood as follows in the four subdivisions named:

| | Votes Polled. | Possible Votes. |
|---|---|---|
| Braunds' store | 54 | 270 |
| Lee's House | 63 | 272 |
| Hooper's store | 32 | 260 |
| Cock's store | 44 | 210 |
| Total | 193 | 1002 |

There are five sub-divisions altogether. The one not included in the above list is Doody's shop, located at 51 Park Street.

The result will be bulletined this evening shortly after 5 o'clock.

INVALIDED BELGIAN IS A SPY

PARIS, April 16.—An invalided Belgian Grenadier, giving the name of Pierre Daeyens, has been arrested by the police of Paris on the charge of wearing the uniform of the French army and a French military medal without authority. The man is believed to be a dangerous spy. After his arrest enquiries were made, with the result that the examining magistrate altered the charge against him to one of espionage. The identity of Daeyens is something of a mystery. He is found to have travelled recently in the regions around Nancy and Pont-a-Mousson. He also visited the principal naval stations, where he tried to establish relations with soldiers and sailors. Louis Petitalo, a sailor on a French submarine at Cherbourg, has declared that he recognizes in Daeyens a Belgian Grenadier who offered to guide a party of French blue jackets during the fighting at Dixmude and then led them into an ambush.

The police are of the opinion that he is a German who enlisted in the Belgian army for purposes of espionage.

SOAP IS BAD FOR THE HAIR

Soap should be used very sparingly, if at all, if you want to keep your hair looking at its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), it's cheaper and better than soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

ZEPPELIN RAID ON LONDON EXPECTED BEFORE MANY HOURS

GERMANS RENEW OSSOWETZ BOMBARDMENT

A WOMAN AND GIRL INJURED $150,000 DAMAGE

Result of Second Zeppelin Raid Over Essex and Suffolk Early To-day—Twelve Cities and Towns Within a Radius of 70 Miles of London Visited.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, April 16.—(Special cable.)—London expects a great Zeppelin raid before many hours. Flying corps commanders were summoned to the Admiralty early to-day for a conference on defence. Special constables were asked to go on patrol duty at the outskirts of the city at dusk to-night. The authorities were busy making final preparations to beat off attacks from the skies. Two and possibly three Zeppelins participated in a raid over Essex and Suffolk early to-day, in which a woman and a girl were injured and property damage estimated at $150,000 was done. One of the sky monsters crossed the Thames eleven miles from London, acording to an official report to the Admiralty to-day. The Admiralty is convinced that airships were reconnoitring and picking the best route for a raid on the British capital. Twelve cities and towns within a radius of seventy miles of London were visited by the Zeppelins. Six of them were bombarded by explosive and incendiary shells. Three bombs were dropped near the Henham Hall residence of the Earl and Countess of Stradbroke, near Southwold. Henham Hall had been converted into a hospital for the British wounded. The bombs exploded with sharp crashes within 50 yars of the building, but did no damage.

The greatest destruction was done at Lowestoft, 180 miles north-east of London on the seacoast. A big timber yard was fired by an incendiary bomb and burned for nine hours. The blaze threatened to spread to other buildings. The loss was estimated at $100,000.

Each of the Zeppelin raiders appeared off the coast at about the same hour, according to information received here to-day. The first was reported approaching Harwich, in Essex, 64 miles north-east of London.

The airship passed over Harwich, Felixstowe and Ipswich without dropping any bombs, but descending so low that the whirr of the propellers was plainly heard. An hour later Southwold reported that a Zeppelin hovered over the city for half an hour, bombarding the residence of the Earl of Stradbroke. Before leaving the airship's crew threw a bomb that destroyed a railway car. The same dirigible apparently flew over Lowestoft, dropping three bombs. One damagedand the other killed three horses and a house, injuring a woman occupant, a third set fire to the lumber yards, partially wrecked a railway shed and when one girl was slightly injured. Maldon was subjected to a terrible bombardment from a second Zeppelin.

Clacton-on-Sea, 60 miles east north-east of London reported sighting a Zeppelin moving southward along the coast line, disappearing over the Thames Estuary.

SPIES TRIED TO BURN DOWN PORTSMOUTH DOCKYARDS

LONDON, April 16.—There was a rumour in London the night of January 31 that a serious fire had broken out in the big Government dockyards at Portsmouth; but the censor eliminated all mention of the matter from press despatches.

It now appears that the fire was of a very serious character, and came near wiping out the docks and other valuable properties at Portsmouth. The real extent of the damage is still unknown. It is the common belief in official circles that the fire was the work of incendiaries, presumably German spies.

To-day a carefully worded notice was issued by the dockyard authorities, offering a reward of $500 "for the discovery of the incendiaries responsible for the fire at the building slip sheds the night of January 31."

Has Returned From Louvain

MONTREAL, April 16. — Twice stood against a wall to be shot was the experience of Professor H. Nagan, of the Oka College, while he was in Belgium. He is back safe at the college again.

Prof. Nagan left Canada last spring to spend a few months at the University of Louvain. He was still in the city when the German invaders arrived. With other citizens he was placed against a wall to be shot. After he had been in that position some time the Germans changed their minds and decided to let the party live. Later in the day death in the same manner, was threatened again, but a second time something happened to prevent the carrying out of the execution. Then the whole party, with other civilians, was driven off to Germany. He was confined there for several months, then he was released and sent out of the country.

Champlain, the First White Man to Set Foot In This District

The great Champlain Tercentenary celebrated at Quebec in 1908 was a fitting tribute to the work of that illustrious French explorer, Samuel de Champlain, and the citizens of Peterborough would be remiss in their duty if they did not recognise in some way the fact that this noble man was the first white person to set foot in this district. Besides keeping alive a spiri of pride in our local institutions it would foster the study of things historical, especially among the younger members of the community.

If nothing more pretentious were forthcoming, a brass tablet, bearing a suitable inscription, might be placed in the Public Library to the memory of a man who did more for the aborigines of this country than any other man, and who, at the same time, laid strong foundations for the development of the newly discovered territory.

Champlain was a great humanitarian, and his thoughts ever went out to the savage people who, in turn, came to rely upon him for instruction. How keen was his interest in the Indians, and how sincere was his desire to do them good, both physically and spiritually, may be gathered from his journal.

So implicitly did they trust him, an so anxious were they to learn more of the marvellous things he related regarding the improvement of their life that they invited him and his people to come and live among them.

"Bring your wives and children," said they, "and when they are here, we shall see how you serve the God you worship, and how you live with your wives and children, how you prepare and plant the soil, how you obey your laws, how you take care of your animals, and how you manufacture all that we see proceeding from your inventive skill. When we see all this we shall learn more in a year than in twenty by simply hearing your discourse, and thus being convinced that our life is a miserable one in comparison with yours, it is easy to believe that we shall adopt yours, abandoning our own."

It is also well to remember that Champlain was the first white man to navigate the great Trent waterway, which, of itself, would be a fact worth commemorating.

RUSSIANS ON OFFENSIVE ON BANK OF VISTULA

Are Advancing All Along the Vistula—Seize Village on Bzira —Czars Forces Are Also Active in the Region South of Mlawa.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, April 16.—While the Russian forces in the Carpathians continue to make steady, if slow, progress in conquering the many fortified heights surrounding the Uszok Pass and delaying the avasion of the Hungarian plain, a recrudescence of activity at a number of points on the battle front in Poland is announced in the official statement received last night from Petrograd.

The Germans have renewed the bombardment of Ossowetz with considerable vigor, but, according to the Russian report, with no more effect than characterized their futile operations against the fortress in previous weeks. On the other hand, the Russians have assumed the offensive on both banks of the lower Vistula, where almost complete calm had prevailed since the break-up of winter, when thaws made the roads impassable. That this section of the war theatre is again in condition for large operations is apparently indicated by the Petrograd report, which states that Russian troops have made progress in the direction of Mlawa, on the right bank of the Vistula, while on the left bank they have advanced and captured a village in the region of Sochaczew, near the mouth of the Bzura, and the scene of Gen. von Hindneburg's great drive against Warsaw defences last year.

THE CARPATHIAN SITUATION.

Of the situation in the Carpathians the latest Russian report says little. It records, however, further progress in the fighting on the heights above Uszok, where the Russians have gained some further ground and taken a handful of prisoners. The correspondent of the Daily News, Frederick Rennet, telegraphs in greater detail of the fighting. He says:

"General Litzinger's army delivered a tremendous counter-attack against the Russian left wing in the Carpathians yesterday. A large force of picked Bavarian infantry attempted to storm the Russian hill positions south of Koziomoka, dominating the Munkocs Road. The Russians advanced from their trenches and met the attack half way. A fierce bayonet battle continued until after dark in the slippery hills. The Germans were driven southeast with terrible losses, and the Russians moved forward their general position here.

"A similar attempt made by the Austrians in the extreme east was immediately crushed. Continuous heavy battles are now raging from Uszok westward, and the Russian columns are beating the enemy back from the southern fringe of the Carpathians to the plateau, where cultivation is beginning."

HISTORIC MEETING AT SIGN OF FLEMISH LION.—King Albert of Belgium and General Joffre meeting in a little town behind the firing line. Appropriately enough the building in background is a roadside inn, the sign on which reads (At the Sign of the Flemish Lion.)

THE RUSSIAN HORDES NOW INVADING HUNGARY.—(1) Russians advanced on both sides of the Ondava River from Stropko; (2) They gained victory near Uzsok Pass; (3) Enemy repulsed with great loss; (4) Enemy delivered furious attacks during torrential storm, but driven back with bayonet.

Bombs Dropped On Buildings

Housing Kaiser's Leading Generals —Are Located Near Sedan

PARIS, April 16—A notable feature of the operations yesterday was the bombardment by French aviators of several towns occupied by the Germans. One aviator flew over the German lines at the centre of the line and hurled five bombs on the buildings occupied by the Imperial general staff at Charleville and Mezieres. These towns, where for the first time the headquarters of the German great general staff has been definitely located, are adjoining fortified towns on the Meuse, in the Department of Ardennes, about 15 miles below Sedan. This position is some ten miles south of the Franco-Belgian frontier and 35 miles north of the German battle line in the Argonne. All the projectiles hit the buildings housing the general staff, according to the official report, which states that the aircraft visit was in the nature of a reprisal for the bombardment of Nancy by a Zeppelin.

Ostend Bombarded.

It is also announced that a squadron of 15 aeroplanes threw bombs successfully on the military buildings of the Germans at Ostend. The machines were subjected to a violent cannonading but all returned intact.

Severe fighting in the operations against the St. Mihiel salient is also reported in the official communique issued at 11 o'clock last night.

At Les Eparges the Germans delivered three counter-attacks during the night from Wednesday to Thursday in an attempt to retake the eastern salient. He was repulsed with heavy losses. The enemy resumed the bombardment of the position at noon, but delivered no infantry attack.

German artillery stationed near Bethune, France, is reported to have shelled a Belgian ambulance yesterday, killing three wounded Belgians and six wounded German prisoners.

6,000 Wounded Hear Concert.

The most noted musical artists of Paris gave a concert yesterday afternoon in the Trocadero to 6,000 wounded. The general public was not admitted.

A hundred ambulances conveyed those of the wounded unable to walk to the theatre, though hardly any of the audience was unable to stand when Marthe Chenal sang "The Marseillaise." Anna Held won great applause with "Tipperary."

GERMANS' TYPHUS TRAINS.

Transport Fever Victims from Eastern Front—Vermin Spread Plague.

BASLE, Switzerland, April 14. — The Germans are transporting typhus patients from the east in specially equipped hospital trains. Each train consists of twelve hospital cars and one disinfecting car, the latter marked "infectious" in huge letters. The attendants and train crew wear special cloaks, which are disinfected frequently.

The first symptoms of the malady are small red spots, which cover the body, and a high fever. The plague appears to be spread by vermin which crawl from the sick to the well.

"THE GRELL MYSTERY"

By Frank Froest

The superintendent did as he was requested and Grell puffed luxuriously. Foyle remained silent. Although he was aching to put questions he dared not. "Do you really think that I killed Harry Goldenburg?" asked Grell suddenly.

"I don't know," confessed the superintendent non-committally. "I think you may have."

"Yes. That's a pity," said Grell, lifting his cigar to his mouth. "This affair must have cost you a great deal of trouble, Mr. Foyle. And it's all wasted, because, of course, I had nothing to do with it."

"I want to know," said Foyle, a bit of American vernacular that came from his lips unconsciously.

"Tell me why you never announced that I was alive?" asked Grell. "You'll have to do it, you know."

"Well, there's no harm in admitting now that one idea was to make you think that we were deceived, and so to throw you off your guard."

"And it did until you got hold of Ivan. Well, you've made a mistake this time, Mr. Foyle. There were finger-prints on the dagger with which Goldenburg was killed, eh?"

Foyle inclined his head. His blue eyes were alight with interest which he made no effort to conceal. He half guessed what was coming, but he found Grell's ways disconcerting and could form no certain judgment. Certainly Grell did not behave like a guilty man—that is, a man guilty of murder. But neither did he behave like an innocent man. He was too totally unconcerned with the gravity of his position.

"Yes, there were finger-prints," he said. "I have a photograph of them in my pocket if you would like them compared now."

"With mine? That's what I was about to suggest. You'll find some writing-paper and ink in the desk behind you. I suppose they will do."

The prisoner smiled as he saw Foyle carefully shift his chair to guard against any sudden rush, before turning his back. He was a moment preparing the materials and then placed a blank sheet of paper on a little table in front of Grell. "Will you kindly hold out your hands?" he said. As Grell did so he smeared the tips of the fingers of the right hand with ink. "Now press your fingers lightly but firmly on the paper. Thank you."

He brought a little standard lamp closer, and under its rays studied the two sets of prints closely. He did not need a magnifying-glass to see that none of Grell's finger-marks agreed with the two that were clear on the dagger. Grell leaned back in his chair as though the matter were one of complete indifference to him.

"Does that satisfy you, Mr. Foyle?" he asked at last.

The superintendent nodded as their eyes met. "It satisfies me that you did not actually kill the man," he said steadily. "I'll own I'm not surprised at that. I believe if you had killed him you would have been man enough to have stayed and faced the consequences. You will observe that I have not formally arrested you yet. But I do believe that you know all about the crime—that you were perhaps an eye-witness."

For the first time during the interview Robert Grell lost hold of his self-control. His fists clenched and the steel of the handcuffs bit deep into his wrists as he momentarily forgot that he was handcuffed. There was a meaning in Foyle's tone that he could not fail to understand. He caught at his breath once or twice and his temples flamed scarlet.

"Speak plainly now!" he cried hoarsely. "What are you hinting at?"

Slowly Heldon Foyle began to tear the sheet of paper bearing Grell's finger-marks into minute fragments. He was calm, inscrutable. "I thought I made myself clear," he replied. "To make it plainer I will ask you if a man, famous, rich, and with an honourable reputation, flies on the eve of his wedding-day, assisted by his valet, hides himself in a low part of London, and associates with doubtful characters, whose friends abduct and drug police officers, who uses, in short, every effort to avoid or to hamper justice—has not some strong reason for his actions? Is it not plausible to suppose that he is an accessory either before or after the fact?"

Grell sighed as if in relief, and, stooping, picked up his cigar, which had fallen on the carpet. He had recovered his calm. "You are a better judge of evidence than I am," he said unemotionally. "Personally, I don't think the facts you have mentioned would convict me of anything but eccentricity. Who is this Harry Goldenburg, anyway? Beyond the fact that he's my double I know nothing of him. That's certainly a coincidence, but why on earth I should conceal anything I know is beyond me."

"You're talking nonsense, Mr. Grell, and you know it," said Foyle, with a weary little gesture. "There's too much to be explained away by coincidence. We know who Harry Goldenburg was, and that there was a strong motive for your wishing him out of the way." He leaned over a little table and his face was close to Grell's. "You can only delay, you cannot prevent justice by keeping your mouth shut."

The firm lines of Grell's month grew obstinate. "I shall stick to my story," he said. And then, with a return to his former flippancy of manner, "You're a clever man, Mr. Foyle. I never realised till you and your men were on my heels how hard a time a professional criminal must have. Even now I am not clear how you knew I was down here. When I found the police in charge of the motor car I had left I thought they were merely guarding it as a derelict. I did not guess that you know I had escaped from London in it."

"A mere question of organisation," said Foyle. "As a matter of fact, we know most of your movements from the time you left Sir Ralph Fairfield's flat to the moment you separated from Lady Eileen at Kingston. By the way, she made some money over to you. You may care to know that that was got by forgery."

Surprise had leapt into Grell's face as the superintendent drily recounted his movements. It was succeeded by a flash of fury at the last words. "Be careful, sir," he said tensely. "You need not lie to me."

"It is the simple truth. Lady Eileen got a note from you asking for money. She had none, and her father was out, so she signed a cheque in his name and cashed it personally."

Grell's face had become grey and he buried it in his hands. His shoulders shook and Foyle could understand how hardly he had been hit. To have had to appeal to the girl for assistance was bad enough. To find that she had committed a crime to help him was to add an anguish to his feelings that he had not known before. Somewhere in the house a clock struck midnight, the slow, deep strokes reverberating heavily.

"She did that—for me!" said Grell, lifting his head, haggard and wan. Then, as a thought occurred to him, "She is not under arrest?"

"No. I had her word that she would inform her father."

Grell made no answer. He stared moodily in front of him. The superintendent had no desire to break in on his reverie. He walked across the room, picked up a magazine, and sat down, again facing his prisoner, while he idly turned over the pages. Presently Grell's head drooped forward. He was asleep.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

The hour dragged wearily with Foyle. The soft breathing of the sleeping man as he rested with his head pillowed on his arms was the only sound that broke the stillness of the night. The superintendent himself dared not sleep. He tried to read, but the magazines failed to interest him. He got up and quietly strolled about the room, examining the bookcases with incurious interest.

His thoughts were busy. Apart from all the other facts, Grell's manner was more than sufficient confirmation of the fact that he was holding something back—something vital to the success of the investigation. The superintendent had a very shrewd idea of his seasons. Grell was a strong man—a man likely to hold to his own line at all costs. He had already proved that no personal considerations would move him.

The superintendent reviewed the situation impartially, his brow furrowed, his lips tight pressed together. He was as certain as though he held the other's signed confession that Robert Grell had it in his power to say who killed Goldenburg. How would he break through his silence? For, come what might, he felt that Grell's place was rather in the witness-box than in the dock. That he preferred the dock was proof of the strength of the motive which actuated him. No amount of persuasion, Foyle knew, would make him open his lips. Disgrace by the fear of a public trial had failed to move him. If he was to be induced to tell his secret it must be by strategy.

Heldon Foyle held his own code of ethics in his profession. In his own mind he held that all things which were legal were permissible in facilitating the ends of justice. Grell could, if he were so minded, give sworn evidence on what Foyle could only suspect. Grimly the superintendent resolved that in a contest of will he would win.

A gentle tap at the door broke his train of reflection, and the white face of the housekeeper peered in. Her eyes rested first on the sleeping man, but his attitude concealed the handcuffs. She turned a half-frightened glance on Foyle.

"Excuse me, sir. I couldn't sleep, so I dressed, and thought I would look in to see if Mr. Grell or you would like anything. Perhaps a cup of coffee——"

"No, thank you," said the superintendent. "By the way, now you're here, you'll perhaps tell me whether you expected Mr. Grell's arrival. Didn't you think he was dead?"

She advanced a little into the room, closing the door behind her. "That I did, sir," she answered timorously. "I couldn't make it out when I got his telegram from Liverpool. It gave me a shock."

"From Liverpool?" repeated Foyle slowly. "So he sent a wire from Liverpool, did he? Would you mind if I had a look at it?"

He could see the hesitation in her face and went on: "See here, Mrs. Ellis, there has been a murder, though fortunately Mr. Grell was not the victim. I am interested in the matter, and you will be acting in his interests if you show me the message."

"I don't know what to do, I'm sure," quavered the woman irresolutely. "I was supposed to have burnt it. Hadn't I better wake him up, and then he can let you look if he likes?"

A strong hand pushed her back as she would have endeavoured to rouse Grell. "I shouldn't worry him if I were you," said Foyle. "You may take it that I have a right to see that message."

He spoke authoritatively. Her hand fumbled beneath her apron and she produced a buff-coloured envelope. The detective took out and unfolded the wire. He read—

"Mrs. Ellis, Dalehurst Grange, Dalehurst.—There has been mistake of identity. Am safe and well. Shall be down this evening, but time uncertain. Please have room ready. Let no one know you have heard from me. Burn this.—R.G."

The detective refolded the telegram and placed it in his waistcoat pocket. His mind dwelt more on the significance of its despatch from Liverpool than on the message itself. The Princess had been at Liverpool. It was a plausible presumption that she had sent the wire and that she therefore must have been in touch with Grell.

"Yes, I guess you must have been a bit startled when you got that," he said. "Did Mr. Grell give any explanation when he came?"

HAD DYSPEPSIA

So Bad Could Not Take a Drink of Water Without Suffering.

Dyspepsia is one of the most difficult diseases of the stomach there is to cure. You eat too much. Drink too much. Use too much tobacco. You make the stomach work overtime. You make it perform more than it should be called on to do. The natural result is that it is going to rebel against the amount of work put on it. It is only a matter of a short time before dyspepsia follows.

That old, forty year old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, will cure the dyspepsia and will cure it to stay cured as we can prove by the thousands of testimonials we have received from time to time.

Miss Sarah McRae, Newfield, Ont., writes: "I write to say that I have used your Burdock Blood Bitters, and have found it the best remedy I have ever used for dyspepsia. Two years ago, I had stomach trouble so bad that I could not even take a drink of water without suffering. I took six bottles of B.B.B., and have been entirely cured, and can now eat anything without any bad after effects."

Burdock Blood Bitters is an old and well tried remedy but on account of the many substitutes we would ask you to make sure that our name appears on both the label and wrapper as this preparation is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Getting Out of It

By EUNICE BLAKE

David Edgerton, a young American, was spending some time in an Italian city.

One day Edgerton was sitting on a bench in the park sucking the ivory head of his cane when a girl passed him with an older woman. The young lady was a beauty. Nearly all Italians are brunettes, but this young lady was one of the few blonds one sees in that country. It seemed to Edgerton that she had walked out of a painting of Titian's that he had seen at the Borghese palace in Rome. Her hair was light, tinged with gold; her eyes were the only feature in her face that were of the prevailing Italian kind, being a liquid brown.

It was evident from her appearance, from her dress and being attended by an older woman that the girl was of the higher class. There would be no such thing as scraping an acquaintance. Edgerton followed her with his eyes till she passed out of sight; then a man who had been sitting on an opposite side of the walk arose and, advancing toward him, raised his hat politely and said:

"Would signor like to make the acquaintance of the young lady who has just passed?"

"Most assuredly!"

"With a view to marriage?"

"Can I not make her acquaintance without marriage?"

"With what object? The young lady is of a marriageable age; her parents do not desire young men to be attentive to her except with a view to marriage. But we have a custom here by which you can be introduced to a lady with a view to marriage. If you do not care to complete the transaction you simply forfeit my fee—I am a marriage broker—and any other expenses that may accrue."

Edgerton was so desirous of seeing more of the beautiful Italian that he gave the broker an order to arrange a marriage between him and her at once. The man did not seem to hesitate at making the proposition, especially when Edgerton told him that he had an income of $10,000 a year. The man was somewhat disappointed that his client had no family crest, but thought the income would make up for this deficiency.

The introduction took place. Edgerton spoke very little Italian, and Signorina Conti spoke no English. But they managed to make themselves understood, and Edgerton enjoyed a very pleasant visit. Later the American was informed that his proposition was accepted.
